Young Brown entered a plea of guilty and was immediately sentenced to die in the electric chair May 20 by District Judge Charles Swindall.

The boy refused clemency offered if he would name his accomplices in the crime and Judge Swindall pronounced the death sentence after the youth's mother pleaded for the court's mercy on grounds that her son was not "mentally sound."

HOUSE REJECTS PLUMBING BILL

Memories of "Hooverizing" Cause Solons to Kill Proposal.

Uniform Regulation Plan Endorsed by Secretary of Commerce.

Resentment against Herbert Hoover's price fixing regulations during his regime as national food administrator in the World war still rankles in the breasts of Nebraska farmer legislators. That feeling flared up in the lower chamber Saturday afternoon and resulted in the killing of a bill to adopt uniform requirements for installation of plumbing in the smaller cities and villages of the state.

The aged soldier left a note asking that police kill Fritz and place the dog's body in a casket with him.

Officers, however, decided they just couldn't kill Fritz, and the dog, who to the last refused to leave his master's lifeless form, was finally persuaded away and was turned over to Victory post of the American Legion.

YOUTH STOPPED FROM 9-STORY LEAP TO DEATH

Cornhusker Bellboy Prevents Plunge by Chester Scott, 19.

BOY WRITES NOTE, THEN TAKES POISON

Returned to Local Sanatorium Where He Is Patient.

Chester Scott, 19, of Ravenna, attempted to take his life Saturday afternoon at the Cornhusker hotel. He drank an ounce of iodine and was preparing to jump from a ninth-story window when he was stopped by attaches of the hotel.

Due to a bellboy's speed in answering a call from Scott's room, the Ravenna youth is living today.

The bellboy, Al Carr, 941 North Thirty-third, entered Scott's room as the latter was standing before an opened window. Carr held Scott until help came. Ed Maroney, house detective at the hotel, said Scott drank about an ounce of iodine which he carried in his pocket. Doctors gave him medicines to counteract the effects of the poison.

Leaves Farewell Note.

Scott had written a brief note. "Goodbye folks Chester Scott". He made mention he had been at a hospital. The note was found on a table in his room. The youth had been a patient at the Dr. B. F. Bailey Sanatorium and had been improving. He went down town early in the afternoon, officials at Green Gables said.

The youth walked into the hotel at 2:30 p. m carrying no luggage. He asked for a room on a high floor, and was sent to No. 904. The desk clerk received a call from him at 4:45. Scott asked that a porter be sent to his room, and Carr arrived shortly afterwards.

Police were called and Detectives Meyer and Towle, and Mechanic James investigatd. Scott was returned to the Sanatorium in Castle, Roper and Matthews' ambulance.

SENATE WOULD SPEED SESSION

Will Take Initiative by Reporting Out Deficit Cleanup Bill.

Lack of Action in Lower House Causes Fear of Prolonging Work.

The fear of being forced to remain in Lincoln as late as the last week of April or even the first week in May, and the caterpillar speed of the house in approaching the major issue of appropriations, has forced the senate to abandon the role of a "lady in waiting" and assume the lead in wrestling with the state's financial problems.

Last week the senate threw a surprise into the representative camp by taking the question of cleaning up the deficit into its own hands. The committee on revenue and taxation sent the bill authorizing a one-mill levy for that purpose out on the floor. It has been made a special order of business for Monday afternoon, and it is likely that the whole matter will be settled so far as the senate is concerned that day or at least not later than Tuesday.

Senator Perry Reed, who, together with being chairman of the senate finance committee, is president pro tem of the upper branch, announced Saturday that his committee is nearly prepared now to pass on the general appropriation bills, if the house will only send them over.

The finance committee has been working for the last week on the governor's budget. The members of the committee have gone over the needs of the state institutions and have ideas fairly well fixed in their minds as to how much money those institutions will need as well

Train Finally Reaches Snow Marooned Town

Hundreds of cheering citizens greeted a work train on the Denver & Rio Grande railroad as it pulled into the station here early this evening—the first since February 15, when Silverton was cut off from outside by heavy falls of snows and snowslides.

Scores of workmen have been busy with snow shovels in the meantime, penetrating the barrier of ice and snow. Food supplies and mail have been brought in by messengers with sleds, travelling on skiis over the snow covered mountains.

BOARD DENIES HARRY STOUT COMMUTATION

Pardon Body Refuses to Cut Life Term For Murder of Wife.

OPPOSITION BY DEWITT PEOPLE

Action in Case of Willette Snook, Husband Slayer, Deferred.

Harry Stout's plea for commutation of the life sentence he is serving for the murder of his wife fourteen years ago has been denied by the state board of pardons and paroles.

The decision of the board was announced Saturday with a list of decisions in twenty-four other cases.

The board deferred action on the petition of Mrs. Willette Snook, Lincoln woman serving a ten-year sentence for killing her husband.

Opposition to Release.

Considerable opposition was raised by certain Saline county persons to commutation of Stout's sentence. Stout and his wife lived in DeWitt at the time of the murder. They had had domestic difficulties and on the day of the shooting Mrs. Stout and her sister came to Lincoln on a Burlington train. Stout was a passenger on the same train, and a quarrel developed during the trip. As the train drew into Lincoln Stout

ICE CAUSE OF MANY CRASHES

Cars Damaged But No One Hurt on Slippery Streets Saturday.

Saturday's snow and sleet caused a number of automobile collisions but no serious injuries.

Henry Schneider, manager of the Cleveland Rug factory, 505 A street, was bruised when his truck was struck by another at Eleventh and A streets at 3:30 p. m. Mr. Schneider was driving west on A street after having stopped for the arterial stop button when his car was struck by a Whitebreast Coal and Lumber company truck driven north by Clarence Gillam. Mr. Schneider's small truck was badly damaged.

Another truck owned by the Whitebreast Coal and Lumber company, driven by Henry Willadsen, 428 South Tenth, collided at 3:20 p. m. with a car driven by William Blecker, 1031 South Thirteenth, at Ninth and L streets. No one was injured. The drivers told police ice which covered the windshield obscured their view.

The same cause was attributed to a collision between cars driven by George Vogel, 2721 Franklin, and August Mielbrandt, 2016 South, at Eleventh and South streets. Vogel was driving east and Mielbrandt west, and the cars collided head-on at a jog in the street.

Three cars were damaged in a mix-up at Twenty-first and O streets. A car driven by Bert Smith, 1320 O street, traveling east, and another driven south by F. Preuss of College View, collided at the intersection and slid into a car parked at the curb, belonging to F. E. Roeder, 2902 Apple.

A front wheel and a spring were broken on a car driven by G. N. Anderson when it collided at Thirteenth and Q streets with another operated by Phillip Schaffer, 835 D street, according to police.

SHANGHAI FALL APPEARS LIKELY IN NEAR FUTURE

Sweeping Victory For Cantonese May Come Within Few Hours.

Rumble of Guns of Oncoming Army Heard in Chinese City.

SHANGHAI, March 19.—(I. N. S.)—The northern armies are in retreat, the rumble of the Cantonese guns is head in Shanghai tonight and a sweeping Cantonese victory appears to be but a matter of hours.

Shanghai and Nanking are rich prizes that seem destined to fall into the hands of the nationalists.

The Cantonese are reported between ten and twenty miles from Shanghai, with the northern armies offering practically no resistance to their advance.

In Nanking last reports said the Cantonese had captured the fortress commanding the south gates of the city and their occupation of the city was imminent.

Roads to the north of Shanghai are full of retreating disorderly northern soldiers, many of them looting as they go. Shanghai is filling with the defeated troops and confusion reigns in the suburbs of the city.

Routed Chinese soldiers pouring back from the front tell of what seems to be a general collapse of the northern forces in Soochow, it is reported almost no defense has been put up and the entry of the Cantonese is merely a matter of military movement.

Northern Line Broken.

From Sunkiang to Nankiang the northern line, which has held stiffly for several weeks, is now broken or breaking.

COLUMBIA, S. C., March 19.—(I. N. S.)—South Carolina observes its fourth "Blue Sunday" tomorrow.

Chances for a "normal" sabbath were dispelled today when Governor Richards announced he would not affix his signature to the blue law modification bill "until the last minute."

The ancient blue laws tomorrow will be enforced just as vigorously as heretofore, the governor said.

WOULD COMPEL COLLEGE STUDENTS WEAR UNIFORMS

ALBANY, N. Y., March 19.—(I. N. S.)—College students and pupils in public and private schools would be compelled to wear uniforms when attending classes under a bill being drafted today by Assemblyman Louis A. Cuvillier, New York, democrat.

"If all students and pupils were compelled to wear uniforms there would be less suicides in the schools and colleges," said Cuvillier. "Girls go to school these days wearing $1,000 fur coats and silks and satins, while the boys drive to school in expensive automobiles, wearing expensive clothes.

"I believe this has caused many students, who cannot afford these luxuries, to commit suicide."

ITALY SENDS MEMORANDA.

LONDON, March 20.—(Sunday)—(I. N. S.)—Dissensions in the Balkans, involving the possibility of an armed clash between Jugo-Slavia and Albania, took on a far-flung international aspect last night when Italy sent memoranda to London, Paris and Berlin, claiming Jugo-Slavia has mobilized an army and is abetting raiding forces over the Albanian frontier.

VIENNA, March 20. —(Sunday) —(U. P.) —Reports from Belgrade in the last few hours have cast a disturbing shadow over the Balkans.

Italy was said to have warned Jugo-Slavia that the latter's policy towards Albania could not continue without forcing Italy from her neutral position.

Foreign minister Ninko Peritch, of Jugo-Slavia, according to the Belgrade advices, informed both the British and Italian ministers that the Italian note of warning was based on misinformation, declaring that Jugo-Slavia has no intention of mixing in Albanian affairs.

"The misinformation" alleged by Peritch is believed to have refered to reports published in Italy Saturday that Jugo-Slavia was mobilizing along the Albanian frontier for war.

Belgrade advices further say that Foreign Minister Peritch is understood to have given the British minister there a note for transmission

Mayor is Unable To Stop Showing Motion Picture

BATAVIA, O., March 19. —(U. P.)— Faust and the devil won a victory tonight over J. L. Larkin, mayor.

The picture Faust, was shown in the opera house over the protest of Larkin to two capacity houses.

Three weeks ago the mayor said the picture could not be shown. He ordered removed billboards advertising the show and displaying likenesses of young women in various stages of undress.

The placards were folded away in a dark corner.

RELIEF RUSHED TO VICTIMS OF TWO TWISTERS

37 Dead, 200 Injured and 12 Missing After Twisters.

Martial Law Looms for Stricken Area in Arkansas.

EUREKA SPRINGS, Ark., March 19.—(INS)—The death list in Friday night's tornado that swept Green Forest and surrounding territory stood at sixteen tonight. Reports that twenty-two bodies had been found proved to be erroneous, due to duplications in compiling casualty lists.

Wire communication with the storm center had not been restored late tonight and it was because reports come both from Barryville and Eureka Springs that the erroneous report on the number of dead was sent out.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., March 19—(I. N. S.) —Arkansas was staggering tonight from the effects of two disastrous tornadoes which, within forty-eight hours, took a toll of thirty-seven lives at least, injured 200 and caused tremendous property damage. Twelve missing persons, sought amid wreckage, were feared dead.

Martial law loomed for the stricken area as members of the national guard gave aid in the disaster area at the request of Gov. John E. Martineau.

The latest storm, which struck last night, killed sixteen at Green Forest and nine at Denver. It followed a tornado Thursday night which took twelve lives near Benton.

Approximately 750 homes were wrecked at Green Forest and fire which followed threatened to wipe out the community. More than 100 persons were injured during the panic.

Bodies of the Green Forest dead were laid out in a church, converted into a temporary morgue. Many of the victims were too mangled to be identified.

Relief has been rushed to the stricken areas from Eureka Springs and other adjacent points.

Among the critically injured at Green Forest was W. R. Phillips, 85, former lieutenant- governor and state senator.

Denver is Isolated.

The tornado had its orgin along the Arkansas-Missouri line, it was said.

Partial telephone service was restored to Green Forest today, but Denver was still isolated.

M. R. Reddy, assistant national director of disaster relief for the Red Cross, was directing relief work.

Other storm damage was reported as follows:

Hokenwald, Tenn., 100 houses unroffed and a serious flood menace.

Cayce, Ky., two churches blown down. No casualties reported.

Paris, Ark., fifty houses unroofed; one foot of water in the streets.

Paragould, Ark., cloudburst marooned seventy-five persons who were subsequently rescued. Train service halted by washouts.

Jonesboro, Ark., railroad tracks washed out.

Only a partial list of the dead in Green Forest was available before the wires were blown down. It follows:

Mrs. Jerry P. Jones
Mrs. I. D. Galloway.
Polk Jones.
Mrs. H. H. A. Hulfey.
Mrs Norris.
Mrs. Moore.

Equinoxial Storm Subsides.

CHICAGO, March 19.—(I. N. S.) —The storm which exacted a toll of thirty-seven deaths and thousands of dollars in property damage in Arkansas and Missouri during the last forty-eight hours has spent its force, weather bureau officials intimated here tonight.

The storm, which developed in the northwest and swept over the southern states, reaching its zenith as a tornado in Missouri and Arkansas, was characterized as an equinox disturbance. These storms, usually, excepting severe, sweep the country seasonally in the fall and spring.

High winds prevailed in Chicago during the disturbance and lowered the temperature from 50 degrees to 36 degrees. Heavy snows were reported in the northwest. Blizzards were occasioned by the disturbance along the northern border of the storm area, while eastern districts were visited by heavy rains.

HOUSE REJECTS PLUMBING BILL

making reasonably good progress through committee of the whole when its introducer, Mr. Kier in answer to a question on the floor as towhere the bill came from, vouchsafed the information that it was worked out by sanitary engineers and experts at Washington and embodied United States government specifications known as the "Hoover code" endorsed by the secretary of commerce.

"I thought so; it's a Hoover proposition," broke in Mr. Dietz, Custer county ruralist at this point. "I'd like to know when Hoover was appointed dictator of this country to regulate anything and everything. What did he do to agriculture during the war? He put a limit on prices of things the farmer had to sell, but did nothing to protect the farmer from being charged profiteering prices on goods he was compelled to buy."

Mr. Mitchell, Lancaster, also from the country, and Mr. Davis, Cass county agriculturist, took sides with Dietz. Both are republicans, while the Custer member is a democrat.

"This bill takes in entirely too much territory," quoth Mitchell. "It would be very burdensome and obnoxious to the people in the smaller towns. There are a few fellows trying to tend to other people's business, and I don't think we should let them put this over."

"I notice here that a man who didn't put in his plumbing to suit some inspector's taste would be liable to a fine of $100," observed Mr. Davis. "That's altogether too drastic, and the bill in general calls for too much expense on small property owners."

On motion of Mr. Cone, the provision subjecting the owner to such a penalty was stricken out, 43 to 16, leaving it applicable only to the plumber doing the work. This fixed the bill so that the owner could do it himself as he might see fit, without being called to account by any official overlord.

Play Game of Tag.

After further discussion by other members, the house started a game of "Tag, you're it" with the bill. First it voted on a motion by Mr. Mitchell for indefinite postponement. There was a standing division, which resulted in the tie vote of 37 to 37, and the motion was declared lost.

Right after that a count of noses was called for on Mr. Kier's motion to advance the bill for third reading. Thirty-seven again stood up to vote "yes", but this time there were forty-two "noes", and the Kier motion was also defeated.

"Where does that leave this bill?" asked several members at once.

"It's still on the blackboard," announced Mr. Burke in the chair. "We'll take up another bill."

Mr. Farman tried to get in a second motion to kill No. 480, but was ruled out of order. He waited patiently until the next bill had been disposed of, and then moved to go back to 480. Burke put this question and it carried.

"I now move, Mr. Chairman, that the bill be indefinitely postponed," said Farman.

"As a substitute, I move that it be ordered engrossed for third reading," interjected Mr. Kier.

Finally Gets the Axe.

On the latter proposal, the vote was 38 for and 41 against. A division was next called for on indefinite postponement. The clerks counted forty-five on the affirmative side and only thirty on the negative. That ended the scrap.

While Dick Johnson of Lancaster county was berating Mr. Dietz for his "vicious and pernicious attack" on Hoover, someone inquired whether the person they were talking about "is that fellow at Washington or the man who manufactures vacuum cleaners."

"He's the Hoover that makes kitchen cabinets," jokingly commented Mrs. Gillespie.

Two weeks ago the house slaughtered four other bills said to have been O. K.'d by the secretary of commerce. They were introduced as a series by Mr. Russell, containing proposed uniform regulations for enactment by the various states in regard to automobile registration and licensing of drivers.

The plumbing bill put to death ion measures introduced early in Saturday was one of two companthe session. Its mate, which would have created a state examining licensing and supervisory board for plumbers, was chloroformed by the committee on miscellaneous subjects.

SEWARD CLUB ALSO REQUESTS HIS DISMISSAL

Eaton," asserted Chief of Police Peter Johnstone when informed Saturday night of the Seward Commercial club directors' move. "Action by that body or anybody else should make no difference in a case like this."

County Attorney Max Towle, who had already stated that he had not yet reached a final decision on whether further steps would be taken against Eaton, added that the resolution would not be weighed by him in making up his mind.

"I want to have plenty of time to think it over, Mr. Towle stated, "but may have my mind made up by Monday. When I do determine a course of action, it will be the one that I myself think best."

Before the coroner's jury met Saturday morning and returned a verdict absolving Eaton of blame in the shooting, Mr. Towle had stated that he would be guided in the matter largely by this verdict. Relatives of the slain youth have since asserted that they would demand a prosecution.

Eaton Goes To Geneva.

Officer Eaton obtained permission from Chief of Police Peter Johnstone Saturday afternoon to go to Geneva, his home, for a few days. He left at once.

"I am glad that the jury returned the verdict exonerating Eaton," Chief of Police Peter Johnstone said Saturday afternoon. "As the jury's verdict said, Eaton was doing his duty as an officer of this city, and can not be held responsible for the death of Gade. Any officer in his position would have done exactly the same thing under those circumstances. Eaton was only doing his part to protect the lives and property of Lincoln people, and he was carrying out this duty to the limit in investigating Gade and Gade's car."

STORM GRIPS MOUNTAIN AREA

the drifts piled up successive avalanches into Animas Canyon, Antonio D. Logato, 33, a member of the crew of 100 men who are employed by the railroad, met death today from exposure. The work of liberating snow-bound Silverton, isolated since February 15, is expected to be completed today, in spite of continuing snow and the ever-present danger of fresh slides.

Miss Ella Bruchies, 28, of Yuma, Colo., was killed instantly at Laramie, Wyo., today and George McCook, Laramie, and Miss Georgia Musgrave, a college student from Ottilala, Kas., are near death as a result of a collision between two automobiles caused by the blinding snow.

Snow Plows Work.

Minor traffic accidents have been reported in several Colorado towns, but state highways remain passable, with snowplows at work clearing away drifts. McCook, Neb., reports highways being snowed in rapidly and many rural communities isolated by the heavy snow.

Wire trouble is hampering telegraph and telephone service, with one main line between Denver and Kansas City down.

Although all trains entering Denver were running on schedule, snowplows were in service on most lines, and the continued wind is expected to cause trouble in keeping tracks clear. Rising wind is reported by railroad companies in Nebraska and Kansas.

Although the weather bureau reports that the storm originated in Utah and swung north over the Rockies into Montana, no snow fell in Utah and only a slight precipitation was recorded in Montana, although temperatures descended as low as 8 above.

Wyoming was hit first by the blizzard.

Eastbound mail planes were forced to abandon their flights and air mail is being taken on trains east from Cheyenne. Westbound planes succeeded in crossing the mountains several hours behind their schedules.

Storm Abating.

The snow storm which swept Nebraska Friday night and Saturday was reported to be abating in the southwest portion late Saturday night, according to reports received by the Lincoln office of the Burlington. Some snow was falling intermittently, the report said. About eight inches lay on the ground west of McCook.

Reports from Alliance stated that the snow was continuing there, with about twelve inches having fallen. The snow was accompanied by a strong wind and was drifting badly in places.

Ten inches of snow covered the Sidney vicinity Saturday afternoon and at North Platte seven inches was recorded. The heavy fall did not continue much east of Grand Island. In the vicinity of Burwell and Greeley Center about five inches covered the ground. In the eastern portion of the state the snow was generally light and some localities reported none at all.

FUNDS PROBERS HIT NEW SNAG

directed him to proceed immediately to the task Barry rejected.

Injunction Looms.

Upon his arrival in Pennsylvania, probably next week, South will be confronted most likely by an injunction restraining him from taking charge of the election records.

Barry's letter was a direct challenge of the committee's authority by a servant of the senate—the first within the memory on Capitol Hill. The communication was in response to an earlier letter today directing Barryin the name of the committee to impound the ballot boxes.

Barry's action was predicated upon the involved legal question surrounding the status of the Reed committee since the expiration of the Sixty-ninth congress on March 4, when an effort to extend the life of the committee was blocked by a filibuster.

Three members of the committee —Reed and Senators Goff, West Virginia, and McNary, Oregon, both republicans—attended today's session. The other two members—King, democrat, Utah, and La Follette, republican, Wisconsin—are away from Washington.

TAX SLASH OF HALF A BILLION IN 1928 LOOMS

WASHINGTON, March 19.—(I. N. S.)—If general business conditions continue favorably, next December will see the greatest federal tax cut since the war—at least a half billion dollars, and possibly $600,000,000—it was predicted here today.

Although neither President Coolidge nor Secretary of the Treasury Mellon will predict figures, both are agreed that "a sizeable cut" is in prospect.

Treasury experts have already begun to figure on the myriad details of a program.

According to all indications, one of the chief beneficiaries of the cut will be that class which is referred to as "the poor rich" —that is, the middle brackets of incomes ranging from $15,000 to $100,000. The "little fellows" and the "big fellows" were the chief beneficiaries of former cuts. The corporations also will benefit, as they did not get a reduction in the last tax bill.

WARNING TO JUGO-SLAVIA FROM ITALY

to London asking that the British government investigate the situation and protect Jugo-Slavia against Italy.

A Note From Italy.

VIENNA, March 19. —(U. P.) — Dispatches from Belgrade tonight stated that Italy had sent a note to Jugo-Slavia warning that country that Italy cannot remain neutral if the aggressive Jugo-Slavia policy toward Albania continues.

Earlier in the day, the Jugo-Slavia foreign offices had issued a formal denial of reports published in Italy that Jugo-Slavia, was mobilizing along the Albanian border for war.

Diplomats Ponder.

LONDON, March 19.—(U. P.)— Europe tonight was assimilating reports of a war scare, while diplomats pondered the reasons which prompted an important Italian newspaper to charge that Jugo-Slavia was mobilizing on the Italian and Albanian frontiers.

In many informed quarters the developments of the past twenty-four hours were accepted merely as the seasonal appearance of the well known Balkan war clouds which have been summoned above the horizon, usually without precipitating hostilities, every spring for years.

From the vantage point of London, where something akin to a bird'seye view of Europe can be had, it appeared that the allegations of warlike preparations in Jugo-Slavia were exaggerated. There was evidence on both sides to indicate uneasiness along the shores of the Adriatic, but the United Press was informed by an authoritative spokesman here that so long as the great powers were united in the cause of peace, as they recently were shown to be at Geneva, there could be but slight chance of disturbance of European tranquility.

Italy Anxious.

It was established, however, that Italy today notified the British and German foreign offices of her anxiety regarding the state of affairs in Jugo-Slavia.

In answer to the charges in Giornale D'italia that she was mobilizing against Italy and Albania, the Jugo-Slvia foreign office issued a communique calling the story "pure invention."

It was conceded that Italy and Jugo-Slavia's interests in the Balkans were somewhat in conflict and that Jugo-Slavia had been perturbed by the Italo-Albanian treaty, recently signed, whereby Italy obtained predominance in the affairs of that small republic which lies across the Adriatic from the Italian heel. Albania is bounded on the north by Jugo-Slavia, on the east by Jugo-Slavia and Greece, and on the south by Greece. To the west lies the sea.

In reliable information from Vienna, where the intrigue of the Balkans frequently centers, sensational stories of Jugo-Slavian preparedness for war were called "irresponsible."

Jugo-Slavia Careful.

It was emphasized that Jugo-Slavia was so fearful that Italy might seek to occupy Dalmatia, that part of Jugo-Slavia lying on the Adriatic, that the Belgrade government was especially careful to avoid everything which might be used by Premier Mussolini as a pretext for extending the fascist state across the narrow sea.

Vienna informants believed the basis for reports of mobilization might be found in the possible increase of Jugo-Slavian frontier guards along the Albanian border since the advance of spring was certain to witness the customary frontier raids of Albanian bandits.

Ambassador Calls.

BERLIN, March 19.—(I. N. S.)— The Italian ambassador called at the foreign office this evening and officially informed Secretary of State Von Schubert that Jugo-Slavia is concentrating troops on the Albanian frontier.

The diplomat said Italy is not considering any military encounter measures, but shortly will submit information to all European capitals regarding the Albanian situation.

SHANGHAI FALL APPEARS LIKELY IN NEAR FUTURE

their hands, the communication between Shanghai and Nankiang will be cut and in the face of such a hopeless situation it is expected that Shanghai will be surrendered with little or no resistance.

The Cantonese entry to Nankiang will mean that the Shantung troops are cut off entirely from their base and they must either surrender or give battle in a hopeless cause. The invaders are now reported at the Nankiang gates.

Many rumors are afloat that Gen. Pi Shou-Chen, northern defender of Shanghai, will go over to the nationalists. He, himself, remains calm and dignified in the face of apparent disaster and only assures foreigners that order will be preserved.

Ugly reports are also floating around that the Shantung troops in the field have "sold out" and that their capitulation has been quickened by defections ranging from high in the ranks to the common privates.

Small Loss of Life.

The rapid advance of the Cantonese would appear to have been with small loss of life for reports indicate that the fighting has not been of a sanguinary nature, at least not in comparison to the advances made.

The international authorities have held conferences with the Shanghai municipal authorities and made provisions for protection of the international settlement.

Agitators are carrying on an active campaign, but thus far the mass of the Shanghai people have failed to respond to demands for a general strike, and unless there are untoward events it seems probable that there will be little to fear from the Shanghai residents. The gravest menace presents itself, however, in the prospect of Shanghai being flooded with soldiers in retreat, each looking to his personal enrichment and safety.

Already there are reports of widespread looting in the areas where the northern armies are in retreat.

as how much they are likely to get. This is one of the big items of the budget bill. The needs of the university have also been reviewed quite extensively and the committee feels that it has that problem fairly well worked out.

The appropriations for the various departments housed in the capitol have been taken up from time to time since the committee begain its work and that work has been nearly completed.

Normal Schools Tuesday.

The only major item remaining to be worked over is that of the normal schools, and Chairman Reed has set next Tuesday afternoon aside for a hearing on that question. When the normal school appropriations have been worked over, and a few straggling ends have been picked up, the committee will have a definite idea of what it wants to do.

Practically no differences have arisen thus far, it is understood, and the committee will work in harmony when it once gets its hands on the appropriation bills. Chairman Reed estimated that unless something of a volcanic nature is stirred up in the house, the senate committee will be in a position to put the measures out on the floor of the senate within a week or less after they are received from the house.

Hobbled by House.

But all the pains of the senate amount to little more than preparation for a final spurt of speed at the end unless some action is taken soon by the house finance committee. What is worrying the anxious senators is the lack of any definite information as to just how far along the house committee is going. So far there has been little or nothing to indicate that the house committee is anywhere near putting the bills out.

Another thing which is probably having something to do with the holding up of the appropriation bills is the knowledge on the part of the legislators that once the question of appropriations is tackled there will be little chance for any other bills still in the hands of the standing committee to receive any amount of consideration.

There are still many pet measures that have not been reported out, and the taking up of the appropriation matters may be a signal for the appointment of sifting committees, and will likely mean that most of those pets still in the hands of the committee, will never see the light of day.

Willing To Slaughter.

It is different in the senate. The matter of killing a few bills that have not been deemed important enough to be brought out up to date is of little consequence when compared with the prospect of a four months session. A motion to kill all bills not reported out by Tuesday received some strong support when it was made last week by Senator Tesar.

HELD AT JAIL.

David Wambold, 30, 1839 O street, was arrested shortly after midnight Saturday on complaint of his wife, who claimed he was beating her. He was taken to the city jail by Officers Gillespie and Schrupp.

LIFER'S 'VICTIM' KENTUCKY GIRL, IS FOUND ALIVE

was found in an abandoned mine shaft. Although thhe body itself was unidentifiable because of its condition, Charles Vickery, Mary's father, identified the hat and clothing found as his daughter's and testimony was introduced at the trial to the effect that Dabney was seen with Mary shortly before her disappearance from the mine town of Harlan.

FRANKFORT, Ky., March 19.—(U. P.)—"I am innocent of killing Mary Vickery or anyone else," Conley Dabney, 28, said tonight in state reformatory here.

He was sentenced to life imprisonment after the alleged murder of Miss Veckery, 16, who returned to Williamsburg today "to help get an innocent man out of prison."

"Society should see I am released immediately," Dabney's statement said.

"I was convicted of killing Miss Vickery and throwing her body in a mine near Harlan on sole testimony of Miss Marie Jackson, who swore she was an eyewitness to the murder of the girl," Dabney said.

"I never knew nor saw the Vickery girl.

"The Jackson woman wanted me to leave my wife and two children and go with her. My wife and children live at Coal Creek, Tenn., where I was born and reared."

Never at Harlan.

Dabney said he never was at Harlan, where the body of a woman identified as Miss Vickery's was found.

Dabney said he had no relatives in Kentucky, but was depending on justice to send Miss Mary Vickery's statement to Gov. William Fields and convicting courts.

Dabney was received at the reformatory October 15, 1925.

Mary Vickery disappeared from Broxton, Aug. 17, 1925. The composed body of an unidentified young woman was found in the abandoned mine some weeks later.

whipped out a gun and fired at Mrs. Stout and her sister. Mrs. Stout was killed and her sister was injured.

In his application, Stout claimed that he was under the influence of liquor at the time of the shooting and was not responsible for his action. He contends that he should have been convicted of manslaughter or second degree murder rather than first degree murder.

Towle Did Not Recommend.

Willette Snook stabbed her husband with a butcher knife during a quarrel. The commutation of her sentence was not given the recommendation of County Attorney Max Towle.

BROADENING OF TRADE IS NOTED

Spring Advance in Various Lines Reported Well Under Way.

Confident Bidding Up of Industrials and Rails Continues.

BY W. S. COUSINS.

NEW YORK, March 19.—(I. N. S.)—Confident bidding up of prices of the better grades of industrials and rails continued this week. "Easy money" for investment and speculative buying and aggressive pool activity played an important part in the movement, but industrial reports were universally favorable and there was evidence aplenty that the spring expansion in various lines was well under way.

For the first time since last June the call loan rate was marked down to 3½ per cent. Investment money flowed in good volume, showing a preference for the industrials, owing to favorable dividend records.

The weekend business reports emphasized the broadening of retail and wholesale mercantile trade.

Under the leadership of United States Steel common, General Motors and other recognized favorites, prices raced upward to the highest levels of the year. For many stocks the prices recorded this week are the highest in the history of the various enterprises they represent.

U. S. Bonds Lead.

United States government and treasury bonds led the forward movement in the listed bond market, stimulated by the downward revision in interest rates on treasury obligations, and the growing prospect of a billion dollar shrinkage in the volume of outstanding Liberty and treasury bonds next year. European government and industrial bonds also commanded higher prices in a firm and steady turnover, while American railroad bonds were active and steady.

Slightly easier conditions ruled in the commodity markets, with thirty-nine out of the sixty changes in Dun's list showing declines, against twenty-one advances.

The rise of the British pound sterling to $4.85 9-16, the year's high, was an important incident of the week.

Bank clearings for the week aggregated $11,32,287,000, according to Bradstreet's. This is a gain of 23.1 per cent over last week and 9 per cent over the same week last year.

Wheat Takes a Drop.

CHICAGO, March 19.—(I. N. S.)—A new low for the year was recorded in the May grain delivery late this week as prices dropped under liquidation by longs, wheat showing a loss of 1 1-2 @ 1 7-8c for the day and a loss of 3 1-8 @ 4 1-2c for the week.

A good deal of selling the latter part of the week was influenced on a statement credited to a prominent trader who intimated that wheat may sell at $1 a bushel. Foreign markets were generally lower.

Corn displayed strength early in the week, but was forced to succumb later when longs unloaded. The market on one occasion today established new lows for the crop on all options. Futures are ¾ @ 1-8c lower for the day and 1 7-8c to 3 1-4c lower than a week ago.

Oats closed 1-4 @ 3-8c lower for the day and 1 1-2c to 1 3-4c below a week ago in line with other grain.

Commission house trade was mixed.

Provisions are sharply lower than a week ago.

Hog Prices Lower.

CHICAGO, March 19.—(I. N. S.)—Hog prices are 25c to 40c lower than a week ago, the market being depressed by large receipts. This week's receipts were estimated at 169,000 against 136,000 last week and 152,000 a year ago. Shippers bought with some interest, but packers were rather slow during the week. The best hogs finished the week at $11.80 and many moved at $11.50 @ $11.75. The heavyweights are at the lowest point of the season.

Outlet for beef was unsatisfactory and the market was dull and slumpy. The good steers that advanced so rapidly a week ago sold 50c lower and most of the medium steers were 25c under last week's figures. Top for the week was $13.30. Common and medium steers cleared at $7.00 @ $10.00. There were 47,000 cattle received this week against 48,000 last week, and 64,000 a year ago. Cows and heifers sold lower in sympathy with steers.

day evening at Hotel Cornhusker.

Sheep receipts totalled 53,000, against 67,000 last week and 89,000 a year ago. The total was the smallest for this time of the season in many years, but the market tended lower as the otulet was narrow and buyers conservative. The market is mostly 15c to 25c lowr than a week ago.

Cotton Lower For Week.

CHICAGO, March 19, —(I. N. S.)—Cotton prices are from 3 to 15 points lower than a week ago. At the close today deliveries were from 1 to 5 points higher. March, at 13.88c; May 13.86c; July 14.01c; October 14.14c; December 14.34c; January 14.25c.

FLEE FROM FIRE TO FACE DEATH IN SNOW STORM

WINNIPEG, Canada, March 19.—(I. N. S.)—Facing death on the second floor of their farm house at Durham, Manitoba, which was wrapped in flames, D. Elgie and his wife, the latter holding her tiny baby tightly to her breast, leaped from the window into a deep snowdrift today. E. Thomas, a hired man, also jumped to safety.

Clad in night attire they made their way to the nearest farm house more than a half mile away through a raging blizzard, said, to have been the worst experienced in that section in twenty-five years.

Nearly frozen and in a semi-conscious condition, they battled their way barefooted through the snowdrifts. Upon reaching the neighboring farm it was feared that they would die from exposure, but advices late today convey the report that the Elgie family and the hired man are rallying and greatly improved despite their harrowing experiences.

FIFTEEN STOLEN CARS RECOVERED

Officers Believe Huge Automobile Theft Ring Operating in Colfax and Platte Counties.

An automobile theft ring of large proportions is believed to have been uncovered by officers with the recovery of fifteen supposedly stolen cars in Colfax and Platte counties Thursday and Friday by Deputy State Sheriffs Gates and Hasson, Sheriff Kavanaugh of Platte county and Chief of Police Lehman of Columbus. No arrests had been made late Saturday night.

The cars, all Ford sedans and coupes, were recovered in various places in the two counties. Most of the cars were obtained from farmers who purchased them second hand.

Officers believe the cars were stolen in and around Omaha, the engine numbers changed, and then sold out in the state. An attempt will be made to establish the ownership of the cars.

State Sheriff Condit said Saturday night that his men expected to recover more cars in the Columbus vicinity. Identity of the cars must before any action will be taken, he said.

4 BILLS READY FOR FINAL VOTE

House Approves Measures for Passage on Third Reading.

Proposal to Change Appointment of Presidential Electors Up.

Four bills were dressed up in their party clothes by the Nebraska house of representatives at its Saturday afternoon session and admitted to the select circle of measures on the third reading calendar.

Having done this much and put to death a plumbing regulation bill for cities and villages which have no local ordinances on that subject, the chamber adjourned about 3 o'clock to reconvene at 10 a. m. Monday.

Choosing Presidential Electors.

One of the proposed enactments sent ahead for engrossment and final pasage was H. R. 592, taking the appointment of presidential electors out of the governor's hands. Under the present statute, passed nearly 10 years ago, it is made the governor's duty to appoint the electors of the party whose candidates for president and vice president receive the most votes at the general election. Names of the electors do not appear on the ballot, and they are not voted for.

Prof. L. E. Alysworth of the University of Nebraska became worried over the possibility that in some unusually close election there might be a dispute as to which party's presidential and vice presidential nominees had the highest vote, and the governor might name the electors of his own political affiliation. So he drafted a bill to meet such a contingency, which was introduced as H. R. 592.

It provides that all votes cast for president and vice president shall be counted for the electors nominated by the same party, and their election shall be duly certified by the canvassing board. The governor will have nothing to do except issue certificates of election to the electors.

County School Exhibits.

H. R. 385, changing the law so that county school exhibits shall be displayed at county fairs during the fall season instead of at county seats in the spring, was amended in several particulars before the house advanced it. The bill also raises the maximum amount to be set aside from the county general fund to pay the cost of such exhibits, from 5 cents per pupil to 8 cents. It leaves the minimum at 2½ cents per pupil. Between these limits the county board fixes the amount of aid.

Mr. Dietz moved that the proportion of teachers in the county required to petition the county board before that body is called upon to give financial assistance be increased from one-half to two-thirds. This carried, 38 to 17.

Mr. Malster got the phrase "or other place" thrown in, thus allowing the exhibit to be sent somewhere else besides a county fair. On Mr. Adams's suggestion, a clause requiring the county superintendent to award premiums for the best specimens of school work was changed to read that he "may" do so.

Lancaster and Douglas counties are excluded from the operation of this act, under an amendment offered by Mr. Cone, seconded by Mr. Van Kirk, which prevailed by 25 votes to 21.

Security for Public Deposits.

The committee of the whole placed its stamp of approval on H. R. 502, permitting banks to turn over warrants or bonds of Nebraska, or the bonds of other states which are accepted for investments of Nebraska's trust funds, as security for deposits of public money, instead of furnishing depository bonds.

Completing Real Estate Deals.

It also acted favorably on H. R. 208, Mr. Kier's bill authorizing executors and administrators of estate to execute conveyances of real estate under ante-mortem contracts made by decedents. This was explained as giving heirs the same right to enforce contracts advantageous to them as other persons now have against estates.

NANCY ANN COYNE.

Mrs. Nancy A. Coyne passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Nancy Hansen at Filley, Neb., on Monday, Feb. 28, 1927, aged 72 years, 4 months, and nine days.

Nancy Morris was born Oct. 19, 1854 in Mason county, Illinois, where she lived until she came with her parents to Nebraska in 1871. She was married on Sept. 25, 1874 to Edward Coyne at Firth, Neb. Shortly afterwards they moved to Filley to make her home with her daughter, her husband having passed on before her on May 31, 1915.

To this union were born eleven children, four of whom died in infancy and Frances, who died at age of 25 years. Those left to mourn her loss are four son; Thomas of Hickman, Frank and Edgar of Lincoln and Riley of Herndon, Kas.; two daughters; Mrs. Alice Johns of Minatare and Mrs. Nancy Hansen of Filley; eleven grandchildren, and three brothers.

She united with the Methodist church in girlhood and continued in that faith until the time of her death.

Short services were held at the home at Filley. The body was then taken to Sterling where funeral services were held at the Methodist church at 2:30 on March 2 in charge of Rev. Peterson of Filley. Interment was made in the Sterling cemetery. —CONTRIBUTED.

M'CLASKEY TELLS OF EDITORS' TOUR

Arrangements Being Made For N. E. A. Trip Through Nebraska and Black Hills.

G. D. McClaskey, publicity director for the 1927 National Editorial association convention in Omaha, June 12-15, and the susequent tenday tour of Nebraska and the Black Hills, has reutrned to Lincoln after covering the entire route laid out for the tour. He devoted nearly three weeks to the trip and visited every town in Nebraska and the Black Hills at which the party of newspaper men nad women will stop. The route is from Omaha by way of Fremont and Norfolk, west to Chadron, then through the Black Hills. The party will then travel south to Scottsbluff and Gering, to Sidney and on east down the Platte valley with stops at North Platte, Kearney, Grand Island, Hastings and Lincoln, before returning to Omaha. Four days will be spent in the Black Hills and six days in Nebraska.

"The purpose of my trip was to assist in making arrangements for the tour and to gather first-hand information for use in giving publicity to the event," said McClaskeq, "and I came back with a supply of material sufficient to keep me busy pounding the keys from now until the convention crowd gathers in Omaha June 12.

Although the Black Hills region is the only part of South Dakota to be visited people of that state are taking a great interest in the convention and tour. He met Governor Bulow and Secretary of Agriculture Crill, who were in Rapid City at the time, and they both said they intended to join the editorial party in Hot Springs on June 17 and remain during the four days of sight-seeing in the Black Hills.

Mr. McClaskey called to the fact that this tour of the state would be a wonderful opportunity for Nebraska's resources to be brought to the attention of the entire nation. "Some Nebraskans have wondered," he said, "if newspaper men from distant points would take this trip over the state. Why, the first bonafide reservation to be made for the tour was received from John C. Brimblecom, publisher of the Graphic, Newton, Mass."

Headquarters of the Nebraska N. E. A. convention committee are in the Lindell hotel, Lincoln. To date more than 250 newspaper people, have said they would attend the convention and make the tour.

Ace Has Pet Ambition Capture Latzo's Crown

Wildcat Booked to Mix With Tendler

Hudkins and Quaker City Slugger On Dotted Line for April 12 Bout; Ace on Pete Latzo's Trail.

LOS ANGELES, March 19.—(I. N. S.)—A match between Ace Hudkins Nebraska wildcat, and Lew Tendler of Philadelphia, welterweights, to be staged in Los Angeles April 12, was closed here today by the Olympic auditorium.

The fighters will step 10 rounds to a decision and have agreed to make 147 pounds eight hours before the bout, give or take one pound, it was announced.

Ace On Latzo's Trail.

The next Hudkins shot—if Ace and his brother-manager, Clyde, have their say—will be at Pete Latzo, on whose brow rests the world's welterweight crown. Fight critics of the California region apparently are strong in the belief that Ace will cop Pete's title. The following comment by Jack James in the Los Angeles Examiner, penned the day after the wildcat's recent trouncing of Colima, Mexican middleweight, provides the surest information possible that Ace is riding on the topmost popularity wave in the coast country:

Sympathy for Pete.

Mr. Richard Donald—never optimistic, and come "natural" or come "craps"—entertains the ambitious notion of enticing one Pete Latzo out to the great open spaces of Wrigley field, there to engage in a bout of legalized fisticuffs with one Ace Hudkins, sometimes known as the "Nebraska Wildcat."

Though I have no particular reason for the sentiment, I can but admit to a certain kindly and sympathetic feeling toward this Latzo I have never met the gentleman socially, nor yet am I acquainted, to my knowledge, with any of his intimates. Intimates he must have, however, even this far from his native heath, and these owe to him, I believe, a friendly duty which they should fulfill without delay.

Offers Some Advice.

Let these intimates, if such there be hereabouts, forward to Mr. Latzo a critically unbiased round-by-round account of the Hudkins-Colima embroglio of last evening.

Let them append to the account advice to this general effect.

"Come for a combination business and pleasure trip if you will. But leave your welterweight title at home!"

If Mr. Latzo brings that cherished possession with him after such warning, and risks possession thereof in combat with this Hudkins, then it's his own fault.

But really, we ought to be forewarned. We owe that much to any tourist.

That Big Hound Pup.

Ace Hudkins in action is an apt illustration of an ancient but pat story of the ring. You remember it—the one about the battler of color who ceased firing with great suddenness because he was never so sick of a guy in all his life.

I imagine that Bert Colima was very very sick of this Hudkins very early in the hostilities.

Hudkins is just too ubiquitous. The only time he is not on top of

FAMOUS DOG IN CLEVELAND ZOO

CLEVELAND, O., March 19.—Balto, the hero dog, who led Leonard Seppala's team of huskies into Nome two years ago, pulling that precious little cargo of diphtheria anti-toxin, will make his future home in Brookside zoo, Cleveland.

A fund of approximately $2,500, raised through popular subscription here, purchased Balto and several of his team-mates.

Huskies such as Balto may live to the ripe age of twenty years, dog experts declare. As Balto is but five years old at the present time, he is thought to be good for ten years more at least, perhaps longer for he will receive excellent care at the zoo.

Subscriptions accepted in the local drive, ranged all the way from pennies contributed by school children, upward.

TWO GRID GAMES FOR THIS WEEK

A blizzard having wiped the Saturday football game off the stadium books, Coach Ernest E. Bearg announced Saturday that his University of Nebraska spring football squad would probably stage two games at the stadium this week.

The spring contests are booked for Wednesday and Saturday and the stadium gates will swing open for fans desiring to watch the 1927 Cornhusker squad.

BY GREGG McBRIDE.

The quality of basketball played throughout the Nebraska state college conference was "looking up" during the past season. The schedule drafted by the college slatemakers was such as to bring out the best in most of the cage combinations. While it did not include a "round robin" among the members of the college circuit, it did keep the fans guessing to the extent that the champion team was not determined until the final week of play.

Fourteen players are named for positions on The Star's Honor Roll selections—three more than were included on the 1926 award. Doane, Hastings, Peru and York were the leading quintets during the 1927 pennant chance and each of these schools succeeded in placing two men on the Roll.

Considerable "High Harry."

"High Harry" Kersenbrock, seven-foot center and scoring ace of the champion Doane college team was the outstanding athlete of the conference circuit during the past season. Without Kersenbrock, the Doane college five still was a good combination, but with "High

SCHULTE SQUAD IN DRAB TRYOUT

Nebraska U. Tracksters Perform Poorly On Indoor Cinders.

Mentor Unable Enthuse Over Prospects For Berkeley Meet.

Coach Henry F. Schulte saw little reason to enthuse over the showing made by his University of Nebraska track squad Saturday afternoon in the Saturday workout over the stadium indoor track. The Saturday event was the first of a series of trials preliminary to the selection of the Cornhusker team that will make the trip to California for a dual meet with the Berkeley Bears early in April.

Freshmen athletes blazed the trail for the varsity candidates in several events, while the regulars looked rather drab in the other contests.

Captain Bobbie Stephens, broad jumper and sprinter, who threw his knee out of joint early this week, was on the sidelines Saturday and will not be able to return to active practice for a week more.

Martin Janulewicz, Loup City athlete, furnished a surprise in the mile trials when he finished third with a mark of less than five minutes. Janulewicz is one of "Schulte's" finds, the Loup City boy being a novice until the "Indian" induced him to come out as a serious contender in the distance events.

Cobe Thomson, Lincon high athlete, led Leffler and Fleming of the varsity in the low hurdles, getting 6 6-10 seconds for the event. Chadderdon nosed out Lemley in the half-mile run.

Frank Wirsig showed improved form in the pole vault when he

Viewing With Pride.

Inviting the Swift Three.

Buck in Mood to Fight.

Concerning the Rasslers.

Sport followers in Nebraska have new cause to "view with pride." Three worthy sons of the Cornhusker commonwealth — Locke, Hahn and Martin—have qualified for a rating as among the world's greatest in the art of speeding with spiked shoes over the cinder paths and tanbark boards. Locke and Martin flashed across the horizon last year—the first as king of the 220-yard sprinters and the second as national champion at the half-mile. Now come Lloyd Hahn to be acclaimed as the world's greatest miler.

Hahn's star dazzeld with new brilliance a few nights ago when he outfooted Wide, the Swedish champion, and sped around the boards to his sixteenth successive triumph of the indoor running season in the east. The time lacked but a fifth-second of equalling the world's indoor record for the distance.

The career of the former Falls City youth has been strikingly unique. When Hahn did his first running in spiked shoes in his home town, he was rated as a sprinter. Pitted against the field in a state high school meet on University of Nebraska cinders some seven or eight years ago, Hahn scored a grand slam by winning the century, furlong and quarter-mile dashes, equalling former state records in two of the events and establishing a new state high mark in the third.

It was not until Hahn transferred his athletic activities to Boston in recent years that his ability to go the longer distances was discovered. His development as a distance runner was slow, but sure. From the first, Hahn's Boston trainer was confident that his protege would achieve world fame—a confidence which the ex-Falls City athlete has fully justified.

Nebraska, home state of three of the world's greatest runners, extends congratulations to these superlative knights of the cinders—and invites them to display their speed on a Nebraska track.

Most appropriate it would be for the University of Nebraska athletic management, host to the Missouri Valley conference at the annual outdoor track and field meet the latter part of May, to arrange for the appearance of Hahn, Locke and Martin in a series of special races on the stadium oval.

That great man of major league baseball, Kenesaw M. Landis, unsheathed his trumpet a few days ago and blasted a decree that Buck Weaver, banished White Sox player, forever is barred from the national game. Buck is the chap who performed with genuine brilliance in the famous or infamous Sox-Cincinnati world series of 1919, but was banished from the pastime on the charge that he had knowledge of the sellout by the Sox and failed to notify his manager or employer.

On the outlaw list for six years, Weaver not long ago applied for re-instatement, wherefore the great man, after going into solemn session with himself, notified the player that his case was hopeless—that he is out and must stay out for all time.

Major league baseball, it would seem, is getting much too chesty—it is feeding on strange meat. The major league commissioner, who barred Kauff, despite the fact that Bennie was accused of a crime but never convicted, is the self-same commissioner who whitewashed Stoneham, head of the Giants, who was indicted and stood trial on a fraud charge in the New York courts; the same commissioner who later winked at an accusation that certain New York players had connived to "buy" a ball game while he was banishing a California youth accused of acting as the players' agent in the deal.

Although the moguls of the big leagues have a perfect right to proclaim, through their commissioner, that they do not wish to have Weaver in their employ, the spirit of fair play suggests that Buck has been more sinned against than sinning. Be that as it may, Weaver's attorney, according to report, is preparing the papers for a suit in the civil courts, intent on pressing Buck's demand that he be accorded the right to earn a living in his chosen profession. Organized baseball has a horror of being yanked into court and Buck, after all, my cash in on his insistence that he hasn't been given a square deal.

Buck was that honest that his ball playing during that 1919 series was a thorn in the side of the gambling clique which corrupted other members of the White Sox team and in case the majors persist in declining to accept the services of a player of that type, perhaps the minors might be willing to take him into their fold. If the majors can put up with a Landis or a Stoneham, possibly the minors might be able to struggle along with a Weaver.

In all events, the statement is going the rounds of organized ball that at least a few of the minors stand ready to restore Buck to a place on the firing line and are quietly urging the player to proceed with his law suit.

From S. J. Allen, chief of police at Shreveport, La., comes a communication of more than passing interest. Chief Allen and his fellow townsmen, it seems, are being pestered by the heavyweight rasseling gents. The Billy Sandow-Strangler Lewis-Big Munn clique has declared Shreveport in the hippodrome circuit and the chief wants to know what it's all about, writing as follows to this department:

"Your name has been turned over to me by J. C. Marsh of Chigo. I am writing you in regard to Munn, Mondt, Lewis, Romano, Gardini, Sandow and about forty others in what is known as the 'trust.' In his letter, Marsh states that you have knowledge of these wrestlers putting on bunk matches.

"As chief of police in Shreveport, I stand four square for clean sport, and I will not permit fake stuff in this city. Please let me hear from you as soon as possible, as these fellows are planning to put on another bout here March 21. I want to be in position to produce the evidence. I am, yours truly,

S. J. ALLEN,
"Chief of Police."

If "evidence" is what the worthy chief requires, he should dig it up for himself. This department is not a party to the secrets of the wrestling trust—it has a firm conviction that the bone-crushers' union is much too cunning to expose said secrets to public or private view. The chief's problem is simple. He could borrow a page from the experience book of other cities, which have barred the trust outfit without demanding "evidence."

A curt decree by the chief that the rasslers are in the wrong pew would solve his problem. The trust never argues. When its heads are informed that their shows belong on the vaudeville circuits, they quickly pull stakes, seeking new fields where the suckers are present in plenteous numbers and the box-office plucking is an easy matter of merely raking in the coin. Getting rid of the trust, therefore, is the simplest thing in the world. The Shreveport chief needs only to say "nix" and the deed is done.

New York Yankees Grab Off Phenom

Scouts Passed Up Live One in Sally League and Barrow Cops Prize; Wins Thirty, Loses Four.

BY DAVIS J. WALSH.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 19.—You have heard the story about the ball player who was left behind when the team started north to pay the ground rent. Now it's my turn. The Yankees have a large, healthy party in camp who was bought over the telephone, sight unseen, and the funny part of it is the fact that the gent looks like a real pitcher.

Scouts Passed Him Up.

Scouts are maintained in a manner to which they usually aren't accustomed in order that they may comb the field for promising material but, if any of them ever heard of Mr. Wilcey Moore, of Hollis, Okla., it isn't of record that they paid him the slightest heed.

Up until a few months ago, Mr. Moore had toiled in the ballyard and reached the ripening age of 29 without anyone in particular being the wiser.

However, it so happened that the official averages of the Sally league for 1926 were published in due season and among them could be noted the fact that Wilcey Moore of the Greenville club won 28 games and lost 4.

Edward G. Barrow, business manager of the Yankees, not only could but did note that fact.

"Ah, ha!" quoth he in his best A. Conan Doyle manner. "A pitcher. How do I know he is a pitcher? Anybody who wins twenty-eight ball games anywhere is bound to be a pitcher."

Won Thirty Games.

Mr. Barrow was wrong in only one particular. Wilcey Moore had won exactly thirty games for Greenville but the extra two didn't show because the losers were Richmond of the Virginia league, in a post-season series. Otherwise Mr. Barrow's reasoning was faultless. So was his directness of action.

Clutching a telephone firmly to his breast, he called the Greenville club via long distance and made the deal in a few words. It was a bit of a laugh to the boys but they stopped laughing as soon as Wilcey started pitching. His work with the Yankees here, including participation in a game in which the Cincinnati Reds were held to three hits, has just about assured the young man of some steady employment at attractive pay for the summer season.

NEBRASKA HIGHS IN TENNIS MEET

The annual Nebraska high school tennis championships will be held May 13 and 14 at the University of Nebraska.

The 1926 tennis tournament was cancelled because of wet weather. Addition of indoor tennis courts to the coliseum will permit indoor play for the 1927 rackqueteers in case the weather man turns on the water spigot on the outside courts.

NATIONAL MEET AT IOWA STATE

Grapplers to Clash At Ames This Week For A. A. U. Honors.

AMES, Ia., March 19.—"From Maine to California," is literally true of the entries coming in for the national A. A. U. championship wrestling meet to be held at Iowa State college, Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week.

New England is sending three crack grapplers and the Los Angeles Athletic club has telegraphed five entries, to swell the total to 160. As the entries will continue to come in until Wednesday, Hugo Otopalik, Iowa State wrestling coach, expects well over 200 amateur grapplers in Ames for the A. A. U. meet.

New England Sends Team.

Of the men entered from the New England district Kaplow, a 230-pound heavyweight grappler, is expected to be one of the outstanding heavies at the meet. Kaplow is the one man who is given a chance to beat Strack of the Oklahoma Aggies, eight times national champion. The New England heavyweight is from Dorchester, Mass., and stands 6 feet 3 inches.

Neponen, representing a Quincy, Mass., athletic club, is considered the best 118-pounder in New England. He is 31 years old. Livingston, who formerly wrestled for Williams college, rates high in the 160 pound division.

Los Angeles and Michigan.

The entries of the Los Angeles A. C. are: Jimmie Rivers, welterweight; Morris McGill, middleweight; and Ardouin, heavyweight.

Another distant team to telegraph its entries is the Erie Boys' club of Erie, Penn., which has entered three men.

The University of Michigan is among the late organizations to enter. The five Wolverine wrestlers are Watson and Solomon, 135; Donohue and Sauer, 147; and Thomas, 126.

Church League 'D' Champions.

UNIVERSITY PLACE M. E. QUINTET.

The University Place M. E. basketeers carried off the class D honors in the Y. M. C. A. Church leagues, winning the title game from St. Matthews. The class D competition included athletes under sixteen years of age. Members of the team:

Upper row—Pixley, Hoag, Manager Barrett, Parker.

Dempsey Ex-Champion, But Worth Cool Million

Manassa Mauler Hangs Up New Ring Mark as Merry Little Maker of the Almighty Dollar; Total Earnings During His Career Estimated at Over Three Millions.

BY FRANK G. MENKE.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., March 19.—Everyone seems more or less curious as to "How Much Money Has Jack Dempsey?" So I put the question to him bluntly, whereupon he jerked a handful of silver from his pocket and said:

"This much—and a little more. But I'm not saying where it is because that Jack Kearns is still snooping around—and I want to let that lad run himself dizzy just snooping."

However, while the ex-champion of the clenched fist tossers is rather non-committal, the fact is estbalished that Dempsey is possessed of about $1,000,000.

Sweet On His Hotel.

He owns the Barbara, a Los Angeles hotel, which is valued at $650,000. Once upon a time it wore one of those mortgage plasters totalling about $250,000. But after the Philadelphia brawl Dempsey is said to have removed it and now owns the hotel without any "ands," "ifs" or "buts."

"I was offered $500,000 for the hotel only a few months ago, but $500,000 isn't my price," said Dempsey. "And, furthermore, I don't know if I'd sell it I had $650,000 laid on the line for me.

When Kearns Was Boss.

"Kearns and I bought the hotel together. In those days he bossed it and he filled it with punch drunk fighters who made a gymnasium for shadow boxing purposes out of it. When we 'split' I decided to make a real hotel out of it. I spent $100,000 making alterations and improvements, and changed the order of things.

"As a result, the patronage has increased until now I'm so crowded that often I must turn away. And a full house means nice profits. This hotel is my pet. I like the game and I think I'll just hold onto it and let it turn in nice profits for me and have some fun out of this business stuff, instead of selling and tossing the money into a bank."

Owns Spacious Home.

Let's settle the hotel valuation at the most conservative sum of $500,000 as among Dempsey's assets—and pass on to other things.

Dempsey recently bought a home on Los Feliz boulevard here, with about a mile of frontage and with almost as much depth. The house is set so far back from the street that one almost needs field glasses to locate it. Dempsey could build a ball park on his spacious lawn. And that house, plus the land, is valued at $125,000.

Dempsey owns other parcels of land in and around the town that are valued at $75,000.

No Benefit for Jack.

Just to make good his statement of some years ago, that "they will never need to stage any benefits for me," Dempsey grabbed $200,000 and put it into a fund. He cannot draw the principal during his lifetime, but he gets the monthly interest, which amounts to $1,150.

"How about the bank balance of ready funds?" I asked.

"Well, that was pretty good for a while. But those days have gone. For, y'see, I had to pay the income tax and that was a polt. Then I had to pay my lawyers—and that was about sixty jolts all at once. But I've got 'em all paid off—up-to-date, anyway—and there's a little loose change left."

Figuring Loose Change.

How much the "loose change" amounts to is a matter of guess. But the "loose change," plus some negotiable stocks and bonds which Dempsey owns, perhaps totals near $100,000.

And that makes the million!

Dempsey refused to make a guess as to how much he actually had earned since he climbed into the ring with Jess Willard in Toledo on July 4, 1919.

"I know how much I've earned—know it to a dollar—since I've been handling my own affairs," he said. "But before then Jack Kearns was the bookkeeper, he kept books on his cuff and how am I to know anything about the actual earnings when fellows forget their cuffs are their journals and ledgers and send 'em on to laundries?"

His Fight Earnings.

The fight earnings which are a matter of farly acurate record are:

Willard fight	$ 27,500
Miske	55,000
Brennan	100,000
Carpentier	300,000
Gibbons	265,000
Firpo	470,000
Tunney	750,000
Total	$1,967,500

"The money I got from exhibition bouts puts the fist swinging total over $2,000,000," said Dempsey. "I don't know how much was actually made in moving pictures, on my various theatrical tours, admission fees at my training camps and in a dozen and one other ways that a heavyweight champion can fatten the bankroll. I guess it might have gone well over a million; maybe it was $1,500,000."

His Total Intake.

So Dempsey, in seven years as champion, earned probably $3,500,000, an average of $500,000 annually; he has $1,000,000 "salted away" in one form or another and has a "comeback" ahead of him which will net him anywhere from $200,000 to $2,000,000, according to how successful is that "comeback."

PLANS TO SWIM IRISH CHANNEL

SAN FRANCISCO, March 19.—Now that he has swum the English channel, the Catalina channel and the Golden Gate, Henry Sullivan, marathon swimmer, is planning to condition himself for the Irish channel, which as yet has never been crossed.

Sullivan, who is the only man to swim both the English and the Catalina channels, recently swam the historic Golden Gate "just for fun." His time for the swim was 1 hour 49 minutes, adverse tides hampering the 40-year-old swimmer.

The Irish channel, Sullivan declared, will be a mark worth shooting at. The Irish Free State and Great Britain are separated by some 40 miles of sea water. Sullivan uses the old-fashioned, laborious breast stroke for his distance swimming.

GRID DATES ON LINCOLN'S BOOK

clude eight games, with the possible addition of a Thanksgiving day contest. Coach Browne announces that Lincoln is in the market for a Turkey day game with some out-of-the-state aggregation. However, it will take an attractive offer to draw the Red and Black away from home, as the squad is desirous of seeing the Nebraska-New York battle in the Memorial stadium.

Crete and York.

Crete and York are the new teams on the Lincoln slate, York returning after an absence of one year. Hastings high and Lane Tech of Chicago are the teams played in 1926 not included on the 1927 book. Hastings and Lincoln were unable to agree on dates, while the Chicago game was on a one-year contract.

The "red letter" date on the Lincoln card is the October 8 date with Waite high of Toledo, O. The game will be played in the University of Nebraska Memorial stadium.

Only Available Date.

An effort was made to book the game for a later date, but the Waite team was unable to journey here on other weekends in which the Nebraska stadium would be available.

Crete, with a long string of veterans back in the fold, will appear on the Lincoln home card, while Grand Island, in view of the Third City victory over Lincoln last fall, will be another important home game. Norfolk also is scheduled on the high school oval.

COLLEGE CAGERS WIN THEIR SPURS

Harry" the Tigers were undisputed champions of the Nebraska college realm.

The elongated Harry averaged around 20 points per game, using his height to control the tip-off and send his hands skyward toward the basket at such an altitude that guarding was extremely difficult. The "big boy" has enough weight and stamina to breeze through a strenuous season. Kersenbrock is the tallest active player in basketball today and his ability to come through with 28 points in the national A. A. U. tournament shows that he is far from being a mere local flash.

Consistent Point-Maker.

While the Crete cagester, because of his extreme height, is more or less a scoring freak, he has the ability to get the points — and baskets are the important factor in winning a ball game.

Krejci of Peru Normal was the hub about which the Peru team functioned during the past season, and the Bobcats were beaten only by the Doane Tigers. The Plattsmouth athlete is a versatile performer, a good floor man, dependable basket-tosser and clever dribbler.

Helzer of York college is a great scorer, a cool player and clever at covering the court. He is a two-year man and will serve his second year as York captain next season.

Kennedy Cotner Mainstay.

Kennedy bore the brunt of the play in the Cotner camp the past season. While the Bulldogs suffered a slump, Kennedy's work looked good even in an uphill fight.

McCrady of Hastings was one of the best forwards in the conference. He was the main cog in the Broncho attack and continued to shine although a mid-season injury left him in a battered condition. His dribbling and floor play are exceptional and the fact that he tops the Hastings score column shows his skill as a basket-hitter.

Malm Good Forward.

Malm of Peru is another outstanding forward. He combines weight and speed in such a fashion that he always was a source of worry to opposing guards. He improved as the season wore along and his work drew favorable comment when the Bobcats got into action at the national A. A. U. tourney.

Prather of Omaha university held up in a consistent manner, although playing with an 'in and out' aggregation. Huber, a good scorer last season, maintained the pace again this year.

The conference this year included some exceptional guards, the contest being warm for the guard positions.

Nichols of York college has been an outstanding guard in the conference for three seasons. He is fast at covering the court, which enables him to get in his share of the scoring.

France Clever Guard.

France of Doane, although starting as a forward did his best work as a guard, the Tigers stationing the tall Kersenbrock under the basket throughout most of the play. France's floor play during the season was an important factor in Doane's success. He is an accurate passer, breaks fast and has plenty of endurance to play the court. His best showing was in the games with Peru Normal.

Hunsacker of Chadron was the main strength of the Eagles, Chadron stock shooting skyward during the past season. Wiberg of Wesleyan combined weight with sufficient speed to bolster up the Methodist play; Kroger of Wayne was a running guard with a scoring average of 10 points per game; and Welch of Hastings continued during the past season to play a consistent game at guard.

FAMOUS LIBRARY OPEN TO PUBLIC

LOS ANGELES, March 19.—(I. N. S.)—The great Huntington library, with its collection of priceless books, manuscripts, paintings and objects of historical interest, was open to the public today for the first time since its foundation.

Among the treasures on display are the Latin letter written by Columbus to Royal Treasurer Sanchez of Spain, telling of the discovery of a new world, the only existing copy of the first laws the Bay colony (Massachusetts) printed in 1648; the original documents of Major Andre, George Washington and Benedict Arnold relating to the historic treason plot involving Andre and Arnold, and other relics of vital importance in American history.

Rare books in the library include a Gutenberg Bible and the first editions of Shakespeare. Among the Gainsborough's "Blue Boy" and Stuart's Washington.

The library was founded by Henry E. Huntington, famous California capitalist and philanthropist, and for years has been open to but a chosen few.

Its opening to the public followed Huntington's decision to let it be of the greatest benefit to the world.

The schedule is now being worked on and this will be announced soon.

WILDCAT BOOKED FIGHT TENDLER

you is when he is sitting on his stool in his corner.

He's like a big hound pup that swarms all over you at every opportunity, swinging paws and tongue and tail.

Salient difference, however is the motive. The hound swarms through love and affection. Hudkins swings from motives of personal aggrandizement. Further, he lets personalities creep into the situation.

Vastly Improved Fighter.

Hudkins is a vastly improved fighter since his last appearance in these parts.

He is stronger, for one thing seems able to assimilate a deal more punishment, and is a good deal more of a boxer than before.

If Pete Latzo, or any other welterweight, for that matter, can stand up against him and get his hand raised at the close of hostilities, then the welterweight division as strongest of all the fistic classifications.

While he lasts—and he seems to be getting better physically — Ace Hudkins is going to be one of the real fighters in the profession. One of the chosen few — always chosen by the referee.

He likes to fight, does this Hudkins. Sports, a beatific expression throughout. Enjoys socking to the utmost and does not begrudge a sock or two in return. Which liking may addle the intellect somewhat if persisted in over a space of years, but which should prove quite profitable before "sizzling in the head" forces retirement.

Great Crowd Present.

A great fight and a great crowd Coluna took it all and waded in to deliver his fair share in return. Only thing, he took more than he gave, so, to make things even, the referee had to give the other fellow the decision.

A great crowd—greater than ever Wrigley field has seen previously, unless I miss my guess. Which means that Mr. Richard Donald's proverbial optimism finally has reason for being.

Age Conquers Youth In Racquet Finals

BOSTON, March 19.—(I. N. S.)—Age triumphed over youth this afternoon when Mrs. George W. Wightman of Brookline, mother of five children and thirty-one times a finalist in eighteen years of national championship tennis competition, defeated Miss Margaret Blake of Lenox in the national singles indoor title tournament final. The score was 6-0, 2-6, 6-3.

Mrs. Wightman, after regaining the women's indoor singles crown, proceeded to step into the doubles, paired with Mrs. John B. Jessup. This team was opposed by Miss Blake and Miss Edith Sigourney.

Mrs. Wightman and Mrs. Jessup won the national woman's indoor doubles championship by defeating Miss Blake and Miss Sigourney, 8-6, 1-6, 6-3.

A recent investigation by Commissioner of Big Ten Athletics Griffith of Chicago, revealed that Strand had played with a professional football team and basketball team.

ATHLETIC STAFF AT WESLEYAN U.

Dow Made Director and Durham In Charge Of Grid Squad.

A reorganization of duties in the athletic department at Nebraska Wesleyan has been made, according to an announcement made by school authorities Saturday morning. C. L. Dow has been named athletic director and head coach of basketball and track. Howard Durham, head of the chemistry department and assistant coach of football the past two years, will take over the reins in the gridiron sport, with Dow as his assistant. Francis Alabaster will serve in the capacity of assistant coach. These changes do not involve a shift in the personnel of the athletic departmen.

Tracksters Working Out.

Forty Nebraska Wesleyan track candidates are unlimbering their muscles daily on the Methodist cinders, preparatory to the heavy track schedule outlined by Coach Dow. There will be a scarcity of veteran material in the Wesleyan camp this season.

Oscar Wiberg, holder of the conference record for the shot put in both the North Central and state circuits, will captain the Wesleyan track squad this season. Wiberg is regarded as the mainstay of the Methodist squad, inasmuch as he consistently contributes points in the shot put, discus throw, javelin and broad jump. Danker and Huyck also are possibilities in the weight events.

Shy Seasoned Material.

Aside from Wiberg, the Methodists have little in the way of seasoned material. Wernimont, a high jumper, cleared the bar at 5 feet 10 inches in the conference meet this year and probably will better his previous performance this spring.

In the track events, Hannum, from last year's freshman squad, is doped to lead the field in the distance events. Hull and Pflug, both letter men, are the only veterans remaining for the shorter distances, but Lode and Preston, both sophomores, are expected to add to the Methodist cause in the sprints.

BOSTON BASKS IN SPOTLIGHT

Beantown Famous Again Because of Feats By Fighting Men.

BOSTON, March 19.—Its cauliflower time in Boston and the Hub's pugilistic flower is in full bloom.

Years ago the Boston blossom went to seed. And at seed it remained. The Sullivans, the Langfords, the Matty Baldwins and others who made Boston's fistic garden look like an old maid's backyard in full bloom had faded away. The burning sun of other parts of the country had evidently been too strong for the Breantown aspirants.

Buts it's all back again. From the brush and the weeds have come forth a group of battlers that once more have placed the Boston colors up with the topnotchers.

Flowers Blooming Now.

The flowers in Boston's garden of American ring beauties are bearing names that spell action. Jack Sharkey, Jim Maloney, Dick "Honeyboy" Finnegan, Johnny Vacca, Al Mello, Red Chapman and Chick Suggs are but a few of them.

Of course, of the entire collection of Maloney and Sharkey have garnered the front row in this little exhibition of ringside horticulturists. When Tex Rickard decided to put on his elimination contest of battlers the Boston contribution loomed up big.

Today the show is nearly all Sharkey and Maloney. The Boston boys are going to give a little exhibition of their own in Rickard's New York Garden on May 19. The winner of that battle will stack up against the winner of the Jack Dempsey-Paolino show and then the prize beauty of them all, Gene Tunney will meet the survivor.

Stars in Lower Divisions.

The whirling Hub has sent forth its choicest from the other classes, Johnny Vacca took the blue ribbons away from Fidel La Barba, the California flyweight. Dick "Honeyboy" Finnegan is wearing the toga of the feather-weight division. In the welter-weight group Al Mello is knocking at the garden walls of those who claim the premiership in that class.

DIAMOND STARS UP FROM COAST

California U. Has Sent Ten Ball Players To Major Leagues.

By THOMAS R. CURRAN.

BERKELEY, Cal., March 19.—University of California baseball teams have sent ten players to the big leagues during the past six years, a survey of the college baseball rosters several seasons back revealed today.

Ray Rohever was the first U. C. player to get a big league tryout during the regime of Carl. Zamlock as baseball coach. Ray signed with the Pittsburgh Pirates in 1919, sticking in big-time company for three years. He was then sent to Pacific Coast league. In 1921 his brother, Claude Rohever, also got a chance with the Pirates and stuck the season.

Works and Ellison.

Caddy Works intrigued Pirate scouts the same year and Russ Ellison signed with the Cleveland Indians. After a year's tryout, Works was farmed out to the Texas league; Ellison was sent to Portland.

Moke Myers was taken on by Detroit in 1922. He played ball with San Antonio in the Texas league for three years.

Ray Douthitt went up to the St. Louis Cards in 1923. Since then he has developed into a star player on the team that won the world's championship under Rogers Hornsby last season. John McGraw, manager of the New York Giants, is reported to have predicted that Douthitt will become the greatest outfielder in the National league.

Acquired by Cardinals.

Dutch Thompson, George Makin and Bob Minty, former Golden Bear baseball players, had chances in the big leagues with the St. Louis Cards, but all three eventually were farmed. Makin is now with Oakland in the Coast league, Minty is playing in the Texas circuit.

Jack Nounnan of the 1926 varsity is the latest California player to go up. He is now in spring training camp with the Detroit Tigers.

Giants Consider Coast.

With the Pirates and the Cubs coming out to California regularly for spring training and with the Giants understood to be considering this state as a potential training camp in 1928, prospects for more California collegians getting major league tryouts are encouraging. The players listed above are from the University of California alone. Stanford and the University of Southern California, the two other big universities in the state, also are well represented in the majors.

Gar Wood Hangs Up Power Boat Record

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., March 19.—(I. N. S.)—Gar Wood of Detroit, international speed boat champion, piloted his hydroplane, Miss America, V, to another world record in the Biscayne Bay regatta this afternoon when he drove the second lap of a twelve-mile race at the speed of 68.05 miles per hour, or 1.88 miles per hour faster than the new world mark for salt water he made yesterday.

His younger brother, Phil Wood, piloted Miss America IV in an exhibition against time and made one lap at 67.43 miles per hour.

AUCTIONS BRING BUYERS!

With the changed conditions of recent years many people have changed their business methods. This is especially true of real estate transactions. And no method of selling property, large or small, has gained popularity more rapidly than the public auction. Property owners have learned that auctions find the buyers on a certain date and the results are satisfactory to the buyer and seller. Auctions are popular because they get immediate action and they are such an ordinary occurrence now that the public does not look them as a forced sale caused by court order.

Since March 1, 1927 we have conducted auctions of the following properties:

The C W. Leland house at 1001 So. 31st to J. S Alderson and a lot on "C" St., to G. A. Dahlin.

The Elmer Eicher house at 532 No. 34th St., to Dr. Merritt Pederson.

The Peterson farm at Davey, Nebr., to H. E. Anderson of Lincoln.

The Malcolm Grain Co., elevator at Malcolm to F. S. Davey of Lincoln.

The Henry Dulitz farm near Cairo, Neb., to A. V. Yenny of Grand Island.

The National Investment Co., farm in Saline County to John Philipi of Tobias.

The attendance and competition at these real estate auctions has been very good and the prices realized were very satisfactory.

If you want to sell your property in 1927 an auction properly conducted will find a buyer.

We cordially invite you to call and let us explain our methods and terms.

WHO EVER HEARD OF LADIES SHOPPING AT A LUMBER STORE

Much less inspecting them as some 200 lumbermen's wives did during the Nebraska Lumber Merchants' convention held in the city last month. A Lincoln man, whose daughter is an out state lumberman's wife, told us that she talked more about Pauley's office and store than about the governor's offices. That only challenges us to want you Lincoln ladies to acquaint yourselves with our offices and facilities for making your homes beautiful.

We "shine up" for you every day and will be disappointed if you do not avail yourselves of our Building Library and Home Beauty Studies.

Its broad frontage to the street side, this little bungalow of Spanish design, is most attractive. The plan has been laid out so that the living portion, which includes the kitchen, has been placed in front, with the bedrooms at the rear.

Entrance is through a covered stoop directly into the living room. A wide plastered arch is used separating the living and dinnig rooms While the kitchen is small (of the buffet type) yet it is conveniently arranged and the breakfast alcove adjacent makes it complete in every respect. The stairs to basement lead down from the grade door landing, where the ice box is located.

Two good sized bedrooms and bath open off a small center hall. The closets are very roomy, the rooms well lighted.

A full basement is partitioned off with a laundry, furnace - room, vegetable and storage rooms.

The floors throughout are of oak, waxed, with linoleum over a pine floor in the kitchen and tile in the bath. The woodwork is pine, stained and enameled in the bedrooms, with doors of birch stained a walnut. The walls in the living and dining rooms are of rough plaster, the bedroom walls painted. The lighting fixtures are of old iron, harmonizing with the painted rough walls.

The exterior walls are of frame construction, using metal lath and plaster on the outside, with red Spanish tile on the roof.

The cost of this home is placed at from $5,000 to $6,000, exclusive of heating and plumbing.

Much Favorable Comment

Pictured here is the new home of Mr. and Mrs Earl B. Wilson, 3000 Summit Ave, Lincoln. Much favorable comment has been given to the interior of this home, because of its authentic and beautiful furnishings. It is one of the truest-to-type New England Colonial homes in Lincoln. Built by the Rathbone Carpenter Co

When Beauty and Authentic Design Were Sought—

Curtis Woodwork Was Selected

Mrs. Wilson has long studied interior designing, decorating, and furnishing, and her new home reflects her splendid taste and knowledge. Time, thought and money were not considered in gaining the desired effects.

Antiqued ivory trim, corner cupboards with witchcross panels, whale oil lamps. Curtis six-panel doors with H. & L. hinges—all contribute to the true beauty and authentic design of this beautiful Lincoln home.

Curtis Woodwork was used inside and outside because Curtis Colonial designs are truly Colonial.

BY LULU MAE COE.

Probably the hour in which the present was being preserved for us this Sunday was the hardest time in the lives of these little boys of forty or fifty years ago.

Even those whose age was only a fragment of a year weren't fascinated by this process of being tucked into a prickling starched set of ruffles. The stern, set countenances of the two and three-year-olds betrays that they protested; but protested in vain.

The cold iron clamp that kept at least the head of the wriggling youngster immovable was doing its worst, and that "eyes to the front effect" was gained because each well conducted "photograph gallery" had one brace that did dire damage if the subject tried a little free movement. It is apparent from the wide open eyes that they sought the "birdie" high in the air above the queer black cloth in and out of which a man popped with amazing frequency.

The years to come were of slight interest to those babies As far as they were concerned, time could end at that moment

However, the ordeal was lived through. It left no lasting mark on tortured children Ambition gripped them, and won. Only the fortunate few escape its lure.

By different routes they have come to Lincoln, and have become well known business and professional men. Some were brought here, and later approved the choice, Others chose it out of many cities.

In between those days when they were dressed in their best and compelled to have their "picture taken," and today, when they sit in conference, ring buzzers, promote business and the city, they can remember a long period of happy boyhood. Boyhoods of small towns, whose main street was but a block or two from the wide open spaces, or boyhoods of the country, but all happy boyhoods.

"Had as Much Fun as Anyone."

These men agree that they had more fun in their boyhood than do the boys of today in their more modern age They had to work harder than the average boy of this year, but when they played, they played.

"I yield to none in the fun I had in my youth," says R. M. Joyce.

"I camped and fished along the Cedar river in Iowa, and there isn't a more beautiful spot in the world."

Mr. Joyce spent his youth in Vinton, Ia., and it was a boyhood not different in outward aspects from a boyhood of today, except that many luxuries of today's childhood were absent.

"I played baseball and played the cornet in the band, but I enjoyed the camping and fishing more than anything else.

"We had to make our own fun, and we appreciated it. I remember my first wagon—the carpenter cut the wheels and his son and I finished it. I knew the work that went into that wagon, and it meant more to me because of that.

"It was a great boyhood—and I had all my fun without spending money."

Like other boys of his day, he spent his vacations with odd jobs.

"I ran errands or did any other job that offered itself. I earned five or ten cents a week, which was a lot in those days.

"My first money came as a boy when I drove cattle into market for a cattle buyer. I had a fine pony and dog, and I earned my first spending money bringing the cattle in."

"Those Were the Days."

Judge Jefferson H. Broady is a native Nebraskan, having been born in Brownville. With his family he came to Beatrice at the age of five, and within a short time to Lincoln. He is firm in the belief that boys had a better timein earlier days.

"We had more fun than anybody when I was a child. The boys today don't have half the fun we did, because they don't have the open spaces to play in.

"We had the open country all about us, and it was splendid for playing Indian. Then there was the swimming hole for summer and lots of sledding and skating in winter.

"When I was a boy the snow was deep enough that we had a cave, between Ninteenth and Twentieth on Sewell, as it is now known, a block long, tnd all hollowed and made into rooms. You know you couldn't get enough snow to do that now.

"We used to hitch as many sleds as we could find to an old horse, and have a fine time in the snow. After every snow, George Dayton would let us take some of his hounds and go rabbit hunting.

"We worked, too. I have helped to set out acres of vegetable plants on the present site of the country club. I used to sell vegetables, too, and pull weeds for spending money.

Liked to "Go a-Fishin'."

Dr. E. J. Angle feels that he inherited his interest in his profession, as there had been physicians in his father's family for 100 years. His sister's husband was also a physician, which heightened his enthusiasm. However it was he knows that he decided at a very early age to be a doctor.

He knows that he enjoyed his boyhood in Cedarville, Ill., because could enjoy the sport he liked best, fishing. Dr. Angle has been a life long nimrod, from the days he whipped the streams with a plain pole and a plain hook until today when he delights in all the latest equipment.

The woodlands about his home afforded excellent spots for botanizing, his second hobby, and he learned much of the flowers and ferns and mosses in those early years.

"I made most of my own fun, but the biggest event in my life was a circus. I did enjoy a circus."

In his earlier school years, Dr. Angle was a school mate of Jane Addams of Hull house, whose father was a friend of Dr. Angle's father. At fifteen, Dr. Angle went to Madison, Wis., to prepare for his college and medical school work.

Mark W. Woods was a financier in his youth, after he came from Downers Grove, sixteen miles west of Chicago, to Lincoln at thirteen years of age. at that time, he thought he would like to be a railroad engineer, but instead, he turned to the land for his school money.

"There wasnt much money in Lincoln in those days, and if the boys wanted money to spend or for school, they earned it," he says.

At one time, Mr. Woods had a twenty acre vegetable garden, from which he sold the produce during the summer. Mr. Woods managed to raise early vegetables, and in the days when fresh vegetables were not a year round commodity and when the green things were not shipped in, his garden products always met with favor. He was first in the home garden market with his vegetables, and he cleared a considerable sum of money in his endeavors

Cornfield Where High School Stan

For three years, he raised an 80 acre corn field on the land where the high school now stands. It extended north to O street. During his last year in high school, with his two brothers, Mr. Woods milked 40 head of cows, and sold the milk. The boys brought them in from the farm to their home at Twenty-Sixth and J street.

In addition to carrying papers for more than three years, Mr. Woods did his bit toward aesthetic promotion. The cost of dancing lessons was high in those days, and he leased Walsh hall for a dancing school. The instructor taught about thirty university boys to dance at rates that were considerably lower than those asked by other instructors.

D. E. DePutron is another Lincoln business man that is certain the boys of his day had it over today's boys.

"Today's boys don't have one-half the fun we did. They are too shut in and too hampered by the city."

Mr. DePutron belonged to a "gang" that had its playground on the "disputed eighty," which lay between R and Vine and Seventeenth and Twentieth street. The Rock Island yards now occupy a portion of the acreage.

It was a grand Indian camping ground for small boys, and they made the most of it. The eighty had a lake, and the boys made a

PREPAREDNESS IS NECESSARY

Mrs. Paine Speaks for Compulsory Military Training.

Says Nation Should Be Ready to Meet Any Emergency.

(Special to The Star.)

KEARNEY, Neb, March 19. — Mrs Clarence S. Paine, of Lincoln, former state regent of the D. A. R, and recommended for the office of vice president general of the national D A. R, is for preparedness, as pertains to military training in schools and colleges.

"I am the most peaceful person on earth," said Mrs. Paine, while attending the state D. A. R. convention here." But I do believe in being ready for war if such an occasion should arise. By this I mean that I believe in compulsory military training in every school in the United States, not only for men but for girls also. Not that I hope or even expect they will have use for the actual training in military tactics, but the course in itself is a wonderful training in mental and physical discipline which will be of benefit to every young person. I believe in preparedness, but I do not believe in war."

Mrs Paine said she is confident that the attitude every true D. A. R. is embodied in those words Having had an ancestor in every war since 1620, and she said that most members of the D. A. R could probably say the same, she could not say that she does not believe in being ready for any warlike emergency which might arise In answer to the argument frequently made that the fellow who packs a gun is the one who gets into trouble, Mrs Paine said. "Not if he uses discretion. The only man with a gun who gets into trouble is he who does not know its use and value. A nation such as ours should be prepared to meet an emergency, not hunt one"

Mrs Paine believes that no woman favors war, but she also believes that every American woman is, in her heart, ready to fight if it should become necessary. She bitterly scored "The Women's International League for Peace and Freedom," doubting if any woman actually signs its pledge, once she has taken sufficient time and trouble to read it and give it serious thought.

Mrs Paine is a believer in peace, but not in peace at any price, and she has faith in such groups as the league of nations and world court and their possibilities in avoiding strife by the arbitration method "They would perhaps make the need for preparedness somewhat less urgent, but even a successful league of nations would not remove the necessity and wisdom of military training in our schools," she concluded.

MORE PRODUCTION BUT FEWER COWS

Liebers Tells of Improvement In Dairy Business of Country.

(Special to The Star)

BEATRICE, Neb, March 19, — While fewer cows were milked last year on the farms of Nebraska and of the United States, dairy production increased, according to Otto H. Liebers of Lincoln, manager of the Nebraska Dairy Development association, who was here to meet with dairy farmers. He was accompanied by J. T. Pierson of the extension department of the state university.

There are twelve cow testing associations in Nebraska, said Mr. Liebers, and they are serving to locate the weak spots in the dairy herds. As farmers learn by careful check-up of feed consumption by the cows and their production, which cows are unprofitable, the cow population decreases and the production rises.

Last year was the second one to show a decrease in the number of cows milked, said Mr Liebers

"While production has been growing, consumption per person per year has also increased 20 per cent since 1920, and still the American people are behind those of Europe."

"The dairy business in Nebraska is encouraging," said Mr Liebers "There is no danger of over-production, for consumption is increasing, and there is room for still more increase."

A nucleus to a cow testing association in Gage county was formed at the close of the meeting

Nebraska Sandhills to Supply Entire Nation With Its Fruit

(Special to The Star.)

ALLIANCE, Neb, March 19—Jules Sandoz, of Ellsworth, Neb, the "Luther Burbank of the Nebraska Sandhills", predicts that fruit will be the future gold mine of western Nebraska. The old horticulturist was born in Switzerland 69 years ago He is obtaining a thousand dollars an acre from raising cherries on his Sandhills farm 60 miles east of here.

For over 20 years, Mr Sandoz has been experimenting with fruit culture in the sandhills He obtained his early training along this line in Switzerland where land is scarce and they have to make every foot of ground count and where the seasons are short and the labor long and tedious. The old horticulturist can close his eyes and see visions of canning factories dotting the sandhills region, which embraces Sheridan, Garden, Grant, Arthur, Hooker, McPherson, Thomas, Logan and Blaine counties He can also see in the future flourishing fruit orchards on every hill throughout the length and breadth of the large area.

"The McIntosh Red, the finest apple that grows in America, is particularly well adapted to the sandhills," says Sandoz. "In one or two places in Canada and in the Bitter Root valley in Montana are the only places where these apples thrive. They are far superior in quality and flavor to the Delicious, Winesap, Jonathan or any other apple now familiar to this locality."

Right on top of the sandhills is the place, says Mr Sandoz and there are enough of them to grow all the fruit that can be used in the United States, if they are properly cultivated

He has developed a vineyard of Red Lucille grapes, the most luscious in the whole list of grapes, and they grow abundantly. He does not favor the Concord grape because it winter kills in one or two seasons and he no longer plants his trees and vines in the protected valleys, because the drainage makes freezing of the roots too easy

"Apples, cherries, plums, pears and grapes grow better on top of the sandhills than they do in the lower valleys," the sandhill naturalist declares

He came here when the Indians swarmed the plains and he lived with the Sioux tribes for the first two years He knows the country as few men know it and he says from actual experience that the sandhill region will some day supply the nation with fruit

CHEVROLET CHIEF SHOWS OPTIMISM

Scouts Theory That "Saturation Point" Reached in Car Market.

An optimistic note on the spring business outlook in the automobile industry, discounting the 'saturation point' bugaboo and pointing out favorable conditions throughout the country, is sounded in a statement just issued by William S. Knudsen, president of the Chevrolet Motor company.

"In forecasting a continuance of good business prospects for the spring months, I am perhaps influenced by the aspect of our own sales which have never been better in the history of the company," said Mr. Knudsen.

"As evidencing steady growth in automobile production during this period, statistics issued by the United States department of Commerce for the last three years covering the six months from January 1 to June 30 are interesting The figures for these years follow:

1926	2,450,780

"With these figures showing the business on the upgrade generally, there are only two reasons which could be advanced for a possible decrease in sales—first, reaching the so-called 'saturation point' — and second, a general decline in business producing a reactive tendency in buying.

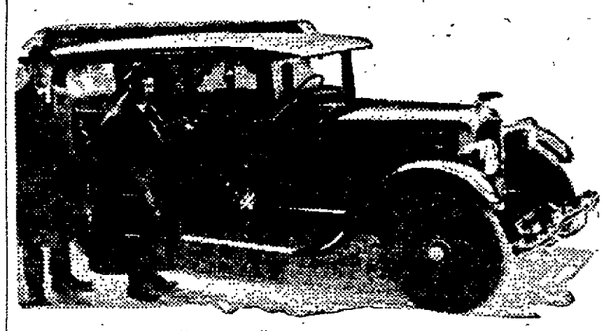
"No one has ever been able to advance any reasonable formula for figuring the 'saturation point.' The 'two or more' car trend is so pronounced that former theories are being constantly upset. If we knew the total area which would be occupied if all cars produced were running within that area, making it impossible for this space to accommodate any more cars, some basis would be available for figuring 'saturation.' But such a situation is impossible—and we may leave the 'saturation point' for the future to determine, inasmuch as the human mind will find it possible to open up any bottle-neck of traffic congestion which might develop.

"As for the general trend in business, country-wide reports show the usual spring activity is opening-up twenty days ahead of schedule. With the winter fairly mild, marked only by severity in spots, rapid acceleration of municipal and private construction operations is indicated. Farming should start early due to the good weather and manufacturing operations generally are in excellent condition.

"Rapid turnover at smaller profits is the keynote throughout industry as reflected by our country's business. With this policy can only come a demand for more tranportation.

"The shippers are demanding better freight service; the business traveller is demanding better train service and the automobile user is demanding better service of his car, and the firm that is in a position to assure the buyer this better service can have nothing but bright prospects for the spring of 1927."

A Knight Greets the President



"'Tis a mighty fine carrr."

With a rolling of many R's, thus spoke Sir Harry Lauder, famous Scotch singer and comedian, on seeing the Studebaker big six president, in which he was riding, plow up the deep snowdrifts near South Bend, Ind., when he recently visited friends in that city.

In spite of the cold weather, Sir Harry, with the help of a generous ankle length overcoat, wore his ever present open air kills.

When in South Bend visiting Don McGregor, business man of that city, and friend of the Scotch singer, Sir Harry had placed at his disposal the president, the leader of Studebaker's line of custom sedans.

AUTO NOTES

Correct Air Pressure Is Necessary for Tires.

Learn the correct air pressure for tires and check it—with a gauge—every few days. Remember that four pounds less of pressure in a balloon tire of a certain size, for which the correct pressure may be thirty pounds, is just as serious as the loss of two or three times that much in a high-pressure tire of corresponding size.

Noises from Dirty or Worn Brakes.

Screeching brakes are evidence of dirty brakes, provided the brake lining still is in good condition. If the brake lining is worn it often happens that an exposed rivet will scrape against the brake drum. It is well to remember that it is not always possible to determine the condition of brake linings by looking at their edges. Wear takes place more to the center, and if the bands are not concentric with the drums wear may be very irregular.

When adjusting front wheel taper bearings on a car it is a good practice to bring them up tight and then back the adjusting nut off a half turn. This will give necessary play.

When inspecting the car give some attention to all lamps and their connections.

A squeak in the car is warning that something is either loose or dry and needs attention.

Spring U-bolts should always be kept tight to keep the spring leaves from breaking in the center.

When one side of a tire shows more wear than the other side, take the casing off and turn it around.

Better tire mileage may be had by arranging a trip once a week to the service station to test and to pump up the tires.

It is better to have the valves noisy and know that they are seating than to have them quiet and not seat when they are hot.

Not less than one inch nor more than two inches play measured on the rim of the steering wheel should be allowed for easy steering.

Load the Car to Pull Through Muddy Roads.

When attempting to pass through a bad spot in the road which has become flooded, it is best to load up the back of the car to get the proper traction, otherwise there is danger of getting stuck in the mud.

QUALITY RULES BUYING OF CARS

Hupp President Also Sees the Eight Advancing Rapidly.

Returning to Detroit from a three weeks' trip along the Pacific coast, DuBois Young, president and general manager of the Hupp Motor Car corporation declares that quality is to govern the purchase of motor cars this year more strongly than for several years past; that buyers are more critical than at any time since the World war, and that eight-cylinder cars are advancing and increasing rapidly in public favor.

Mr. Young's trip was the culmination of journeys which, since the new year began, have taken him from the Atlantic to the Pacific. They have resulted in conferences with more than 500 Hupmobile representatives, located in practically every leading market center in the United States.

"Those companies which have, for years, consistently built quality into their cars, rather than adopting the expedients of flashiness and price cuts at the expense of quality, are the organizations which will show the most satisfactory results in 1927," he said.

"The buying public is demanding quality automobiles, first of all. Right price is essential, but the public realizes that most prices generally are what they should be. The buyer has come definitely to realize that the most car for the money is not based on the number of pounds of material it will buy, but rather its buying value, as represented in performance, comfort and freedom from service."

During Mr. Young's Pacific coast trip, R. S. Cole, Hupmobile general sales manager, was journeying through the east and middle west, including visits to Boston, New York, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Chicago, Des Moines and Omaha.

"This will be the greatest year Hupmobile has ever enjoyed," he said. "Our retail sales already are moving at the fastest pace they have ever reached, with out whole dealer organization optimistic over the increased business it is enjoying. Our New York distributor, for example, is taking 800 cars in March—the largest number he has ever ordered in one month. Our eight-cylinder sales are gaining steadily, and will move even faster as the months go by. Dealers are tremendously enthusiastic over their prospects with that car."

Mr. Young found the Pacific Coast characteristically enthusiastic. "The Westerners point out that the heavy rainfall of the last winter is the finest thing for crops in the last seven years," he said, "and that whatever business they may be losing now will come along in even greater measure at harvest time because of the assistance this rainfall will give the crops."

He was particularly enthusiastic concerning Hupmobile prospects throughout the west.

MOTORS AND THEIR CARE

Grease Adds Comfort to the Easy Riding Car.

The life and easy riding qualities of an automobile are largely dependent on the care given the chassis and can be made possible by the proper attention given to the parts to be greased. Every car has one of four ways of chassis lubrication, as follows: All bearings lubricated with oil conveyed from one reservoir through pipes; oil cups on all bearings; the old-fashioned grease cup on all bearings, and the high pressure system known as alemite, zerk, dot, etc., which requires a special grease which must be put in with a gun under pressure. Of the oil system, pipes should be kept open and the reservoir filled with oil; in the old cup system, care should be taken to keep the cups filled with grease that will not dry out and one that is a pure lubricant. The light pressure systems now in use on many cars, require a specially prepared grease, known as high pressure grease High pressure is a pure oil with a small percentage of lime, cooked in such a way as to make it a jell Some of the lubricants originally made for the gears may be used successfully if they are made with a lime base. Inasmuch as the chassis comes in contact with more water than any other part of the car, selection of a proper grease is of prime importance. There are two kinds of grease—those made with lime and those that contain soda. The former will adhere to the cups and bearings, while soda-base greases in contact with water will saponify and wash off.

Proper Way to Mount a Tire.

When mounting a tire, never tighten one nut as far as it will go before taking up on the others. Screw the nuts on with the fingers and then give each one a half turn with the wrench, working round the wheel until every nut is as tight as it can be pulled without exerting undue effort. If one wedge is forced in as tight as it will go, the rim is bound to be closer to the wheel on the opposite side than it should be. Unless the wedges are forced in equally on all sides, the trueness of the wheels will be lost and often the tire wobbles from side to side as it rolls, cutting away the tread in a short time.

Add Water When Battery Is Active.

Never put water in a battery if the car is to stand in a cold garage or outdoors in low temperatures. The water is liable to freeze and damage the battery. Always put the water in just before preparing to use the car, so that it may become well mixed with the electrolyte.

Keep Car in Low Gear.

If traffic is so erratic that you must accelerate for the quickest possible get-away, yet may be obliged to stop as suddenly, keep in low gear. This will give surest and quickest slowing down when into the way a moment or two after being told to go.

A TORCHBEARER NEEDED.

Governor McMullen told a delegation of Lancaster county farmers he favored an additional 1-cent gasoline tax for the building of county highways but he said he would not take the lead in making a fight for it.

That has been the great difficulty so far, and one reason why the Mitchell bill, providing for a 1-cent gasoline tax for county roads, went down to defeat. The leadership so vital to a fight of this sort has been lacking. Firm friends of the highway program outside the statehouse and the legislature have fought to the best of their ability. The failure, if such it is to be, may be charged to the perfunctory attitude of those whose word should carry great weight in the final decision with respect to Nebraska's highway program in the next two years.

Leadership is necessary unless Nebraska is to be condemned to two costly years of delay and inaction in the highway program.

Without the additional 1-cent gasoline tax, the amount of funds available for building these very necessary connecting roads, which will bring the gravelled highways to the doorway of the farmer, is practically negligible. At this time 70 per cent of the aggregate taken in from motor vehicle licenses is distributed among the counties. The rest goes to the state. All of the proceeds of the 2-cent gasoline tax fund goes to the state, to be used in developing the state and federal system. But because the counties now receive a portion of the money raised through licenses does not signify there are funds for the building of good roads. This money must be used for maintenance of the roads already built.

With additional mileage in gravelled highways and permanently graded dirt roads, this expense of maintenance is constantly increasing. In Lancaster county it takes all of the $180,000 which comes from the registration fees to maintain the roads already built. Gage and Saunders, each receiving approximately $50,000 as their 70 per cent of the registration fees, have little left for new roads after the expenses of maintenance for the state and federal system are paid. The same situation exists in most Nebraska counties.

The fact is there will be little or no county highway development in the next two years unless this legislature makes provision for it.

That will mean small towns, now, now some miles off of the main gravelled highways, will be denied the benefits of "all-weather" roads for certain portions of the year. It will mean that thousands of the farm homes, off of the principal arteries which have been made fit for travel even after the heaviest rain and the most severe snowfall, when mud roads are made impassable by constant thaws and freezes, will be cut off from their markets. These farmers, who, first through a direct property levy, and later through the gasoline tax, contributed millions of dollars to help pull Nebraska out of the mud, will be barred from participating in the benefits which good roads confer upon any community.

There is nothing fair or just about this.

If the farmers are to pay for building the main highways represented in the state and federal system, why should not the city folks contribute to the construction of the permanent roads connecting the smaller towns and cities, and the agricultural districts with these highways which are open to travel at all seasons of the year?

The farmers of Nebraska want these county highways built. There is very little benefit to the farmer in spending millions upon a state and federal system, if the county units which connect him with it are to be left untouched. After every storm in the summer he will have to slide around in the mud and risk going into the ditch to reach gravel. After every snow and thaw and freeze of winter he will have to fight his way through ruts hub-deep for miles before he can reach gravel. We said when we started in to build highways we were going to give the farmer a cheap and easy means of transportation of his products to market? Did we mean it? If we did, then we are going to shelve our petty disputes over a division of gas tax funds. We will have to stop these raids by individual communities. The first thing we will have to do is to provide some money for the development of our county highway system.

If this legislature adjourns without providing a fund to make a start towards the development of county highways, it will have failed to perform its most important duty.

Nebraska has already spent $27,000,000 for permanent roads—the greatest investment in any one single enterprise.

It surely will not restrict the benefits arising out of this huge expenditure very largely to those who are fortunate enough to live on those roads in the state and federal system which have been developed. The failure to provide for a county highway system means precisely this. It cuts off more than half the towns in Nebraska. It eliminates more than a third of the population.

Those who have been making a lot of noise about helping the farmer do not have to look to Washington for the dangerous and menacing expediency of putting him on stilts. Give him gravelled highways for his trucks and his wagons so he may reach his markets without loss of time and heavy expense. Give him a chance to bring his grain, and his livestock, his butter, and eggs and cream to market whenever he wants to, regardless of weather conditions, in order that he may sell when he can get the highest prices. Give him a chance to get to market, without the loss of a full day's time. The farmer's time is just as valuable as that of those who live in the city.

A legislature which refuses to lift the farmer out of the mud closes its eyes to the economic interests of this state. It can only pull him out by providing funds for this county highway system. That is what the 1-cent gasoline tax will accomplish.

A MISSING TRIBE.

In the mountains of northern Japan explorers have discovered what is known as the "lost village."

Its 152 inhabitants do not speak modern Japanese. They dress in styles of centuries gone by, blacken their teeth, and live entirely on fruits and vegetables. None had ever heard of an outside world.

The investigators believe the villagers are descendants from the Keike clan, which was defeated by the warring Genji about 700 years ago. Its survivors fled and and disappeared in the mountains.

We live in a small world.

LUCK TO JIM REED.

Refused permission by the United States senate to continue his campaign investigations, as a result of a filibuster conducted by his distant cousin, Dave Reed of Pennsylvania, and further hemmed in by a ruling which deprived him of funds, the fiery Jim Reed of Missouri has determined he will not be handcuffed.

The chairman of the senate investigating committee has been conferring with his colleagues in order to find a way to proceed, and believes he has hit upon a solution.

Luck to him!

Second only to the very conspicuous work of Walsh in draggling forth the facts with relation to the corrupt leasing of valuable naval oil reserves, of Wheeler in forcing the retirement of the incompetent Daugherty from the office of attorney general, Reed's work in Pennsylvania and Illinois has been of great value in restoring honesty and decency to public life. The elections in those two states, which resulted in victories for Vare and Smith, were a shame and a disgrace. The huge campaign funds which were raised there threaten the continued existence of democratic institutions. Let Reed go on! If there is any one man in the United States who will drag the dark secrets out mercilessly and uncompromisingly, without regard to politics, or to individuals, it is Reed. That is what the gang feared when they tried to prevent him from continuing his work for decent government.

HAPPINESS AND PLEASURE.

Practically every act of every human being has for its purpose the promotion of the happiness of the person engaged in such act. Unfortunately, however, too many mistake mere pleasure, the enjoyment of the moment, for happiness and the ultimate result is directly the opposite of that intended. Unhappiness in the normal persons is certain to follow pleasure if the attainment of the latter is at the expense of another or is not the result of wholesome, inoffensive activity.

The terms "happiness" and "pleasure" are so frequently confounded that they may be regarded by many as synonymous. As a matter of fact they are little related and the unhappy person may seek pleasure, which is a mere transitory thing, as a means of temporarily banishing the unhappiness. At best, however, the absence of the unhappiness is but for the time being, unless its cause be removed.

Happiness is a state of mind and the very best means of bringing about such condition is by putting some other or others in such state—by making others happy. All too frequently the acquisition of pleasure has just the opposite effect. One may absent oneself from a place where his or her presence would result in the happiness of others, and pleasure may for the time being be felt by the absent one. But thought thereafter of the unhappiness occasioned the others is certain to far outbalance the temporary thrill occasioned by the dereliction.

Some have gained pleasure by witnessing the discomfiture or the suffering of those whom they accounted enemies, but no one has ever gained happiness by anything of this kind. The attainment of power, prompted by personal ambition, has brought pleasure to the successful ones, but never happiness and practically every man who lived by the sword, every soldier of fortune, has died miserably unhappy, some wretched and despised.

Pleasure is more often than otherwise the result of selfishness, while happiness is almost invariably the result of unselfishness. The one is the shadow, the other the real substance; the one is lasting and cannot exist in one who has not his or her own self approval. The other is on many occasions a screen behind which one seeks to hide from one's own conscience.

STRANGE LANGUAGE FOR A JUDGE.

If Federal Judge James A. Wilson was correctly quoted with reference to the parole of Dr. Frederick A. Cook, explorer and oil promoter, convicted of using the mails to defraud and sentenced to serve fourteen years in the federal prison at Leavenworth, the court employed strange language to justify its action.

"It appears to the court harsh and unjust to keep Dr. Cook in the penitentiary," Judge Wilson is reported to have said. This comment was probably inspired by the report Dr. Cook was in poor health and penniless. But from Leavenworth, where the federal prison is located, Dr. Cook was reported to be in excellent health and "full of pep."

Could it be that Judge Wilson has been imposed upon by fictitious reports of the condition of Dr. Cook's health?

Then certainly his explanation it was harsh and unjust to keep Dr. Cook in prison would meet with public approval. Even the most hardened criminals are not held in the penitentiary if declining health numbers their days. But because a prisoner is penniless offers no very good reason why Dr. Cook should be released from prison. He had a fair trial and was fairly sentenced. He sought to perpetrate a despicable fraud upon the unsuspecting public. Even after his claims to discovery of the North pole were rejected, Dr. Cook was very much in the public eye and was recognized as a hero of polar exploration. He endeavored to capitalize this homage which a people shower upon those who venture into the distant places. Except for attention he had attracted previously, Dr. Cook could have gotten nowhere with his oil promotion.

He has served but three of his fourteen year term. His release at this time provides another illustration of why law is not respected in this country. We are too chicken-hearted towards law breakers.

INDUSTRIAL GAS FOR NEBRASKA.

Four great companies have actively projected themselves into the fight to supply Kansas City with industrial gas. With it comes the proposal to build a pipe line from the Panhandle fields in Texas to Kansas City, a distance of 410 miles, in order to deliver natural gas for domestic and industrial purposes at from 17 to 30 cents per thousand cubic feet.

Back of it is a law recently passed by the Texas legislature which compells oil companies, prospecting for oil, to take care of the gas flow instead of turning it free into the air as has been done with millions of cubic feet. Vegetation was being seriously affected by the gas as a result of wholesale development of the oil fields.

A much more promising field for a market for the natural gas looms in Nebraska. By extending the proposed pipe line 200 miles, the promoters could supply St. Joseph, Omaha and Lincoln with gas for domestic and industrial purposes. This entire territory offers a potential market for a product which has been neglected in the much greater riches to be had from oil development.

THE SCHOLARLY COP.

M. Louis Andrieux, 86 years old, the former prefect of Paris police, passed the examination last week for the degree of doctor of philosophy. He retired a few years ago and studied the works of Alphonse Rabbe and Abbe Cassendi, two obscure theological and astronomical philosophers.

Somehow, the story does not fit into the American conception of the king of the cops. Most of our chiefs have risen, by virtue of nerve or political drag, from pounding the pavement to the ease and power of bossing. They are not, as a rule, lovers of philosophy; nor are they generally aware of the fact that Alphonse Rabbe and Abbe Cassendi ever existed. In fact, the few college men who have entered the business of crook-busting have not been notable successes. One officer, fresh from the campus, was recently bounced in Indiana as incompetent.

It would be refreshing, however, to have chiefs who knew sociology and criminal psychology. Their lectures to the amazed force would be delightful, even though they were altogether ignorant of the location of the palaces of vice or the methods of crackamen.

Will On Mexican Relations

BY WILL ROGERS.

Well all I know is just what I read in the papers. I pick up my papers this morning and what stares me in the face but the following headlines, "Going to break off diplomatic relations with Mexico, and lift the arms embargo, and allow arms to be shipped in to any revolutionists."

Now get that will you? Here we are sore at Mexico, and because they dont do exactly like we want them too, why we are going and lifting the embargo on all ammunition and arms. We are going to allow, and even encourage, all the bloodshed we can, just because we are having an argument with them. Instead of us going down and either licking President Calles, or if we are not, why then quit arguing with them. (Either do one or the two.) But no, we are going to allow guns to go in and let some revolutionists get even with President Calles for us. We are going to start the bloodshed all over again down there.

Here we are the nation that is always hollering for disarmament, and peace, and just because we are not smart enough to settle our differences by diplomacy (because we have none) why we are going to make it possible for somebody else to exterminate the faction that we don't like. Suppose they don't like Coolidge down there, and they would allow arms to be shipped into this country to arm a revolution against our government that is in power. Boy, what a howl we would put up. But its us doing it down their way now, so thats all right. Here is the humanatarian nation of the world fixing so more people can get shot. Fixing so Mexico can get all the guns they want, is just like going to Sing Sing prison and giving everyone in there a gun.

Who's To Blame?

We assisted one side in the revolution in Nicaragua. We have taken sides in China. Now we are going to help some ambitious politician gather together a lot of ignorant peons and go forth to start a new revolution in Mexico. All because we have to admit ourselves a failure as diplomats in dealing with them. The people along the Mexico border that deal with Mexico every day, do it and do it without hard feeling or bloodshed.

Last week I appeared at Tuscon, Arizona. Thats seventy miles from Nogales. I got a lot of wires asking me if I wouldnt please come down to Nogales. Thats the town on the very border, part in Mexico and part in Arizona. Well the next day before going to Phoenix why Banning Vale, one of the owners of the big Empire ranch, of 275 thousand acres, took me and an old cowpuncher friend, Ed Echols, a great contest roper, who lived down that way, why we went by the ranch and then on down to Nogales. Was met by the mayor and all the towns leading citizens, and right on over the line with just a wave of the hand into the old Mexico. There we met a gang from their side, including their mayor and the presidents of their state. After seeing the town, all met up in a big hall in a brewery, and had lunch, and good beer. (Nobody drunk and nobody bootlegging.) Had a few speeches, and a few laughs. I was welcomed by the presidente. Said if they had known a little sooner they would have put me on a bull fight. (I was glad they dident know sooner.) Well, what I am getting at is not to tell how I was welcomed in Mexico. But the friendly way the people of our side of the line got along with the ones from the Mexico side.

Just Common Sense.

All this argueing between the two governments meant nothing to them, and here they was having more amounts of business dealings every minute of the day than the government has in a year. I met Bud Parker, a cattle dealer who had brought out over 25 thousand cattle from old Mexico in a year, arranged the duties to both countries, as there is an import duty by us, and an export duty to pay to Mexico. Anything one side of the town did the other was in for. Here they are supposed to be a wild and wooly western town, and their men are able to have common sense enough to know how to deal with each ther, and yet the higher up our officials get, the less they seem to know about human nature, or how to deal square with nations the same as they would with individuals.

Each side down there know how to give as well as take. The Arizona side dident send them a note every morning making some complaint. If there was any differences of opinion both sides knew they could get together and talk it over, without having to politely insult each other through diplomatic correspondence. It looked like a town to me where everybody was tending to their own business instead of somebody else's. There was a colored regiment stationed there, the 25 infantry, and even they got along fine with both our side and its citizens, and the Mexico side.

Fifty Years' Notice.

Mexico by an overwhelming vote changed their land laws in 1917. This fellow thats in now dident pass the law. He is only trying to enforce the constitution. They give America 50 years to get the oil out from under the land, and then they want to divide the land up with the natives. Now that dont seem so unreasonable to give you fifty years. We say its against our laws. Our Laws. Whats our laws go to do with Mexico?

Personally I dont think Doheny, and Sinclair, and the Standard and all of those are undergoing any great hardships and starvation. I doubt if Mexico owes them anything. We have got out more than we put in. We make drastic laws and stay with 'em. Dident we pass an emigration law to even keep people out of our country? Well that was all right. It was a good law. Its our country and we got a right to say who shall come in, but of course it was discrimination. Now cant Mexico pass a land law if it gives you fifty years warning? I think that is about the longest dispossess notice I ever hear of. When we started prohibition confiscated and threw out of business millions and millions of dollars' worth of property that had always been in a perfectly legalized business. We didn't give them any fifty years notice, did we? And they were our own citizens. I wish our Mexico relations was in the hands of some common sense old cowmen, that "savied" human nature, and not a so called diplomat who thinks he is insulting you in such a diplomatic way that you will never find it out.

We don't want a man that knows phrases for a diplomat, we want a man that knows people.

A Futile Division.

Sutton, Neb., March 17.

To the editor of The Lincoln Star: Why do the leaders of the democratic party waste their time on the prohibition question and divide the party? Don't they know that the only way to modify, repeal, or localize prohibition is through the eighteenth amendment. Electing a wet president, a wet congress, a wet governor, or a wet mayor won't do it. There is not the remotest chance of this. Not a single amendment has ever been modified or repealed after its adoption. Prohibition has been before the country part of the time for seventy-five years, and all the time for fifty years.

The eighteenth amendment received the highest percentage of any. It was approved by forty-six out of forty-eight legislatures. Half the states were bone dry before its adoption and nearly all of the remainder had local option. This country, part wet and part dry, is an impossible anomaly. Liquor from a wet state is bound to leak into dry states. That was the actual experience before the adoption of the eighteenth amendment, and was one of the reasons for a national law.

The constitutionality is unquestioned. With a single exception any amendment may be adopted and made a part of the fundamental law. The language of the constitution is so plain that even a police court lawyer can understand it. Besides the supreme court has unanimously decided in its favor.

Even if there were no legal restrictions, light wines and beer will not stop bootlegging for stronger dope. Neither will government despensaries. This was tried in Canada. There is another reason why the democratic party should not commit suicide by squabbling about prohibition. A wet democratic candidate cannot carry any of the trans-Mississippi states with one possible exception. He cannot carry all the Southern states, perhaps not more than half. He cannot carry any large proportion of the so-called wet states of the east, even by the most popular candidate.

True, the republican party is also divided on the prohibition question, but that is only on the surface, and the loss of voters will be nominal. If the democrats are forced to take a stand let them stand for a strict enforcement of the law as it stands. Woodrow Wilson once said "I would rather be defeated in a cause that will some day triumph, than triumph in a cause that will some day be defeated." Henry Clay epitomized it by saying "I'd rather be right than president."

The first duty of the country is to clean the Augean stables of corruption in high places. The roll call will begin with Daugherty and Newberry— the list is too long to enumerate.

The so-called good times are mostly the result of mortgaging the future. It is estimated that luxuries and near-luxuries, are sold on the installment plan to the tune of $7,000,000,000 —clearly a case of overproduction. A balancing of accounts comes one day and then—.

A. G. GROH.

Here and There

Lincoln, a Great Convention City.

(Sidney Telegraph.)

Publicity and advertising are as essential to the life of a city as a retail mercantile store. One form of publicity which every live city is continually striving for today, is that derived from conventions. Cities have found that the best way to advertise themselves is by actual contact; and conventions of state or national organizations or associations form a splendid means of furnishing first hand information by actual contact with a large number of persons.

Lincoln, our capitol city, has seen the advantages of such conventions and is today probably the greatest convention city of the state. And Lincoln knows how to entertain its visitors in a way that cannot help but leave a favorable impression with them, which must in turn react to the good of Lincoln.

Ye editor had the pleasure of participating of Lincoln's hospitality during the convention of the Nebraska Press association last week and shall always cherish kindly thoughts toward our capitol city. We are glad to have had the opportunity to again view its beautiful buildings, wide streets and progressive stores; to note its onward progress, to meet a number of its sterling citizens who are responsible for its development and to feel its wonderful hospitality. The outstate visitor at Lincoln is made to feel that Lincoln is his city; and so it should be. It is the capital of the state and he should have a lively interest in its progress. He should wish to know that its buildings, citizenry and institutions are in keeping with the majesty and progress of the state. And that is exactly what one feels who is a visitor within its portals. Yes, we have a right to feel proud of Lincoln, the capital of the best state in the union.

A GROWING INDUSTRY.

(The Oklahoman.)

Whether Oklahoma needs a state bureau of pomology is for the legislature to decide. A careful study of the Rexroat bill may convince the lawmakers that Oklahoma really needs a special bureau in the department of agriculture to supervise and encourage the culture of pecans and other nuts. Study may reveal sufficient reasons why the bill should not receive any support at all.

But the introduction of such a bill has a special significance. It should not be dismissed from consideration merely as an effort to enact another law and create another state department. While it is all of that, it is something more than that. It is an overt recognition of the fact that pecan culture has become an important factor in the economic life of Oklahoma.

All Oklahoma knows that Carter is one of the great cotton-producing counties of the state. But how many of our people know that Carter's 1926 crop of pecans was almost as valuable as her cotton crop for that year? The nuts gathered from the pecan trees of Carter county sold for more than $500,000. And Carter is by no means the only county in the state that has put pecan growing on an intelligent and well considered basis. Pecan culture has become one of the real industries of the state.

Comets and Automobiles

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS,
Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

There is still a great deal that is mysterious, or at least unexplained, about comets. The most powerful instrument of modern astronomical research—the spectroscope—has not yet been applied to their study with all the efficiency of which it is capable: but a step which may prove to be the beginning of new knowledge on this subject is to be taken at the Yerkes Observatory of the University of Chicago next June, when the Pons-Winnecke comet will, it is calculated, approach within four and a half million miles of the earth—one of the closest cometary approaches on record.

Professor Edwin B. Frost, the director of the observatory, and Professor Harvey B. Lemon, of the physics department of the university, have prepared the strategy by which it is hoped this comet may be compelled to reveal the secret of the constitution of its tail. Professor Lemon has heretofore shown that some cometary spectra appear to come from ionized carbon monoxide. This resembles the ill-smelling gas with which over-driven automobiles impress their dissatisfaction upon the public nostrils. Considering the wild speed and often eccentric conduct of comets, it may not seem very surprising that they, too, should leave a trail of carbon monoxide, even though they travel on celestial highways.

Now, the plan is not only to photograph with special cameras attached to the telescopes the spectrum of the comet's tail as it speeds along near the earth (i. e., near for a comet), but also to take this photograph on the same plate on which the spectrum of carbon monoxide under extremely low pressure (to imitate as far as possible the conditions in the comet's tail) has already been photographed. Thus the two spectra will be placed side by side in the most favorable conditions for careful comparison.

The apparatus consists of a two-electrode thermo-ionic tube with a hot electrode as a source of electrons and a nickel plate as the other electrode. This tube will contain carbon monoxide gas under the extremely low pressure of one ten-millionth of an atmosphere, at which these spectra first begin to appear. Pressures in comets, however, are much lower than this. The gas spectrum will be photographed on the plate both above and below the space left for the photograph of the comet's tail spectrum. Thus the latter will lie adjacent on two sides to the spectrum with which it is to be compared. Identity of spectrum means identity of substance.

Thus, if it answers at all, the comet will tell its own secret. But Professor Lemon is not perfectly sure that any answer will come. He is only sure that the experiment is well worth trying, especially with a comet venturing so near. So far only two bright comets have shown the spectrum of carbon monoxide in their tails. These were the Daniels comet in 1907 and the Morehouse comet in 1908. The Pons-Winnecke comet may either not contain this gas or the substance of its tail may be too diffused to show it.

In 1910, when an entirely unknown comet suddenly flamed out in the sunset sky, it was reported that the poisonous gas, cyanogen, was one of its most conspicuous chemical constituents, and unfounded alarm was caused by a story that the comet might come so near the earth as to sprinkle poisonous gas over it. Traces of cyanogen are found in many comets, while all comets show the presence of hydro-carbons, but even if one struck the earth it could scatter no plague, for, as Professor Lemon says, the pressure under which such gases exist in a comet is a thousand million times less than the pressure in the highest vacuum that the most modern methods have been able to produce.

Discoveries In Humans

CHASE FOUND YOUNG MAN PAINTING ON BEACH, TOOK HIM IN CLASS AND HE BECAME CELEBRATED ACADEMICIAN.

Charles Webster Hawthorne Intended to be Merchant Prince But Instead Lived on $1.00 Per Week for Art's Sake

"'That's very good,' commented Chase."

BY PRESTON WRIGHT.

The late William M. Chase, one of the out standing American painters and teachers of his day, was a man of the greatest possible generosity.

It was said of him that no pupil needed to cease studying with Chase because of lack of money to pay tuition. The development of a genuine talent was of far more interest to him than the accumulation of dollars and cents.

It was a delight to him to discover a talent. When this occurred he gave its owner every encouragement. Many of the greatest painters of today owe much to him.

Of all Chase's discoveries, none is so interesting as his discovery of Charles Webster Hawthorne, today a foremost figure in American art and certainly destined to be one of our immortals.

Back in the early nineties, Chase was at the zenith of his fame and his summer school at Shinnecock, Long Island, was known everywhere.

During this period, Hawthorne had come down from his native village, Richmond, Me., to New York to become a merchant prince. He was in his twenties, and hadn't the slightest idea of becoming an artist.

From boyhood he had liked to draw. He had made pencil sketches of boats whichcame up the Kennebec river, of horses, and of circus performers, whose pictures he saw displayed luridly on posters pasted on barn walls.

Had Stopped Sketching.

His father and mother, Joseph J. Hawthorne and Cornelia Hawthorne, admired these sketches, but when young Charles Hawthorne discovered that the other boys of the community didn't draw he suddenly stopped sketching.

"I was a bit ashamed of it," he said later. "It seemed not in keeping with the ideals which the average youth entertained, and which concerned more vigorous pursuits."

While he was in high school he clerked in a local dry goods store. He was a good clerk and the proprietor encouraged him in the thought that commercial success lay ahead of him.

"You ought to go to a big city—like New York," he said. "There's where you'll find opportunity."

Hawthorne went to New York. He got a job as a dry goods clerk.

The desire to draw came back to him. But he thought only of using it in a commercial way. He decided to study designing. So he enrolled in the free classes at Cooper Union and later went to the Mechanics trade school.

The more he drew, the more he wanted to draw. His experience enabled him to get a position in the designing room of a stained glass factory and there a friend suggested to him that he could enlarge his ability by studying at the Art Students league.

Joined Life Class.

He still had no idea of becoming an artist, but the league changed that. He entered there in the antique class, but was so encouraged by his teachers that the next year he entered the life class under George DeForest Brush. That threw him head first into a genuine art atmosphere, and he began to long to paint pictures.

One day, with some other students, he visited the studio of the great Chase. He told him of his hopes.

"Why don't you come down to my school at Shinnecock this summer and study with me?" said Chase.

"I haven't any money," Hawthorne replied.

"Come anyway," urged Chase. "Pay when you can."

Summer came. Hawthorne burned with desire to ogo to Shinnecock. But by this time he had given himself completely to art and he had only a small income, derived from doing intermittent illustrations. It wasn't merely a question of paying tuition. How could he settle for board and lodgings?

He finally decided to go to Shinnecock and look the field over.

He was directed to a boarding house. It looked pretty good.

"What is your charge for room and board?" he asked.

"Eight dollars a week," was the reply.

He turned away. He couldn't have stayed a full week in that place.

Lived With Fishermen.

Some one suggested that he might be able to get lodging at the U. S. life saving station across the bay. But of course Uncle Sam doesn't take boarders. Anyway, the station was a long, long way from the Chase school.

Matters seemed hopeless, but Hawthorne took a walk along the beach and thus came upon a shanty occupied by some fishermen. A Scotchman, named Alan Letto, was the head of the little group. Letto was fetching a couple of pails of water from a well set back in the dunes. Hawthorne had a sudden idea and went up to him.

"I'm wondering if I can't get lodgings with you," he explained, "I'm trying to find a place down here convenient to the Shinnecock school of art, where I hope to study."

Letto didn't like the idea at all.

"There's no place to put you," he replied. And he explained that their fare was of the roughest.

But Hawthorne insisted. He fairly forced himself into the fishermen's domicile. He was lucky. For the next three years their home was his. If one of them fell sick, he took that one's place at the nets. During all that time the per capita cost of living — they divided the costs — never ran above $4 per month. Hawthorne slept on a couch which he improvised in the attic.

Chase Encouraged Him.

Once installed with the fishermen, he had next to consider getting into Chase's class. It is one thing to be told that you can enter a class without money. It is another thing to take advantage of that offer. Hawthorne thought things over. He waited a while. Then one day, when Chase brought his class down to the beach, near the fishermen's shanty, to work, he went out and set up his easel nearby.

Chase saw him painting and presently strolled over. He stood back of the young man, looking at his canvas.

It was a study of a dune, with interesting formations of sand on its side, grass at the top, and a gray sky beyond.

"That's very good," commented Chase. "I don't believe I've seen your work before."

It was apparent that the master had forgotten their meeting in New York. Hawthorne thought perhaps the offer then made him might now be forgotten and his heart sank.

"No," he said, "I haven't done much."

"Come on over and get in my class," suggested Chase.

"I have no money," said Hawthorne. And once more the painter said:

"Oh, that's all right. You can

The Osteopathic Physician Says:

Schools of healing which do not meet the approval of the official medical organizations disappear within a generation or two, according to Dr. Morris Fishbein, who addressed the Association of Commerce in Chicago, recently. In other words he would have us believe that Osteopathy will pass because it is not approved by the American Medical Association. Leaving out the school of mental methods, there are two schools of healing. Both grew out of the ancient medical profession. Both recognize that the living body itself fights disease.

The dominant (chemical) school has adopted the discoveries of Pasteur. He was not a physician but he learned that germs are concerned in many diseases and that living bodies make substances to fight them. So the members of this school are seeking to find ways of putting germs (alive or dead) or germ products into all of our children, factory workers, office workers, soldiers, sailors and every one else to protect them against or cure them of disease. These methods have the approval of the official medical organizations.

The other (mechanical) school of healing represented by the Osteopathic profession also recognizes the ability of the living body to make remedies. Its followers know that living bodies have made the necessary remedies to fight disease ever since there have been living things on this earth. Otherwise animals and men never could have resisted disease until they reached the stage of "civilization" where they could take drugs and other artificial remedies. The members of this school believe that the proper adjustment of the body machine is of supreme importance in the maintaining of health and the production of internal remedies against germs.

G. O. P. LEADERS BOOST COOLIDGE

Washington Political Developments Favorable to Renomination.

Secretary Jardine Asserts Veto Reaction "Entirely Favorable."

WASHINGTON, March 19.—(U. P.)—Four developments tinged with decisive political importance occurred at the white house today.

1—Carmi Thompson, Ohio republican leader, informed President Coolidge that extensive preparations were being made in Cleveland to get the republican national convention to return there in 1928. Later he expressed the hope that Mr. Coolidge would be renominated.

2—Fred M. Warner, chairman of the Ohio state republican committee, informed the chief executive that the Ohio delegation at the convention would be for him, no matter where the convention is held.

3—It was learned the president intends to send a personal representative to the convention; also to inspect sites for the summer white house.

4—Secretary of Agriculture Jardine held a half hour conference with the president and informed him that the reaction to his veto of the McNary-Haugen farm bill had been "entirely favorable."

Warner also told Mr. Coolidge the "people appreciate his veto."

Mr. Coolidge withheld his opinion regarding these developments.

Thompson Enthusiastic.

Thompson spoke enthusiastically of the possibility of having the republican convention return to Cleveland next summer for renomination of Mr. Coolidge in the same hall in which he was nominated in 1924. The hall has been considerably enlarged since 1924, sufficient space having been provided for all convention committee meetings, and Thompson announced he would guarantee sufficient funds for the assembly.

Warner's assurance that the Ohio delegation would be pledged for his re-nomination left out of consideration the movement of friends of Speaker Nicholas Longworth of the house, to have Longworth run for the presidency. Warner, however, assumed that Mr. Coolidge would be a candidate.

A development of far reaching importance may be provided if the president decides to institute a summer white house in Wisconsin, seat of the movement which led the late Senator Robert M. La Follette to become a third party candidate against Mr. Coolidge in 1924.

An Ideal Sight.

Wisconsin is considered an ideal site to meet the president's vacation requirements. He desires to remain within easy distance of Washington, and could return from any place in Wisconsin within twenty-four hours.

Sites offered in the Rocky mountain region, twice as far from Washington, would not provide the accessibility to callers which the Wisconsin location would provide.

Jardine's and Warner's expressions on reaction to the president's farm relief veto were understood to have been gratifying to Mr. Coolidge, in view of contrary reports from some other sources.

Bingham Backs Coolidge.

HONOLULU, March 19.—(I. N. S.)—President Coolidge is the strongest candidate the republican party has had in recent years and would be a certain winner if he ran for a "third term," Senator Hiram Bingham, republican of Connecticut, told territorial legislators here today.

"The democrats and progressives do not want him to re-run," Bingham said, "because they appreciate and fear his strength."

Bingham, who was born and reared in Hawaii, was met off shore today as his steamer was warped into dock by committees from both houses of the island legislature.

COLLEGE VIEW NOTES.

According to the report of Miss Mary Welch, librarian of the public library, 2,060 patrons were received at the library during the month of January. This is the largest number of people ever using the accommodationsh of the library in any one month.

Mrs. Matilda Johnson was stricken with paralysis the first of the week and died Tuesday, March 15. The funeral service was held in Bethany and the remains were taken to Ashland for burial.

The summer session of the college will begin May 31, according to announcement made this week.

Ethel Maude Bradley, who underwent an operation at the Bryan Memorial hospital the first of the week, is reported to be recovering satisfactorily. Her father, Jose Bradley, came from Ethel, Mo., to be at his daughter's bedside.

The Little Symphony orchesra of Union College, gave the fifth number of the college lecture and entertainment course in the college auditorium last Saturday night. Miss Estelle Kiehnhoff assisted with several vocal numbers.

At a town mass meeting held in the city hall, nominations were made for the town board and the public school board, the candidates to be voted on at the April election. Three members of the town board are to be elected. The following namd men were placed in nomination: C. Kuhner, E. A. Kremer, Dr. Johnson, H. S. Copeland, S. J. Quantock. Two members of the school board are to be elected. The following were placed in nomination: Dr. Johnson, Ralph Rhodes, H. D. Enslow, C. V. Keller.

Elder S. E. Wright is in California attending a meeting of the Loma Linda medical college board.

The junior class of the high school gave a three act play, "The Man On the Box," in the high school auditorium Wednesday and Thursday nights to a crowded house each night. The Humann Brothers' quartet furnished the music on the first night and the Hawthorne orchestra, from the reformatory, furnished the music the second night.

The students of the college academy, Miss Grace Buck, conductor, gave the cantata "Queen Esther" in the chapel Saturday night, March 19. The chorus consisted of twenty-three voices. The queen's parts were sung by Miss Lulu Litwinenco and the king's by David Keacher.

The recent library "book reception" resulted in placing about 400 additional books in the city library.

Tablet Will Mark Exact Spot Where This City Chosen State Capital; Pioneer Maps the Site

BY LULU MAE COE

Lincoln is nearing its sixtieth birthday anniversary but the exact location of the spot where this site was chosen as Nebraska's capital has long been in doubt.

Even the few real pioneers who yet reside in the city find difficulty in placing the site. Old landmarks are removed, and the appearance of the best known places become changed and their earlier outlines vague and remote. Likewise, the plat of Lancaster was totally disregarded by the men who surveyed Lincoln in 1867, and it has been difficult to find the early Lancaster beneath the present Lincoln.

The Lincoln chapter of the Sons of the American Revolution for some time has been seeking to locate the site of the Donovan house, wherein the three commissioners, Governor David Butler, T. P. Kennard, and John Gillespie, met to locate the capital of the state of Nebraska. The organization wishes to mark the spot with a tablet. It has finally decided that the old Donovan house stood about 60 feet south and 60 feet west of the southwest corner of Ninth and Q streets.

J. E. Philpott was one of the few persons privileged to be present on that hot July afternoon in 1867, and who recalls the circumstances today. Colonel Philpott is now living in St. Cloud, Fla., and in answer to a letter from J. C. Pentzer of Lincoln, has written some of his memories of that day.

On an enlarged copy of a Lincoln map superimposed on a Lancaster map, Colonel Philpott has drawn on Lot 2 of Block 23 of Lancaster, a representation of the Donovan house, a story and a half stone affair, 25 by 38 feet in size. In the drawing, he has put the house on the south end of the lot to show the site of the house on the original lot.

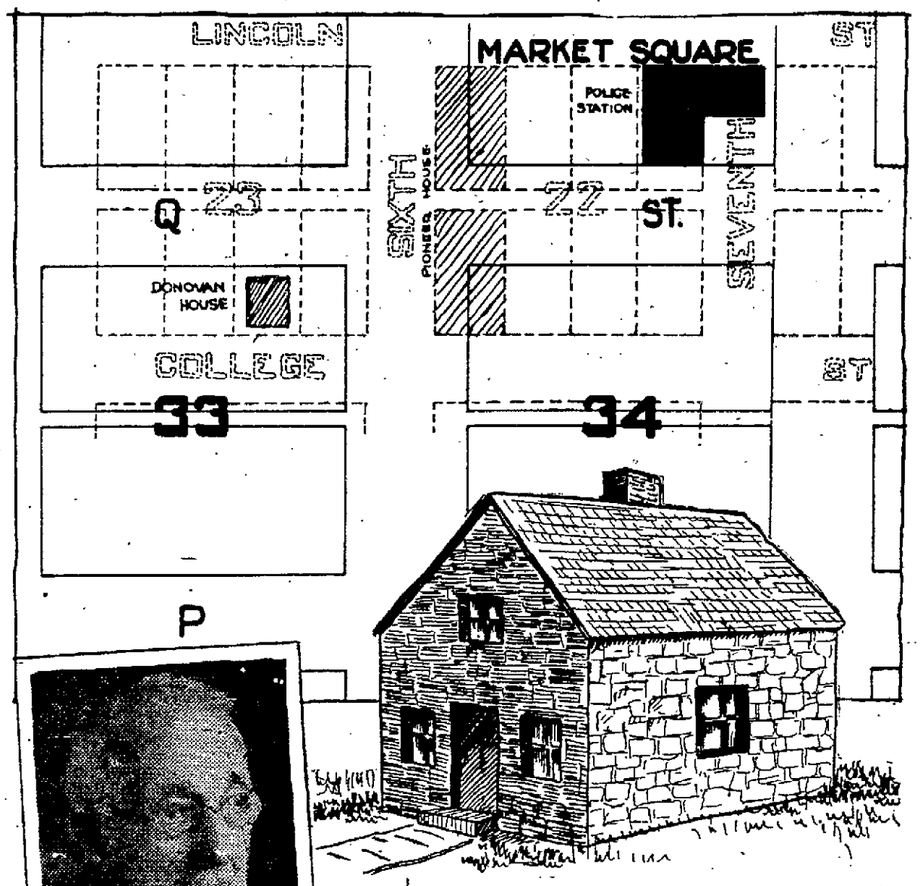
Colonel Philpott writes to Mr. Pentzer that the Donovan house was quite a house in its day.

"For that day—in the state of Nebraska—it might well be considered as a rather imposing edifice. A real "brown stone front," he explains. And he writes further:

"I much admire Nebraska's greatness. The doing of the Sons of the American Revolution ar e parts thereof.

"The markers of its greatness are the praiseworthy doings of those of its descendants who occupied its many thousands of sod houses and dugouts, that as the years rolled by covered the whole state from its east shore line on the Missouri river to the glories of the setting sun on the western boundary."

The meeting at which Lincoln was chosen as the capitol site was held in the attic of the Donovan home. Lancaster, as Lincoln was then known had two votes on the first ballot and Ashland one, the Hayes and Cox history tells us. Mr. Gillespie cast the dissenting vote, fearing that Lancaster was short on water supply for a city of large population. However, as he really favored the site, he voted for Lancaster on the second ballot, and made the choice unanimous.



J. E. PHILPOTT.

TOP—MAP OF A PORTION OF THE TOWN OF LANCASTER (DOTTED LINES) SUPERIMPOSED UPON THE SAME PORTION OF LINCOLN AS IT IS LAID OUT TODAY SHOWING THE LOCATION OF THE OLD DONOVAN HOUSE, A PEN DRAWING OF WHICH APPEARS DIRECTLY ABOVE.

Citizens of the village were gathered about, waiting the verdict. Governor Butler made the formal announcement of the choice. In telling of this Colonel Philpott says:

"Governor Butler came out of the house through the front door in the south end, faced east, and then walked to the southeast corner of the house. From there he went in a northeasterly direction until he was about opposite the center of the east side of the house and about 15 feet therefrom.

"He stopped and, facing the people who were lined up against the house in the shade waiting for him, announced that the commission had decided to locate the new capitol at Lancaster, the county seat of Lancaster county.

"If I am correct as to the location of the Donovan house, Governor Butler's location when he made the announcement was 15 feet east of the house and 29 feet north from College street in the town of Lancaster."

As Colonel Philpott has determined, the Donovan house stood equi-distant from each side of Lot 2. It was built 10 feet north from the south line of the lot and faced south on College street.

College street seemed to be rather an important place, as Elder Young's seminary was also located on College street. In 1864, Elder Young had told John Gillespie that he was founding a seminary on the prairie, which astounded the man who within a year was elected auditor of the territory of Nebraska.

That pioneer man, who brought a colony to Lincoln, or Lancaster, rather, and who urged its selection later as the site of the capitol, had his seminary in operation in 1866. It existed only for a year before it burned, but the Elder was successful in his ambition. It was Lincoln's first "community center," and served as school house, meeting house, and general assembly building.

Autos From Florida And Oregon Roll Into Tonopah, Scene Of New Gold Find

TONOPAH, Nev., March 19, —(I. N. S.) —That the lure of gold is as strong today as in days of forty-nine was shown by the string of autos coming into Tonopah today, some from as far away Miami Florida, some from Idaho, Oregon and Washington. It begins to look as though all the world was coming to view Weepah gold.

A heavy snow storm which threatened to develop into a blizzard coupled with a bitter cold wind kept many of the sightseers in Tonopah today.

The weather brought hardship to the stampeders at Weepah. While there is plenty of food there, fuel is scarce, with coal at $30 a ton.

Expect Big Sunday Crowds.

TONOPAH, Nev., March 19. —(I. N. S.) — Weepah prepared tonight for the greatest influx of vvisitors since two youngsters grubbing near here discovered gold. Two thousand visiters and embryo prospectors will ramble into Weepah tomorrow, it was expected tonight.

There were sixty-four tents in Weepah last night, sheltering perhaps 300 fortune seekers. Tonight additional tents had been staked out.

Cars are bumping into Weepah from all parts of the country. Lumber trucks rattle down into town with their promise of permanent wooden structures to replace the flimsy canvas shelters which now comprise Weepah.

Mrs. Gertrude Cronin, a graduate out the University of California, is one of the women stampeders on the ground. Mrs. Cronin, however, is no clinging tenderfoot. She holds a diploma in metallurgy and has discovered a ledge holding a high content of tungsten.

McGraw's Outlook Bright.

TORNADO CAMP, near Winkleman, Ariz., March 19. —(I. N. S.) After thirty years of roaming through the hills of Arizona and Nevada in quest of gold, C. W. "Dan" McGraw, grizzled prospector of the old southwest, tonight stands a chance of becoming one of this state's wealthiest mining operators and thus achieving the riches he has dreamed about for so long. McGraw is one of the men who discovered the new strike at Dripping . . . in this neighborhood, which is expected by veteran mining men to turn out to be the greatest strike Arizona has had in ten yetrs.

The old prospector today was busy sinking his miner's pick into the claim he has staked out for himself right next to where the discovery was made. He was optimistic that his vein wouldn't "pinch out" and that he would become a wealthy man.

Hundreds of visitors inspected McGraw's claim and old Dan obligingly passed out nuggets for them to marvel at.

Many Visit Winkleman.

CAMP TORNADO, Near Winkleman, Ariz., March 19. —(I. N. S.) —Almost a thousand gold seekers shivered in the open flats below Tornado mountain today.

Primitive camp fires were all that kept off the icy blasts that whistled down from the higher ranges. A few prospectors had shelter tents, but in the mad rush to this supposed new Golconda, almost everything in the way of adequate provisions for the hard life of the desert was forgotten.

All roads leading to and from the Dripping Springs district were choked again today with automobile traffic.

So heavy was traffic becoming that local authorities have established a one way road three miles long stretching from the main highway to the scene of the reported strike.

Already the countryside for miles around has been set out in stakes and newcomers were moving farther and farther into virgin territory.

PLAN TO PUNISH KANSAS RIOTERS

Officials Try to Identify Leaders of Coffeyville Mob.

Continue Search for Negroes Who Attacked Two Girls.

COFFEYVILLE, Kas., March 19. —(I. N. S.)—The feve rof race rioting and mob vengeance in Coffeyville's brief "reign of terror" had cooled tonight and justice prepared to punish those who had taken the law into their own hands.

The search for three negroes whose attacks on two high school girls incited the rioting continues over southern Kansas and northern Oklahoma, but the wrath of thousands who formed mobs and swept down upon the negro section of the city with firearms and lighted torches last night has given way to a quiet but strained peace.

National guardsmen walked the streets tonight in a dripping rain as authorities began an investigation to fix responsibility for the mob uprising. The city hall and jail, which held three negroes at first believed guilty of the attack on the girls, presented the appearance of a shell-riddled French chateau. A house in the negro section lay in ashes and two persons nursed injuries received while violence reigned.

Leaders Sought.

Officials tonight concentrated their efforts on identifying the leaders of the mob which stormed the jail after breaking into hardware stores for guns and ammunition.

Only the courageous conduct of Sheriff McCrabb, who stood firm before a thousand angered white men at the jail entrance and threatening to "shoot it out with the whole crowd," saved the lives of his three prisoners, who later were found innocent and released.

Townspeople and ruralists stood in the shelter of soggy awnings tonight and talked in undertones as the guards walked their posts. They gathered only in groups of twos or threes, however, for the militiamen are under strict orders to disperse collecting crowds.

All negroes and suspicious white persons are being halted and searched for concealed arms. There is little danger of another outbreak. The situation, the militiamen say, is in hand.

College View may have gas. A committee is visiting the homes to ascertain how many would use gas if it were piped out from Lincoln. If the report of this committee is favorable, it is understood that the Lincoln gas company will extend its mains to College View before the close of the summer.

M. K. Holley of Waverly Has Been a Mason for 54 Years

M. K. Holley, member of Unity Lodge No. 163 at Greenwood, Neb., has been a Mason for fifty-four years and is believed to be the oldest member of that organization in point of service within this jurisdiction.

When Mr. Holly was visiting his brother at the age of 14, he became interested in a Masonic chart hanging on the wall.

"How old does a fellow have to be to join," he asked.

"Twenty-one," was the answer.

Then and there, he vowed to join the order as soon as he became of age. On April 5, 1873, he celebrated his twenty-first birthday anniversary and within a month he had made application for membership. In June he was accepted and initiated, passed to second in July, and raised in August of the same year. This was at Custer lodge, No. 34, Rutland, Vt. About 1885 he affiliated with Washington lodge No. 5 at Washington, Kas., and then in 1915 demitted to United lodge at Greenwood.

In his early years, Mr. Holley worked in nearly all chairs of the lodge, but has not attended very regularly in recent seasons. He also is a member of the Eastern Star chapter of Greenwood.

At the age of 17, Mr. Holley commenced railroad work as a station helper on the Central Vermont railroad. Nearly twelve years later when he came west he was employed by various roads, closing this activity with the Chicago & Northwestern at Chicago in 1904. He then came to Waverly on the account of the health of his family and has lived there ever since, with the exception of four years spent at Denver.

M. K. HOLLEY.

In October, 1913, Mr. Holley was appointed postmaster at Waverly and is still holding that position often more than thirteen years service

Married at Rutland, Vt., Nov. 18, 1874, to Miss Ida Coppin, Mr. Holley celebrated his golden wedding three years ago. Mrs. Holley passed away June 24, 1925.

ISAAC NEWTON IS THEME OF READERS HOUR

Today at 5 o'clock at the University club the book lovers will commemorate the two-hundredth anniversary of the death of Sir Isaac Newton, perhaps the greatest scientist the world has known, yet perhaps the most modest, remarking shortly before he died, "I do not know what I may appear to the world, but to myself I seem to have been only like a boy playing on the seashore and diverting myself now and then finding a smoother pebble or a prettier shell than ordinary, while the great ocean of truth lay all undiscovered before me."

Curator F. G. Collins of the University museum, who opened the readers' hours with a dramatic sketch by Alfed Noyes, the British poet, of a historic meeting at Oxford that ruled Charles Darwin out of the company of polite thinkers, will close the series this afternoon with a similar reading from "The Torch Bearers," presenting the story of the great British scientist who saw in the falling apple the falling spheres, and formulated the most significant mathematical law that has ever been conceived by the mind of man.

All men interested in good books are invited to the readings. The series will be resumed in the fall with a notable group of readers.

Leviathan Not Unit Of Dry Force, Says Commander of Ship

NEW YORK, March 19.— (I. N. S.)—"The Leviathan is not a unit of the national prohibition enforcement law," said Commander Herbert Hartley, master of the vessel, today, just before casting off for the liner's fiftieth round trip to Cherbourg and Southampton.

"We are not running the law, nor have we anything to do with it, save to observe our rigid regulations that no liquor shall be sold aboard the Leviathan.

"As commander, I will not and can not be expected to examine the baggage of passengers, or inspect what they have to drink at their dining tables."

Commander Hartley's statement, confirmed by Joseph E. Sheedy, director of the United States lines in Europe, who stood at his elbow, is an outcome of charges made to the customs authorities by Fred Almy, millionaire Arizona rancher, who was fined for the alleged possession of several cases of liquors in his suite on the liner when it landed here Tuesday.

Shortly prior to sailing time a rumor became current on board and on the piers that Lincoln C. Andrews, head of the national prohibition enforcement, was to be on board incognito to investigate the reports of an abundance of liquor among passengers. A diligent search by newspaper men failed to reveal him.

Senator Says Bill Would Hit Gas Tax Payers in Cities.

Declares Proposal is Direct Thrust at State Road Policy.

"The proposed bridge legislation is a direct attack upon the state road program adopted two years ago, and will work an injustice to thousands of farmers living on ungraded roads, and to citizens of larger cities now contributing 2 cents a gallon on gasoline." Senator Clark Jeary declared Saturday afternoon in commenting upon the action of the senate Friday in advancing S. F. 163.

The measure provides for spending not more than $150,000 a year by the public works department to build interstate bridges. Although one of the introducers of the bill, Senator Allen Stinson, denies it calls for use of gasoline tax money, those opposing the bill say no other funds are available. Some of those who support the bill freely admit gas tax money would be used.

Senator Jeary also expressed the opinion that if this bill is passed it will endanger the very existence of the gasoline tax law that is now on the statutes.

"When the people of the state find that by the passage of S. F. 163, they are laying the foundation for not only the building of new bridges across the Missouri river," he said, "but of buying expensive bridges like the one now situated at Omaha, and that the money is to come out of the roads funds, there will arise such protests that in my judgment, a referendum is likely to be demanded by the people."

Intended for Roards.

Senator Jeary points out that the gas tax law was urged and finally enacted for the purpose of grading and gravelling the country roads to enable the farmer to get his products into market more easily, and because it was realized that the prosperity of the farmer goes hand in hand with the prosperity of the cities, the representatives of the people in the larger cities voted for it.

"The operation of the law has been a success," Jeary said, "but the program originally outlined has not yet been completed, and there still remain in every county, roads that have been outlined as a part of the highway system that have not been graded or graveled. There are hundreds of farmers who must travel many miles with their produce before they reach a graveled road."

"There is no emergency existing which demands an assault of a raid upon the gasoline tax fund for the purchase or building of bridges, but the muddy roads of Nebraska are not now getting the farmers to market with their crops

Should Help Farmers.

"I a mof the opinion," Jeary declared, "that the merchants of Omaha and of the larger cities of the state should be more interested in taking care of the farmers and seeing that they have adequate roads that lead to market than to start to expend their money on bridges across he Missouri river for the sole purpose of allowing tourists to pass over the river without charge or to allow prospective purchasers of merchandise outside this state cross the river without paying toll."

Osterman Differs.

Senator Theo. Osterman is of the opinion that the real issue involved is whether interstate bridges shall be paid for out of state funds or out of tolls collected from those using the bridge. The bill provides that money spent on Nebraska's shae of the bridge or bridges shall be repaid out of tolls collected. When the two states joining in the construction of the bridge have been repaid, then the bridge is to be thrown open to the free use of the public. The federal government would furnish money to pay half the cost of the bridge.

Osterman said Saturday that the people of the state would not lose a penny, but the money invested in one bridge would form a revolving fund for the building of other bridges. As soon as one bridge is completed, toll receipts will begin coming in to supply the funds for another.

MIDLANDERS NEAR TO CHAMPIONSHIP COLLEGE DEBATES

(Special to The Star.)

FREMONT, Neb., March 19.—Although they were defeated, one to two, in a contest with the Peru normal negative team at Peru last night, the Midland college debaters today are nearer the state championship than they were before their defeat as the result of a victory Doane college debaters turned in over Nebraska Wesleyan last night.

The contest at Peru marked the close of the season for the Midlanders, their record being twelve victories and one defeat, and a total of 32 votes for their side as compared to 7 for opponents. Wesleyan has won eleven contests and lost one and must still meet Peru. To tie Midland for the state title, the Methodist speakers will be compelled to win unanimously in their last contest.

NURSES ENROLL FOR RED CROSS

Two Hundred Girls in Training Here Attend Recruiting Session.

Two hundred nurses, largely those in training in the city hospitals, were present for a program arranged by the Red Cross committee and supeintendents of the training schools at the Orthopedic hospital Monday evening. The evening was planned to interest senior nurses in the training schools to enroll in the Red Cross nursing service.

The program was a part of the Jane Delano recruiting week observance, a nationally celebrated week to enlist nurses in the Red Cross service. Miss Delano, who devoted her life to nursing and to social work, was appointed chairman of the committee to develop a nursing reserve for the army nurse corps, when the American Red Coss entered into an agreement to that effect. She was also named as superintendent of the army nurse corps by the surgeon-general, in which capacity she visited the Philippine islands, China, Japan, and Hawaii. Due to her efforts, more than 8,000 carefully selected nurses were available for government sevice at the time the United States entered the war, and her leadership was largely responsible for the success of the nurse-recruiting campaign which followed. The Red Cross reserve nurses were the only body of women so organized that they could be called upon for immediate action upon the declaration of war.

Miss Delano also did notable work with the Council of National Defense, in which she was an active member. A large number of young women were enrolled in the Army School of Nursing and appointed to various hospitals for training. A great many of them were recruited though Miss Delano's office in Washington.

The following program was given at the Monday evening meeting: "America," assembly; invocation, Miss Evangeline Fleetwood, Bryan Memorial hospital; slides, "History of American Red Cross"; hymn, "Abide With Me," Misses Eleanor Cross and Ruby Schafer, Bryan Memorial hospital; papers on American Red Cross, Miss Agnes Smith, Lincoln sanitarium, Miss Ethel Colerich, Green Gables sanitarium, Miss Grace Parker, Bryan Memorial hospital; violin duet, 'Melody in F," Misses Margaret Pierce and Edna Pratt, Lincoln General hospital; address, Miss Jennie Higgings, president local Red Cross committee on nursing; duet, Misses Marilda Morbach and Miss Mary Wiman, St. Elizabeth's hospital; reading, "Si and I," Miss Marguerite Lesoing, Lincoln General hospital; solo, "The Cottage Small," Miss Adelaide Snadfort, Lincoln General hospital.

DAIRY ADVANCE SHOWN IN STATE

429 Cows in Testing Association Produce 40 Pounds Butterfat.

Nebraska Has 272 Herds in Organizations to Test Production.

Nebraska, not ordinarily thought of as a dairy state, now has 272 head of milk cows in the official cow testing associations. These herds contain 4,268 cows and belong to twelve associations.

The monthly report just being mailed to all the members from the agricultural college shows that 429 of the cows produced more than 40 pounds of butterfat in February. This number of high producing cows is constantly increasing due to culling and better feeding suggested by the official testers and adopted by the members, M. L. Flack and Jay Pierson, who have charge of cow testing, say.

During February, twelve more cows were sold to the stockyards as unprofitable by members who are paying attention to the production figures. Four more men bought purebred sires to replace the scrubs in their herds. This improvement through culling and breeding is going on constantly.

The Douglas County association, the oldest in the state, has now completed three full years of testing. During that time the average production per cow in the association has increased from 260 to 288 pounds of butterfat. The Tri-County association has increased the average per cow 13½ pounds in two years, and the Lancaster-Seward association has increased its average per cow 10 pounds of butterfat in one year. These increases have been brought about largely by culling out the poorer cows and by better feeding methods. The additional butterfat per cow is largely clear profit to the dairymen because they have eliminated their losses and concentrated their feed and work on the higher producing cows.

Nebraska now has thirty-seven herds on its honor roll, having produced an average of 300 pounds or more of butterfat per cow in a year. The Lancaster-Seward association leads the list as an association with a herd average of 310 pounds per cow. Calves for boys and girls clubs being sponsored by the various associations are being found in these high producing herds this year. A few years ago it was necessary to go out of the state to buy calves from cows with known production records of over 300 pounds of butterfat, Mr. Flack says.

FORCED TO AMEND BURIAL ORDINANCE

Interments in City Prohibited, But City Now Includes Three Cemeteries.

An ordinance amending a city statute prohibiting burials inside the city limits, another changing the zoning ordinance and two resolutions directing that more than $900 be paid to the District clerk to satisfy judgments, will demand the attention of the city council Monday afternoon. The council will also consider the city attorney's ruling on a provision of the charter demanding that an "8-hour provision" be included in all municipal contracts.

The present burial ordinance forbids interments inside the city limits and must be amended, as the limits have been extended to include three cemeteries.

The zoning ordinance changes residential properties to local business classifications.

The two resolutions direct the drawing of two warrants, one for $308 damages awarded by the District court last week to E. L. Thacker, and the other for $600, to cover damages awarded to M. Ella Stockman.

Both actions grew out of a paving and grading project in University Place and were inherited with consolidation.

The sewer contract will be awarded to J. Deffenbaugh on his bid of $1,163. It embraces territory between Starr and Holdrege and Fo.tieth and Forty-second streets.

More than fifty Lincoln students who are in the University of Nebraska college of agriculture are helping with the Ninth Annual Farmer's fair, which the students of the college are having on Saturday, April 15, at the college of agriculture campus.

PITTSBURGH LAYS IN COAL SUPPLY

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 19.—(U. P.)—The city of Pittsburgh today took steps to avoid possibility of suffering from the impending bituminous coal strike. A contract for 15,000 tons of coal to be stored for use by the main pumping stations here was awarded to the Valley Camp Coal Co.

Wagon mines supply the smaller stations, and will therefore not be affected.

Road Conditions

The following road report was issued Saturday afternoon by the tourist bureau of the Lincoln Automobile club:

The light snow Saturday morning did very little damage to the roads of Nebraska. A few small drifts were reported but all the main highways were open Saturday night.

No. 38 to Omaha is very good, being entirely graveled or paved. Iowa roads, where graveled, are good. Dirt roads are fair. No. 38 to Holdrege is graveled excepting between Minden and Axtell. From Holdrege west to Denver, the roads are poor. Colorado reports more snow.

No. 75 to Sioux City via Blair and Tekamah is graveled excepting twenty-one miles of dirt north of Oakland, which is fair.

No. 77 is graveled south to Wymore and is fair through Kansas. No. 77 is graveled to Fremont. Dirt road to Walthill fair. Then gravel into Sioux City.

No. 11 is graveled to the Elmwood turn. There are two or three rough stretches between there and Union. The road is graveled north from Union to Plattsmouth. Plattsmouth-Fort Crook road is poor as usual. Then road is graveled and paved into Omaha. The ferry has been running the past week at Plattsmouth. South from Union the highway is graveled to the state line, fair through Kansas to Troy, then paved to St. Joe and Kansas City.

No. 24 to Nebraska City is best via No. 11 to Eagle, then south via Syracuse. Cheney, Bennet and Tecumseh route is fair. The Raymond to Valparaiso road also is fair.

S. Y. A. No. 11 is best by way of D. L. D. to Milford turn, then north on gravel. There is about five inches of snow, but roads are in fairly good condition. No. 30, Lincoln highway, is passable to North Platte, but rough. It is fair west to Cheyenne.

No. 3 through Nebraska is good where graveled and dirt stretches fair. To Crete and Wilber, the road is graveled.

Roads in northwestern Nebraska are still poor. Many drifts are reported there and in western Nebraska in general. Roads around Sidney are impassable.

AGAINST CHANGE IN CITY CHARTER

Professor Aylsworth Says Proposed Amendment Behind Times.

Believes Present Form of Lincoln's Government Better.

Professor L. E. Aylsworth of the department of political science at the University of Nebraska in the following statement tells why he is opposed to the proposed change in the city government of Lincoln.

"I am not an advocate of, nor an apologist for, our present commission form of city government. I recognize that it has developed distinct weaknesses that need to be and should be corrected. But I believe that any great change should be gone about carefully and deliberately in the light of experience (not only in Lincoln but in other cities) and of the best thought and practice of the day. I am not for change just for the sake of change. Our situation is not so desperate as to call for that. We should make a change only when we have good reasons to believe that experience shows the new form proposed to be distinctly better than the one we now have, a real advance and improvement upon it.

"I am opposed to the charter amendment in general, because it does not carry out the above ideas. It is full of crudities that show lack of study and care in its preparation, and is brought up at the eleventh hour in connection with a primary election without sufficient time for the consideration that so serious a matter should receive. The amendment is not in line with the teachings of experience in city government for the last twenty-five years. It proposes to turn backward rather than forward. The best one can say for it is that it asks the voters of the city to choose between tweedle-dee and tweedle-dum, to jump from the frying pan into the fire.

"My specific objections are:

Would Eliminate Outsiders.

"First, it prohibits the appointment or employment of anyone from outside the city. For example, the city government would be barred from going outside to secure a chief of the fire department as it did in case of Fire Chiefs Clement and Sommer, or to employ a public utility expert like Mr. Adams, who contributed so largely to the victory of the city in the famous gas company case, or an expert sanitary engineer like Mr. Harding, who so quickly discovered how the Rice well was being contaminated and so put an end to the epidemic of typhoid fever in northeast Lincoln. This provision is vicious and a menace to the best welfare of the city.

"Second, it goes back to a large council, four larger than the old council of fourteen that we abolished in 1913. This proposal is based on a wrong idea of the work of the council and of the part that legislation plays in the government of the city. Fully ninety to ninety-five per cent of the work of city government is administrative rather than legislative. Nearly all the so-called legislative work of the council consists in passing administrative ordinances dealing with paving, sidewalks, sewers, parking spaces, stop buttons, etc. The council cannot grant or extend a franchise, nor issue bonds for a new fire station or city jail. It takes a popular vote to do it. The council is without power to raise the tax limit of $500,000, or to establish or abolish "muny" coal or "muny" gas. It requires an amendment to the charter to do it. The council cannot change our registration system from a four year one to a permanent one. It requires an act of the state legislature to do it. Such a large council is contrary to the best thought and practice of the day. Kansas City, Missouri, recently changed from a council of 16 to one of 9, Rochester, New York from one of 24 to one of 9; Cincinnati, Ohio, a city of over 400,000 people, to a council of only 9. What the city of Lincoln needs in the way of a council is a real deliberative body of not to exceed nine, large enough to guard against too much secrecy, but not so large as to invite endless wind jamming over relatively unimportant matters. Speech making is too frequently not deliberation.

Re-establishes Ward System.

"Third, the amendment re-establishes the old utterly discredited ward-system of election, for twelve councilmen are to be elected by the twelve wards and six are to be elected by the whole city. This is worse than what we voted out in 1913, for then the council was equally divided, 7 to 7, between ward council men and those at large. Now, we are asked to set up a council of 12 from wards, 2 more than enough to dominate the council and the mayor, and only 6 at large. This is very unfair representation because the number of registered voters in the different wards last November varied all the way from 582 in the lowest to 4,720 in the highest. The history of city government teaches that nothing has done so much to lower the caliber and influence of the council a sthe ward system. It inevitably results in logrolling and vote-trading to promote petty local interests contrary to the interest and welfare of the city as a whole. Any present logrolling between departments is for that branch of work over the whole city, and, however objectionable, is much to be preferred to logrolling by ward councilmen for special favors and concessions for wards at the expense of the general good.

Mayor Handcuffed.

"Fourth, the mayor under the amendment is hobbled and handcuffed. He has no veto power with which to guard the general welfare against a combination of ten ward councilmen. On the other hand, everyone of his appointment must receive the approval of a majority of the council. This gives nine ward councilmen the power to reject any of his appointments unless he conforms to their suggestions and preferences as to who should be given the places. The mayor is not made the sole responsible head of the administration with a free hand to make appointments regardless of political considerations.

"The salary of $3,600 practically precludes the securing of a capable executive such as the city should have. It is more than is necessary if he is to be a capable well-to-do citizen who runs and serves primarily from a sense of duty and for the honor. It is not enough to attract an able executive who is dependent upon his salary for the support of himself and his family. It is just enough to invite a hard contest for the place by good vote-getters of little or at best only mediocre, administrative ability, who will not be above playing politics with the appointing power both before and after getting into office.

"Lastly, the amendment breathes a spirit of hostility toward or at least a sad lack of appreciation of, the supreme need of ability, of special training and experience, of vision, in order to secure for Lincoln the sort of government the city ought to have. If the above is not true, then the promoters of the amendment fail to show an understanding of how to plan and organize a city government so as to attract and secure such vitally essential ability, training, experience and vision."

ARGUMENT HAS A FATAL ENDING

Illinois Pastor, 67, Shot by Wife of a Former Minister.

VILLA GROVE, Ill., March 19.—(I. N. S.) —A heated argument over religion late today culminated in the killing of Rev. Simon R. Reno, 67, by Mrs. Jess Thorton, 35, wife of a former Congregational minister.

Mrs. Thorton's two children and a neighbor's child witnessed the shooting, which occurred in the Thorton home.

Rev. Mr. Reno., for thirty-two , a minister of the Methodist church, was shot in the back of the head. A 22-caliber rifle was found in the home.

According to the children, Rev. Mr. Reno, who police learned left his home in Champaign, Ill., yesterday to make a canvass in Villa Grove, had been discussing neighborhood topics with Mrs. Thorton when religion was introduced into the conversation.

The argument hinged on vital issues of the two denominations and waxed hot when Mrs. Thorton suddenly arose and ordered Rev. Mr. Reno from the house.

From this point on the children's stories are confusing, but State's Attorney Robert Cotton of Douglas county, expressed the belief that Rev. Mr. Reno had obeyed the command and was leaving when shot.

Bloodstains indicated he had staggered over the threshold and collapsed on the porch.

Mrs. Thorton, under severe police grilling tonight, claimed the shooting was accidental and refused to talk further about it.

Rev. Mr. Reno, who had held pastorates in some fifteen Illinois towns, gave up the ministry in 1922 to become a circulation solicitor for a Champaign minister.

BOTH FORD AND SAPIRO AWAITING CALL TO STAND

Billionaire and "Wheat King" Expected Testify This Week.

Four Major Questions to be Raised in Million Dollar Suit.

DETROIT, March 19.—(I. N. S.)—Promising a strange contrast between America's first billionaire and the "wheat king" of American agriculture, the scheduled appearance of Henry Ford, defendant, and Aaron Sapiro, plaintiff, as witnesses in the million dollar libel suit tonight overshadowed all other developments in the case.

Both Ford and Sapiro next week will be called before the "50 50" jury of men and women at the trial in Federal court here. The four major questions to be raised are:

1. Was Ford prompted by malice toward the Jewish faith?

2. Did Sapiro exploit American farmers for his own profit, or was he legally capitalizing a new idea for their benefit, as well as his own?

3. Was the aid extended Sapiro by a number of Jews sufficient to identify them as a "Jewish ring?"

4. If Sapiro did not exploit the farmers, did the Ford crusade cause him a million dollars damage?

The jury may get the answers after they have heard the man who earned a million dollars in fees from co-operatives

Did Not Read Articles.

Ford's council meanwhile planned to keep his testimony strictly within the issues in the libel suit. It was learned that the witness did not read the articles published before they appeared in the Dearborn Independent, if at all.

The appearance of Sapiro will furnish one of the dramatic features of the trial. Having risen from an orphan asylum to a position where he was called "king of American agriculture," Sapiro's life will be unfolded as a dramatic tale The extent of his activities was indicated when he told in what manner he had earned a million dollars in fees from the co-operatives He declared, however, that most of this was spent in expenses and that he was using "my last cent to obtain a vindication in this trial."

When the trial is resumed Monday morning, William J. Cameron, editor of The Independent, will resume the witness stand. He will be followed by other technical witnesses to prove the alleged libelous articles were published Then either Ford or Sapiro will take the stand. the one following the other. The story of the trial will be written when they conclude, although the jury may not bring in a verdict for another month

ATTEMPT MADE BLACKMAIL FORD

Hold Man in South After Demands Made On Auto King's Son.

GULFPORT, Miss., March 19.—(I. N. S.)—Charged with attempted blackmail of Edsel Ford, Detroit automobile magnate, Edmund Grant Goodwin 34, giving his home as Portsmouth, N. M., was held in the county jail here tonight.

The charge was based on letters Goodwin was alleged to have written Ford from Gulfport, Detroit, Toledo and New Orleans. These letters demanded money for information concerning the probable date of the death of Mr Ford's 14-year-old son, police said

Sums from $8,000 to $100,000 were demanded, it was alleged. The arrest was made by an operative of a national detective agency.

A GENERAL STRIKE AT LODZ, POLAND

LODZ, Poland, March 19.—(I. N. S.)—A general strike broke out here today, with the workers demanding higher wages. The city is already short of bread, due to the fact that the bankers have been on strike for several days.

Government officials made strenuous efforts to forestall the calling of the general strike, carrying on negotiations throughout the night.

The general strike did not interfere with the celebration of Marshal Pilsudski's birthday today. Great parades and mass meetings were organized, with the middle bourgeois and left parties taking part, while the right wing social democrats abstained. The festivities are scheduled to continue for a week.

DR. COOK IS NOT TO BE RELEASED

Parole Granted Arctic Explorer Must Await Court Ruling.

LEAVENWORTH, Kas., March 19.—(U. P.)—Gray prison walls must continue to be the view for the exploring eyes of Dr. Frederick A. Cook—arctic explorer, who is serving a sentence in the federal penitentiary on a charge of using the mails to defraud—it was learned today.

Instead of being granted a five-year parole by Judge James C. Wilson at Forth Worth, Tex., Cook learned his case, involving possible liberty must be taken before the United States Court of Appeals at New Orleans before he can be released from jail.

This was the information received in an order from Fort Worth this afternoon. Cook had expected an order for his release as Judge Wilson had indicated he would grant Cook a parole.

Sargent Rules in Case.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—(U. P.)—Attorney General Sargent today decided that Dr. Frederick A. Cook, North Pole explorer, is to remain in Leavenworth penitentiary until the United States Circuit Court of Appeals decides whether he can be released on probation.

The justice department has requested the United States attorney at Fort Worth, Tex., to apply to Federal Judge Wilson for an order suspending execution of the Wilson order to release Cook on probation.

CROARKIN HEARS LIFE SENTENCE

CHICAGO, March 19—(I. N. S.)—Harold J. Croarkin, 26, scion of a prominent family, today without a tremor heard himself sentenced to spend the rest of his life in the penitentiary for killing Walter Schmith, jr., 6.

Sentence was imposed by Chief Justice William J. Lindsay of Criminal court, after Michael Ahern of defense counsel, withdrew a motion for a new trial. The motion was made Wednesday when the jury brought in its verdict.

The Schmith killing was similar to the slaying of little Bobby Franks for which Nathan F. Leopold, jr., and Richard Loeb are now serving ninety-nine year sentences.

Croarkin lured the lad into a barn and then beat him insensible with a hammer. The boy died on the operating table.

"Mignon is to be revived at the Metropolitan. It has been a number of years since this mid-Victorian work has been heard here. It is, of course, an old fashioned opera, not French in the modern sense, but surely French in the older meaning of the word as applied to opera. However it is full of good tunes and there is no reason why it should not be successful. It is curious how dreadfully serious German writers have been treated by French composers of the stage. Just as the dramatically ridiculous "Faust" was made from the serious play of the great Goethe, so "Mignon" is made from the same great German's long philosophical novel, "Wilhelm Meister." Such desecration is, of course, nothing to get excite dabout, but nothing to get excited about, but differences between German characteristics and French characteristics.

The little school house in Woodbury, Long Island, where Walt Whitman taught in his young days, has been saved from the wreckers. Those who took part in saving the historical house were Deems Taylor and Edna St. Vincent Millay, authors of the King s Henchman, Edwin Arlington Robinson, the poet; Claude Rains, Anne Norrison and Patricia Barclay of the cast of Lally; and Charles Wharton Stork, a Philadelphia poet.

Schumann Heink will celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of her appearance in the part of Magdalene under Walter Damrosch at the Metropolitan by again singing the quintet part of this role under him in the joint recital of the New York Symphony and Philharmonic orchestras, March 15 The concert is to be given in honor of Damrosch at the Metrolpolitan.

The Cincinnati Conservatory Orchestra, conducted by Rudolph Thomas, recently gave a Beethoven memorial concert which demands special mention because the entire first act of Fidelio was sung by soloists and chorus accompanied by the orchestra. This is a remarkably fine, and large undertaking for the force of a conservatory.

Having completed her season with the Metropolitan Opera, Galli-Curci has resumed her concert activities.

A crisis hovers over the affairs of the St. Louis orchestra, second oldest symphony society in this country. In the midst of its financial difficulties, a fire partly destroyed the Odeon theater where the orchestra's concerts are given Fortunately the damage to the auditorium was slight and the valuable music library was not injured.

At the closing session of congress, Luella Melius, the soprano, was seen in the visitors' gallery and recognized by Speaker Longworth, and invited to the rostrum There she sang several songs She is said to be the first singer to have made such a contribution during a session of the house.

What New York will do without Acolin hall on Forty-third street is a question. Even now there are not halls enough and concerts are being given in the theaters on Sundays when the theaters are not otherwise occupied. Two or three new halls of moderate size will be welcomed. Real estate people say they do not pay. Probably not. A space that can be rented every day in the year pays better than a hall that is used only occasionally. Still, the halls are needed, and it is hoped that some enterprising builder will have the generosity to provide them.

Next week the long absent Mignon is to come back to the Metropolitan Opera house. Lucrecia Bori is to sing the title role, which means that the tenor will have no difficulty in carrying her off bodily when the fire scene occurs. One always recalls the story of the diminutive tenor who knew better than to tempt Fate and carefully arranged with a burly chorus man to shoulder the plentiful prima donna at the appropriate moment while he ran along beside tenderly clasping one of her hands We saw once a Mignon at the Dal Verme in Milan who was built in that style. Fate has certainly played the artist a mean trick She was short and from the shoulders there were no indentations in her. However she was a real artist and sang and acted so well that her ridiculous appearance was forgotten.

Otto Kahn chairman of the Metropolitan Opera board celebrated his sixtieth birthday February 21, by working.

The Metropolitan Opera company will have a short season in Baltimore, Md., immediately after it leaves New York for Atlanta The dates for the engagement are April 18, 19, 20 and 21.

The Massachusetts Federation of Women's clubs is responsible for the recent forming of a Woman's symphony orchestra in Boston with Ethel Leginska as conductor. On its committee are prominent women of Massachusetts. Next season it will tour the country. In addition to her work with the orchestra Miss Leginska has formed a chorus of one hundred voices which will appear with the Boston Philharmonic orchestra, April 10, and will be heard in the second American performance of Malipiero's work, "The Princess Ulalia," which Albert Stoessel gave in New York recently.

According to the Musical Courier, there will be no immediate and in all likelihood, no future amalgamation of the Philharmonic and New York Symphony orchestras

The boxes for the concert in honor of Damrosch are all sold. The concert is scheduled for March 15 at the Metropolitan Opera house and will be a notable and brilliant affair.

Paul Whiteman will make his debut in a speaking role this month in support of Mary Easton in a play called Lucky, at the Amsterdam theater under the direction of Charles Dillingham. The play has a good name—"Lucky." Whiteman is surely that! Will he jazz the role? Wait and see.

Elly Ney will play the Hamerklavier Sonata in her New York recital at Carnegie hall this week.

A public meeting of the Headquarters council of organists was held in the New York high school of commerce, February 21. The association was the guest of The People's chorus of New York and its conductor, L. Camilleri, who directed a special rehearsal of the chorus by way of illustrating his work.

Ralph Leopold, pianist composer, gave a recital recently at St. Mary's academy, O'Neill, Neb.

Deems Taylor is to write another opera for presentation at the New York Metropolitan opera house. It is likely that this work will have a world premiere in the proposed new Metropolitan, which is to be erected soon. This was the news which followed hard upon the success of the introductory performance of The King's Henchman last Thursday night, and caused no end of excited conversation. The subject of the new Taylor opera for the Metropolitan has not been decided upon. It is quite possible that the librettist may be another American than Edna St Vincent Millay, the librettist of The King's Henchman.

A new-comer tenor has been found in Chicago. His name is Glen Drake. Later on others will hear of him too, since he has very promising qualities. He is the John McCormack type.

Mary Garden is said to have celebrated her fiftieth birthday anniversary last Sunday Considerable water has flown under the bridge since she made her American debut but in 1909 at the Manhattan Opera house.

LENT CONJURES STAGE NOVELTY FOR NEW YORK

"Loud Speaker" Is a Critical Farce By New Insurgent Band.

"HEAVEN TAPPERS" A BIT JUMBLED

Wild Melodrama, Modernist Play and Others Find a Place.

BY BUSHNELL DIMOND.

NEW YORK, March 19.—Lenten nights find few novelties in the theater, among these rarities being a somewhat wild-eyed melodrama that has wandered from the Pacific coast, a modernist play fostered by a new band of insurgent playwrights, and in 1898 "domestic drama."

"The Heaven Tappers" is the collaborative efort of George Scarborough, who wrote "The Lure," 'The Son-Daughter," and "Moonlight and Honeysuckle,' and his wife, who, as Annette Westbay played so effectively with Nance O'Neil in Benuvente's "The Passion Flower."

In "The Heaven Tappers," the observantly reminiscent will note a distinct "Miracle Man" coloration, with the exception that, in the current case, even the "old saint" is a fake and a crook. Just out of Atlanta, he and two henchmen and his girl invade the Kentucky mountains, hoping to impose on the gullible moonshiners and get their hoarded money. At the final curtain, the arch-scoundrel and a lieutenant are gasping their lives away, thanks to poisoned liquor, while the sanctified female sinner is in the clasp of the rugged distiller, who has decided just to love her good and hard, instead of scooping out her eyes, which had been his first emotional reflex to the news that she wasn't any better than she cought to be.

If that report sounds a trifle jumbled, some blame can be put on the Scarboroughs' scenario. With their dramatic compass registering first north and then south, the intent of the piece grows vague. Starting in a vein of light blasphemy, and played for comic emphasis alone, "The Heaven Tappers" gradually gets so religiously muzzy that by half past ten it is openly and maudlinly crying in its beer. The effect is quite a bit like a lady evangelist pulling a camp chair from under a sinner to give him the funny feeling of a fractured spine, and then asking him if he doesn't want to be redeemed.

"Heaven Tappers" Well Acted.

Into "The Heaven Tappers," Lee Shubert and Edwin Carewe have injected some excellent actors. The most successful in imparting the blend of farce and emotion is Joseph Allen as the guzzling subaltern of the head rapscallion. Charles Waldron, as the latter, uses his fine voice to good effect and submits adroit tricks in make-up. Louis Bennison, who seems fated to fall in love with every stage heroine under the impression that she is a holy woman—since "The Virgin" last season—is the iron-chested hero. Margaret Lawrence, as the dry-cleaned magdalen, is happier in her light-hearted moments than those of dramatic content.

The New Playwrights got off to a characteristic fortissimo start at the Fifty-Second Street theater with John Howard Lawson's "Loud Speaker." This farce, travestying the election methods of an American state governor, takes a vicious jab at other native nuisances—the veronal-taking wife who sells her "life story" to the tabloids; the brash reporter, the eccentricities of the radio, the pathos and bunk of oratory, the sob sister, the bathing beauty craze, and so forth.

Lawson Gets Careless.

Occasionally Mr. Lawson writes with the sharp acidity and puzzled misery that mark his best work, but he has a careless editorial eye and is too lavish with his material. Maurine Watkins, in "Chicago" for instance, has covered just as much ground with fewer steps. Winding in and out of a pleasing insane "constructivist" setting by the gifted Mordecai Gorelik—the characters enter and exit on slides, ladders and the like—an interesting company breathes the breath of youth into Lawson's script. Romney Brent, late of the Theater Guild, imparts an air of wistful and grotesque whimsicality of the part of the newspaper man, and there is beauty and freshness in Agnes Lumbard: satire and sanity in Margaret Douglass, who played the maid in "Off Key," and demented grace in the dancing of Leonard Sillman.

The cold stare of public indifference has removed "We all Do," a pre-Pinero story of a gay husband and a suffering wife, so soon that all that is left for me to add is that it was written by Knud Wibert and Marcel Strauss; that H. Reeves-Smith gave a striking performance in it, and that it was about as agile and novel as a crippled butterfly with bronchitis.

The touring company of "Loose Ankles," that epic of the gigolo's itching palm, offers considerable amusement, and a bright new ingenue. Ellen Dorr, from the Theater Guild's school, in Kathleen Comegy's part. Reed Brown has supplanted Harold Vermilye. The list of characters has mysteriously shrunk, but the show is intermittently funny.

Monty Banks is Gonna Show 'Em How It Is Done by "The Perfect Gentleman" in His Latest Role

This should be pretty good. Monty Banks, Pathe feature comedian, is gonna show 'em how it is done in the best circles. Following the dictates of a certain well known book on etiquette, Monty is to make "The Perfect Gentleman," in which he does no deed not outlined in the tome of manners. Several comedy constructionists—once gag men—are doing their bit for the fillum.

"A Million Bid," an eight reel, Warner special, will have its world premier at the Colony theater in New York today. It's story of San Francisco, with Dolores Costello, Charles Emmett Mack, Anna Mae Wong, and others, many others, in the cast. Alan Crosland who did the directorial work is to direct Dolores in her next production. "The Heart of Maryland," an adaption of the famous Belasco stage drama of Civil war days.

To stimulate interest in amateur theatricals in the hope of developing new faces tor the screen, Reginald Barker, former president of the Motion Pitcure Directors' association, has written to the organization offering to donate a trophy cup for the best non-professinal presentation in 1927 in the United States. The award comes because there aren't enough young things of obvious talent to meet the demands for players by the big producing companies of the film company, Monsieur Barker says. Young men, particularly, are as rare as a day in June, and the capable ones have red-taped contracts of vast size, and the producers don't want to loan them out. A committee is to be appointed to judge reports on amateur production of importance staged in America during the year.

Corinne Settles Future.

Corinne Griffith's gone and joined 'em. She's right along on the same line with Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Norma and Constance Talmadge, Gloria Swanson, Jawn Barrymore, Buster Keaton Vilma Banky, Ronald Colman, and a host of prominent producers now. United Artists has obtained, and her future is settled after weeks of speculation. Corinne has been in Europe, and it is possible her first production for U A. will be "Garden of Eden," European stage success of the present time, and formerly given in this country: June Mathis, famous woman producer and screen writer, is to prepare the story for Miss Griffith.

"Sunny" never came to Lincoln, for it has not been produced as a road show. However, it was a charming affair with Marilyn Miller, in the title role. The movies have secured the film rights now, and United Artists will make it. I don't know, but I'll wager that Sunny lies between Connie and Vilma—with the odds in favor of the former. We shall see. Corinne is too fond of diffused photography and Gloria isn't just the type. Mary's curls will be all right, but Mary herself doesn't venture into the cut and dried affairs brought over from the stage.

Ten modern commandments have been introduced to Hollywood. They form the basis of a story written by Jack Lait which is to be produced as a starring vehicle for Esther Ralston Dorothy Arzner, the first and only woman director on the Paramount lot has been assigned to handle the megaphone for the blonde star, following her success with Miss Ralston in "Fashions for Women."

Billie Dove is Starred.

Billie Dove, who really came up from very modest bits on the screen, to sudden prominence, is to be starred by First National next season. She got away very well in "An Affair of the Follies," in which she is co-featured with Lewis Stone, and is doing good work in "The Tender." Billie is good to look upon, which, all in all, is making her a potential star.

"White Pants Willie" is to succeed "All Aboard" for Johnny Hines. The picture ran originally as a serial in a popular magazine, and it took well with the readers. Johnny has no supporting cast as yet.

Here's one girl who'll never know much of "Heartbreak Town," if screen tests tell the truth. Adrienne Truex, who has been cast in some minor roles, met an agent of Robert Kane of the Cosmopolitan studio in New York. The girl, who had appeared on the western coast only, appealed to him as a camera find. Two weeks ago, the tests were run off, and the viewers said Adrienne was ready for stardom without the usual introductory training in featured roles. Now, Kane has purchased "Dance Madness," current serial for about $50,000, p. a. price, and Adrienne is to be starred. Here's the way Robert Kane describes his find: "A lovely brunette with the profile of Greta Garbo, the head of Corinne Griffith, the grace of Alice Joyce, the fire of Gloria Swanson, and the charm of Dolores Costello." What more could Adrienne ask. The more—the p. a. tells us is—that the holders of the screen rights of "Dance Madness" had refused offers from Gloria Swanson, Gilda Gray, Mae Murray, and other independent producers.

Producing The Grand Flapper.

Earle Fox, Margaret Livingston, Holmes Herbert have been chosen to head the cast of "The Grand Flapper," a Nina Wilcox Putnam story. It's to be made on the Fox lot.

"Rich but Honest," a story by Arthur Somers Roche, has been adapted to the screen and is now under production. The story tells the tale of a chorus girl who has ideas of her own. Nancy Nash, a recent find, who just walked into the films without previous training or knowledge of technique, has the lead, and Clifford Holland, J. Farrell MacDonald, and Ted McNamara are the other well known names in the east.

Pauline Garon is now being featured in "The Princess on Broadway." It's another story of the bright lights on New York's gay white way.

E. H. Calvert, ten years on the stage and sixteen in moving pictures, who is now playing the villian in "The House Without a Key" and "Melting Millions," has more than his own screen career to give him prominence. He was one of the first moving picture directors, and his first post was with the old Essanay company in Chicago, where de directed Francis X. Bushman's first picture, "One Wonderful Night." He also saw the possibilities in Agnes Ayres, Colleen, Virginia Valli, Helen Ferguson, and Rod La Rocque and gave them their first big chance or started them on the road to fame.

dugout beside it. A large fleid of sunflowers was converted into sunflower wigwams, and many imaginary massacres took place on the acreage.

In those days, Mr. DePutron was always tying up cut fingers and treating wounded toes, and his family thought he would be a doctor. However, Mr DePutron knew that he wanted to be a merchant, and had no interest in the medical profession.

One of his chief delights was to go to Bannister's gallery, and watch the making of pictures. He marveled at the processes in the photographic car at Fourteenth and P streets, and perhaps therein was definite ambition born.

Frank Tomson's father, mother, and sister went into Kansas from eastern Missouri in 1860, pioneers in a pioneer state. Mr Tomson was born in a log house in Dover, Kas., near Topeka, and at nine years of age moved to Topeka. After several years, he returned to Dover, and remained there until he was grown.

Studied Animal Portraiture.

He has kept his identity with farm life through his interest in his Kansas farm, and much of his adult life has been spent objectively, if not subjectively, in agricultural lines. At twenty-seven, Mr. Tomson spent some time in a study of animal portraiture, and for a year devoted himself to the art.

At the close of that time, he became traveling representative in the advertising department for The Homestead of Des Moines, going from that publication to The Breeder's Gazette. For six years, Mr. Tomson was editor of The Shorthorn in America, traveling in the United States and Canada in the interests of the magazine.

As a boy, Mr. Tomson spent his summers with his Aunt Lottie Gillis, a pioneer of eastern Kansas. It was she who had the greatest influence over his development, Mr. Tomson declares, his mother having died when he was a small boy.

Merle Rathburn came to Lincoln from Sycamore, Ill., at a very early age. His working days began about the time he entered high school at thirteen, and he took up his life work more by accident than by design.

McClay Family Homesteaded.

Will McClay came from Secor, Ill., near Peoria to a homestead near Beatrice in a covered wagon as a very small child with his parents. At the time, Indian camped near Beatrice, and they were frequent visitors at the McClay home, either begging for food or just loafing around the homestead. They started a prairie fire that burned the crops and much of the livestock on the McClay homestead. Before his appointment as postmaster, Mr. McClay, who came to Lincoln about forty-five years ago, was connected with the coal business.

Since five years of age, E. J. Walt has shown an interest in things musical, and most of his spare moments have been spent in its pursuit.

His first instrument was a drum, which his father purchased for him, after he came home to find his son beating a tomato can strung about his neck, with two sticks, and "making music." The child had heard his first band that afternoon and had been captivated by the effect.

The following year, Mr. Walt's mother made him a Zouave suit for his band uniform. At the age of six, he went with the drum corps from Kansas City, his home at that time, to Creston, Ia., where he appeared at a G. A. R. encampment.

Hearing an orchestra for the first time, the boy became fascinated with the violin. He immediately prepared another home made instrument of two sticks, but again the family came to the rescue with a violin. It has been his instrument from that day until this.

Mr. Walt was second violin in the Lansing theater orchestra when he was but fourteen, and he continued to play there for three years, after it became the Oliver. During his sixteenth year, he was leader of the orchestra for six months.

During his career as an active musician, Mr. Walt was offered a position as violinist with Haverley's ministrels, after he had taken the place of the regular violinist for one evening in Lincoln He was but a boy, and the thought of the theater captivated him at once, and he was ready to go immediately. His father's opinion differed from the boy's and "that ended my professional musical career."

pay when you want to. Come on."

He gave a criticism right then and there. There after Hawthorne was his most ardent pupil.

Master Saw Ability.

Chase perceived his ability at once. He encouraged him with promises that he had a bright future ahead of him. The next year he made him his secretary at $5 a week Two years later, when he opened his New York school. Hawthorne was again his secretary.

It was in 1895 that Hawthorne began his studies under Chase. Seven years later he took his first award, the Obrig prize of the Salmagundi club. In 1904 he received the first Hallgarten prize of the National Academy of Design, and thereafter he was the receipient of frequent honors. In 1908 he was elected to the Academy.

Now his works hang in permanent collections all over the country. A modernist, who may perhaps be more strictly defined as a colorist his intensely virile art has had a wide influence, an influence which his ability as a teacher has supplemented.

Answers to Movie Fans

Dear editor—It hasn't been so long ago since I have written but I have quite a few questions so I wish you would excuse me this time and I'll try not to come so often again.

What is the matter with "Rattler?" I surely miss him. I hope he will come again.

Now for my questions. I saw "The Conquering Power" and thought it was a splendid picture and it had such a common moral. Especialy about hiring for money only. Would you please tell me where the picture was made? Was Rudy a very popular star at that time? I thought he played excellently in it.

I also saw "The Sheik." Was this one of Rudy's first pictures in which he took the leading part? It certainly was grand. Where was it made?

Would you please tell me the age, height, color of eyes and hair of Alice Terry, Renee Adoree, Agnes Ayres, Louise Dresser, Gloria Swanson, Anna Nilsson, Claire Windsor, Lois Moran, Aileen Pringle, Norma Talmadge and May McAvoy? Also just the age and height of John Gilbert, Buster Keaton, John Barrymore, Rod La Rocque, Antonio Moreno and Ronald Colman?

Who took the part of the Bat in "The Bat?"

I also want to enter in the contest of Gilbert and Colman. I cast my vote for Jack. I like him best of the two. However, I'm not so crazy about him when he tries to act like a sheik. I wish he'd shave off his mustache, and cut off his side burns and be a regular kid. I liked him better in "The Big Parade" than all of his others put together.

I don't mean to say he isn't a good actor for that kind of a play, for he is, but I'd rather see him different than the rest. It seems to me a lot of men are trying to play the part sof sheiks, but I think they all make a horrible job o fit.

In fact, I think Rudy was the only real sheik of the screen and will always be considered so. He knew his "stuff." The others just seem to think that because they can look like one after they are all fixed up that they are swell sheiks, but they are not. They don't know how to act after they are dressed for the part,—that's more than half of it.

Who is the Richard Dix contest between? I don't give a snap for Richard, but I wondered if the other contestant was one whom I cared to defend.

Since Rudy's death, I haven't been able to find a favorite. Now I'm out hunting for one. John Barrymore is my real favorite, but I don't consider him with the rest because he acts on the stage sometimes. I think he was the greatest actor and still is.

I like Novarro, Gilbert, Rod La Rocque, Moreno, Hughes and Ben Lyons. I guess it is between those six.

I'm signing off now. I expect your getting awfully tired and I know I'm causing you a lot of trouble. Thanks ever so much, I certainly appreciate it.

"Rattler," don't stay away so long. Everybody who isn't jealous is anxious to hear from you again. I hope you haven't stayed away just on account of your so called "Rattler's Enemy." Come on and show him, or her, that you don't care what they think. THERESA.

It's a privilege and not a bother to answer your questions, Theresa. I enjoy hearing from you often.

Call for "Rattler."

"The Conquering Power" was taken in Hollywood and "The Sheik" was also "shot" there and in the deserts or rather sandy spots close to Hollywood. There used to be a large sandy area close to Hollywood that was known as the movie desert, but settlers have crowded in so now that the producers have to take their companies over to Arizona when the want to shoot desert scenes.

"The Sheik" was Rudy's first Paramount feature and it made him a big success as a leading man and movie lover. His role of Jabilo in "The Four Horsemen" really brought him into the limelight, and then "The Conquering Power" and "Camille" followed. It was really "The Sheik," however, that gave him his title.

Alice Terry is 5 feet 6 in height and has bolnde hair and blue eyes. She is thirty-one. Miss Adoree has gray eyes and dark hair. She has grown five feet and two inches since her birth in 1901.

Agnes Ayers was born in 1896. She is five feet five in height and has brown hair and hazel eyes. Miss Dresser is a blonde, 5 feet 7 in height and in the early forties. Gloria Swanson has dark hair and blue eyes. She is an inch taller than Renee. Miss Nilsson is another blonde and also 5 feet 7 in height. 1889 was the year of her birth.

Claire Windsor, another beautiful blonde, is a half inch shorter than Miss Nilsson. She was born in 1897. Lois Moran is a mere infant, seventeen years old. She has light brown hair and hazel eyes, and is 5 feet 2 in height.

Miss Pringle has dark hair and green eyes. She is 5 feet 5 in height and was born in 1898.

Norma Talmadge admits she's 30 this year. Norma has brown hair and eyes and measures 2 inches over 5 feet.

Little May's eyes are blue and her hair's a pretty brown. She lacks an inch of being 5 feet in height, and is 26 this year.

John Gilbert is 32 and will have to grow another inch before he can be called a 6-footer. Mr. Barrymore is about the same height, and gives his birth year as 1882.

Mr. Keaton is only 5 feet 6 inches in height. He was born in 1898. Rod is 2 inches over 6 feet and is 30 years old. Antonio is 5 feet 11, and will celebrate his thirty-ninth birthday this year. Mr. Colman is about the same height, and was born in 1891.

Lee Shumway was the "Unknown" in "The Bat." Dit it make your hair stand on ends?

We shall have to get Jack to one side and whisper in his ear about his face trim.

Richard seems to have entered the contest on his own, with no one in opposition to him. He was merely placed in as a better man than Jack r Ronald.

With six handsome men to choose from, such as Ramon, Jack, Rod, Antonio, Lloyd and Ben, you would almost have to put them in a bag, shake them up and take the one who came out first as your favorite.

Dear Movie Editor—I am a newcomer to your columns, but I have some things I would like to get "off my chest."

First, I would like to know what has become of the following: Billie Rhodes (she used to act in comedies with Neal Barns and Lee Moran, and was darling; that was somewhere around 1916. Enid Bennett and Bryant Washburn are both good, but I never see any pictures with them in the cast. Then there's Ella Hall, George Marlowe, Sheldon Lewis, Pearl White, Fanny Ward, Marguerite Clark and Jackie Saunders. No doubt some of them have retired, due to their age, but I would like to know about them. They were mighty good in their day of acting.

I can't see how some fans can complain about Gloria Swanson. I've heard the remark more than once about her merely having a good figure and beautiful clothes, but no acting ability. I think she is very good myself, especially after seeing her in "The Coast of Folly."

I think Mae Murray is darling, but she really has no real acting to her pictures unless she's changed of late. I saw her in "Jazzmania," "Peacock Alley," etc., but have not seen, "The Merry Widow" or "The Masked Bride."

Norma Shearer is one of my favorites. She certainly has oodles of talent and knows how to use it.

Vilma Banky, to, is very good. I like Greta Garbo. She's so different. Don't you think so? I saw her for the first time in "The Torrent." I certainly was disgusted with Richardo Cortez in that picture. I have always admired him, but he will have to redeem himself in another picture for me. Ramon Novarro is another one I can't like anymore after seeing him in "The Midshipman."

Richard Dix and Lloyd Hughes are my favorite actors. I might include Rod La Rocque, also. I admired his work in "Gigolo."

I am getting rather tired of Colleen Moore. She pulls the same old stuff in every picture. I've seen her in. Her pictures are good, and she is a good little actress, but it's the little personal stuff she pulls all the time if you get what I mean.

Leatrice Joy is a very talented actress. I enjoyed her so much in "Eve's Leaves." I would like her address and something about her. Also her age, height and weight. If you happen to have a picture of her I would be glad to get it.

I got a splendid large photo of Rudy Valentino after his death at the address you gave in your columns. Nobody could ever take his place as a "sheik," if they'd "sheik" all their lives. He was a good actor and has some mighty good pictures to his credit. I liked "The Sheik," "The Son of the Sheik," and "The Black Eagle" exceptionally well.

I was somewhat disappointed with Betty Bronson in "Paradise For Two." She didn't look a bit nice with her hair back from her ears. She was so sweet in "The Golden Princess."

Well, I am rambling on too far I'm afraid, but I could write pages and pages, I'm so filled up this morning.

Here's some more to add to the "lost" department: Helen Holmes, Baby Helen Marie Osborne and the Fairbanks twins, Marian and Madeline.

Is Robert Leonard, the director and ex-husband of Mae Murray, the same Robert Leonard who acted in the serial, "The Master Key" with Ella Hall? That's a very old picture, about 1915, I believe. I'm full of "old stuff" today, am I not?

Thanks very much for your patience—you must have a real supply of it. Your page is worth all the rest of the Sunday paper put together. Sincerely yours, JIBLEIS, University Place.

Who couldn't be patient when the reward is the nice things the fans say about my department? You should have seen me preen myself and strut about when I read your letter.

Billie Rhodes married Billie Parsons, the fat comedian, you remember, and they appeared in pictures together until his death. She made a few after that, but seems to have deserted the screen entirely the past few years. Her name isn't even in the new screen directory.

Enid Bennett devotes most of her time to her young daughter. She is Mrs. Fred Niblo. She appears once in a while in a picture, and so does Bryant Washburn, but he spends more of his time on the stage. You will see Bryant soon in a Universal release.

Ella Hall married and is busy with her children. She had three, but lost one a few months ago. She is separated from her husband, but it appears that the death of the child may re-unite them again.

I have no record of Mr. Marlowe. Watch for Sheldon Lewis in "The Overland Stage," a First National release, featuring Ken Maynard.

Pearl White is in France, and has been for about three years, perhaps more. Fanny Ward, who was born in England, is now back in this country on the Orpheum circuit. She looks younger than ever in spite of the fact that she's around 60.

Marguerite Clark is Mrs. Williamson of New Orleans, now, and figures prominently in the society of that city. Miss Saunders lives in Hollywood. She takes a picture role when the spirit moves her, and also writes scenarios.

Helen Holmes, also, bobs up occasionally in pictures, and so does "Little Mary Sunshine," as Helen Marie Osborne used to be called. She has been busy getting an education, and is now grown up into ingenue roles. The Fairbanks Twins do most of their acting before the footlights.

Gloria Swanson has proven her ability as an actress and a favorite with the public by her rise from a bathing beauty to one of the highest salaried of screen players. You know, no matter how anxious a producer may be to "make" a certain star, he is unable to do so without public sanction. It's the movie going public that made Miss Swanson and she must have something back of the clothes or the majority of people would not choose her as a favorite. She was unfortunate in the choice of her stories in the last few pictures she made for Paramount.

I like Greta Garbo because she is out of the ordinary, and has a great deal of personality.

"The Young Rajah" was one of my favorite pictures with Mr. Valentino, but I seem to be the only one who enjoyed it, because even Rudy, himself, didn't like it. He was so natural and unaffected in the role that it appealed to me.

Leatrice Joy was born in New Orleans in 1897. She made her debut in motion pictures in her home town with the Nola Film company. She obtained her engagement by answering an advertisement in one of the local papers. Following this, she went to New York, where she secured work in one reel Paramount comedies.

Miss Joy later played in pictures in Los Angeles, and then went to San Diego where she played with a stock company for some time. Upon her return to the movies she appeared in such pictures as "Bunty Pulls the String," "The Tale of Two Worlds," and "Ladies Must Live." It was Cecil B. De Mille who gave her her first boost upward in "Manslaughter." She is now a star in his productions. Miss Joy has the sparkling brown eyes and black hair of the southerner. She is five feet three inches in height and weighs 125. Address her at the Cecil B. De Mille Studio, Culver City, Calif., and I'm sure you will receive a photograph. I'm sorry that I have none of her to send you.

Mr. Leonard was an actor before he turned director, so he no doubt was your man in "The Master Key," although I have no cast for the picture. He made several pictures for Universal. He was on the stage before he turned his attention to the movies, and sang in over 100 light operas. He is now the husband of Gertrude Olmstead.

Dear Sir: This is the first time I have written to you, but I always read your page in the Sunday paper and enjoy it very much.

I would like very much the addresses of the following movie stars: Tom Mix, Malcolm McGregor, Clara Bow, Mary Pickford, Bob Custer, Colleen Moore, Fred Thomson, Richard Dix, Marie Prevost, Tony, Tom Mix' horse, Silver King, Fred Thomson's horse, and Rin Tin Tin. Oh, yes, I want Reginald Denny's address, too.

If any of these stars charge for their pictures, let me know and if you have any of these pictures, I would appreciate getting them.

Sorry I had to bother you with so many questions, and thank you ever so much. Hoping I see my letter in the paper soon, I remain, MICKLE.

New fans are always welcome.

Write to Tom Mix and Tony at the Fox Studio, 1401 north Western Ave., Hollywood, Calif. Fred Thompson and Silver King, also Bob Custer are with F. B. O., 780 Gower Hollywood. Mr. McGregor is at home at the Chadwick Studioes, 1440 Gower, Hollywood. Clara Bow and Richard Dix draw their salaries from Famous Players-Lasky, 5431 Melrose, Hollywood, Calif, and Mary Pickford receives her letters at her own studio, 7100 Canta Monica, Hollywood.

Colleen Moore trips around the First National lot, Burbank, Calif., and Rin Tin Tin barks for his bones at the Warner Brothers Studio, Sunset, Hollywood. Reginald Denny parks out at Universal City, Calif., and Marie Prevost nearly ran over a girl when she was on her way to the Metropolitan Studios, 1040 Las Palmas, Hollywood. According to reports I get from the fans, nearly all of the players will mail you their photographs without the customary quarter for postage.

Dear Movie Editor —At last after two long years, we have had the pleasure of seeing the wonderful picture, "The Big Parade," and I can truthfully say I wasn't a bit excited over it. I can't understand why everyone raved about it the way they did. Except for a few scenes that were really worth while it was no better than the majority.

When I went to see it I thought I was going to see something out of the ordinary, but I came away with the feeling that it was just another war picture. John Gilbert, was good, but I have seen him in other pictures that were a lot better.

A few weeks later, "Beau Geste" was here and, believe me, that was a real picture. Ronald Colman was wonderful. His acting was beyond reproach. I enjoyed it from beginning to end, and although it had a sad ending, I can say it was the better picture of the two. Neil Hamilton and Ralph Forbes were also good, and it was a treat to see such devotion between brothers.

As to who is the better actor, Ronald Colman or John Gilbert, I vote for Ronald. His love making is so sincere. If John would change his love making when before the camera, I am sure he would have a lot more fans than he has now.

I can't understand the way John is chasing around after Greta Garbo. As an actress, she isn't as good, and hasn't the beauty of some of our American actresses. She can't hold a candle to Leatrice Joy, his first wife.

I am very much interested in the new stock company. I like the leading man, also George. They are both splendid actors.

Well, I have raved enough for this time, and I will sign off and let someone else broadcast for a while. JUSTICE.

"We shall have to see that John acquires more finesse in his love making.

I enjoyed hearing from you again, and am sorry that I have no information on the subject of your questions. I may be able to secure some later, but at present it doesn't seem to be forthcoming.

Screen Siftings

Go West, Screen Star—Richard Dix will start the general exodus of the Paramount stars to the west, following the announcement that Famous Players-Lasky will confine its production activities in the future to the West Coast. Mr. Dix will start work as soon as he reaches Hollywood on "The Roughneck Gentleman."

Nebraskans See Clara—Nebraska tourists who visited the Pike at Long Beach, Calif., last week were rewarded by a pck at Clara Bow. The well known screen flapper was "on location" at the Beach City filming roller coaster scenes for her new picture, "Rough House Rosie." Red Howes and Douglas Gilmore are prominent members of the supporting cast and Frank Strayer directs the action.

Beauty Swims to Fame—Phyllis Haver is the latest bathing girl to win an enviable place in the film firmament. Miss Haver has signed a new long term contract with Metropolitan. Marie Prevost and Gloria Swanson are other shining graduates from the Sennett bathing girl school. Miss Haver has been loaned to Famous Players to play an important role in support of Emil Jannings in "The Way of All Flesh." Elaborate plans are being made for Miss Haver's future when she returns to her home studio.

School Ma'm Featured—Julia Faye was once a school teacher. She is now a featured player in Irvin Cobb's first original screen story, "Turkish Delight" which is being filmed at the Cecil B. De Mille studio. Rudolph Schildkraut, May Robson and Kenneth Thomson are all prominent in the picture which Paul Sloane is directing.

Chinese Turns Detective—The role of Chan, famous Chinese detective in "The Chinese Parrot" will be filled by K. Sojin, the Oriental character actor. Conrad Veidt, the European favorite who was to have taken the part, will portray the Rabbi Mendel in "Len Lyon" in which Mary Philbin and Ivan Mosslino are co-starred at the Universal studio. Edward Sloman will direct "Lea Lyon, while Paul Leni calls action on "The Chinese Parrot."

Fifty Films Rarin'—With fifty stories being prepared for the sceen by the scenario department, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer are preparing to launch their most preventious picture program to date. The stories embrace every type of action from drama to farce comedy. The productions will range from six reelers to super-specials, which go beyond ten reels in length.

Nobles In Peasant Garb—Hollywood is filled with Russian exiles of royal blood who are seeking film careers. In "The Tender Hour," which George Fitzmaurice is making at the First National Studios, ten Russian noblemen stoop to peasant roles in order to earn their daily bread. Billei Dove and Ben Lyon are co-featured in the picture.

P. A. to the Rescue—Nellie Revell, who is acclaimed the "world's greatest woman press agent," is in Hollywood to write a series of personality stories on Cecil B. De Mille and other leaders of the movie world.

Broadway Lights Shared.— Some of the best known members of New York's "White Way" will be seen in "Broadway Nights," which features Sam Hardy and Lois Wilson. Texas Guinan and her "gang," performers from the Everglades Club; Louis John Bartels of "Show Off" fame; "Henry Sherwood, from "Broadway" and Barbara Stanwick from "The Noose" are among those will add zest to the night scenes for the picture.

Beauty Spots Picked—Echo Canyon and Hole-in-the-Rock, Arizona, said to be two of the most beautiful spots in the United States, form the background for the exteriors in "Arizona Bound," which John Waters is directing. The picture features Gary Cooper, Paramount's new western star, and his horse, Flash. Betty Jewel is leading woman.

Building Up the Cast.—Nigel de Brulier, who will be remembered as the Stranger in "The Four Horsemen," Simonides in "Ben Hur," and Richelieu in "The Three Musketeers," has been added to the cast of the new Richard Barthelmess picture, "The Patent Leather Kid." Mr. de Brulier will have the role of a famous military surgeon in the battlefront sequences.

Through With "The Brute."—Monte Blue has completed work on his latest Warner Brothers vehicle, "The Brute," and will motor to San Francisco for a week's vacation before starting work on "The Black Diamond Express."

Pola Tries Mothering.—For the first time in her screen career, Pola Negri is playing another role. In "The Woman On Trial," she is shown as a woman who lives only for her child, instead of the vampish Pola. Mauritz Stillner, who was responsible for Miss Negri's success in "Hotel Imperial," is directing "The Woman On Trial." The picture is based on the stage play by Ernest Vajda.

Girl Director Does Another.—Dorothy Arzner, the Paramount girl director who has just assisted Esther Ralston through "Fashions for Women," will direct Miss Ralston's next production, "Ten Modern Commandments." The story was written by Jack Lait, and is said to be especially suitable to Miss Ralston's style.

Strain Tells On Lon.—Lon Chaney's shoulder blades are badly inflamed as the result of having his arms strapped in a harness to keep them to his sides for his role as a sideshow freak in "The Unknown." Mr. Chaney's shoulders have been weak ever since "The Miracle Man," when he worked for days with them thrown out of place. John Crawford and Norman Kerry have the other important roles in "The Unknown."

Change Names, Hike.—The picture which Universal is making under the title, "Flight," will be released as "The American Eagle." The story was written by Lieutenant Ralph Blanchard and deals with the aviation corps in France during the World war. Emory Johnson is directing the production with Raymond Keane and Barbara Kent in the featured roles.

To Play the Son.—Robert Agnew has been added to the cast as the son in "His Son" which Sam Rork is producing with John Francis Dillon at the megaphone. Ann Rork, daughter of the producer, will be dressed up for the first time in pictures. She has the role of a Boston girl, finacee of "His Son." Lewis Stone is featured in the picture with Priscilla Bonner as leading lady.

Off On the Bounding Main.—The entire company filming "Captain Salvation" has gone to sea for two weeks during which time sea sequences for the picture will be shot. Lars Hanson, the new Swedish actor, will be seen as Captain Salvation in the picture, with Pauline Starke and Marceline Day as the feminine leads. Ernest Torrence is cast in the role of the convict ship captain, and George Faucett, Flora Sam De Grasse and Jay Hunt are also members of the supporting cast.

ANNE NICHOLS' COMEDY SUCCESS

'White Collars'

This play is a splendid lesson on the inconsistency of false pride. It tells the story of a rich man who marries his stenographer and attempts to help her family with his money, only to find that he is up against the pride of the "White Collar" brigade. It has its amusing as well as its pathetic situations, and a sufficient number of wholesome truths and philosophic remarks keep it apt, topical and vital.

The comedy centers around the attempt on the part of Cousin Henry to "democratize" the millionaire. The comedy is replete with amusing situations and is sure to delight everyone who sees it.

Matinee Musicale to Give Dante's "La Vita Nuova"

Harriet Cruise Kemmer and Herman Decker Will Impersonate Beatrice and Dante in Program by University Chorus at Memorial Hall.

The Matinee Musicale will have something different in the way of a program at its meeting Monday afternoon. Instead of the Temple theater where the programs are usually presented, the Monday afternoon meeting will be held in Memorial hall, University of Nebraska.

The University of Nebraska chorus is to give Wolf-Ferrari's setting of Dante's "La Vita Nuova," and will be assisted by two soloists and an orchestra.

Nothing in musical literature is quite like Wolf-Ferrari's setting of portions of Dante's La Vita Nuova. It is so original and extraordinary that a word of elucidation seems necessary.

Two Solo Voices Used.

Two solo voices are used. The soprano impersonating Dante's Beatrice, who was the inspiration not only of La Vita Nuova, but also of his masterpiece La Divinia Comedia. She is heard only in the prologue and in a single phrase at the end of the work. The baritone is frankly individualized as Dante himself.

A novelty is introduced—the piano being used as a solo instrument.

The subject of the cantata is the remarkable record which Dante set down of his love—passion, experienced at the age of nine years for her who became the blessed Beatrice of his greater work, The Divine Comedy. The story of this extraordinary passion, its influence and its fruit belongs to literary history and psychology. For years Dante sang the praises of this rare maiden, always speaking of her in the third person, seeking nothing but her smile, and plunging into the deepest anguish when the greeting was withheld. At the death of her father, his grief was no less than her own. He dreamed that Beatrice herself was dead, and beheld angels carrying her soul to heaven like a little cloud of perfect whiteness.

Dante Inconsolable.

In the year 1290 Beatrice died at the age of twenty-four the bride of a Florentine nobleman. For two and a half years Dante lived a life of sadness inconsolable; then he saw another vision which determined him to labor on, that he might "yet write concerning her

Mary Pickford Joins Business Women's League

Mary Pickford isn't just sure whether she is a professional or business woman, but in either case she is the first of her vocation to join the ranks of the Business and Professional Women's clubs. The movie star has recently become a member of the national federation of clubs. Miss Pickford's admission to the federation came about through her affiliation with the New York league of business and professional women.

Cited as some of Miss Pickord's qualifications for membership in this national organization are the facts that she is a director of the Federal Trust and Savings bank of Los Angeles, co-founder of the United Artists Corporation, and the business head of her own producing unit.

Mary Pickford's days are not spent merely in obediently registering emotions at the behest of a gentleman with a megaphone. They are devoted, also, to a long and grilling study of production costs and the economics of studio life. These things qualify Miss Pickford as a business executive in every sense of the word —possibly the most efficient busiess executive in the whole membership of the national Federation of Business and Professional Women.

Landscapes by Charreton and Metropolitan Museum Pictures to Be Shown in Morrill Hall

Morrill hall is to be the center of much activity as far as art is concerned this spring. Following close on the exhibit by the Nebraska art association, comes the landscape exhibit of Victor Charreton, the French artist. A collection of pictures loaned by the Metropolitan museum of New York City will be on display, also, the two exhibits being shown from March 21 to April 1.

The work of Charreton, whose landscapes will be exhibited the remainder of March is individual, reticent and romantic. Much of it is gay and joyous, but there is also a sombre touch. The technical understanding of the artist of the art of painting, gives life to his canvasses and relieves them of any hint of monotony. This French artist is not a leader in the modernistic movement, nor does he follow cautiously in the beaten track. He has a very individual way of painting subjects which no one else has painted, and perhaps not the least of his successes are his French country-side scenes, which are lovely and fresh.

The Museum Collection.

Included in the collection from the Metropolitan museum, is the work of a number of prominent artists.

Thomas Hovendon of the American school is represented by one of his allegorical pictures, "Jerusalem the Golden." Hovendon is known to many picture lovers for his "Breaking Home Ties" which was one of the most popular canvasses at the Columbian exposition in 1893.

Other Americans represented are: Will H. Lowe, one of the best mural painters in this country; Dwight W. Tryon, noted for his poetic interpretations of nature; and Carleton Wiggins, the most noted painter of cattle and sheep in the United States.

Landscapes With Animals.

"Autumn," by Anton Mauve, the Dutch painter, is done in the mellow tone characteristic of that painter's work. He is known for his landscapes with animals, and the picture included in this colment of his favorite theme. "The Inn," by Esai van de Velde, represents the work of another artist of the Dutch school.

Sir Henry Raeburn, the famous British painter, is noted for his portraits. Not the least attractive of these is the "Portrait of Dr. Black," which is included in the Metropolitan collection.

The French school is represented by such artists as Jean Grenze, Adrien Demont, and Jean Raffaelli.

The annual exhibition of work by the students in the school of fine arts will be held in May.

First Concert of Beethoven Series Sunday

On Sunday afternoon, March 20, at 3:30 o'clock the first of a series of five concerts will be given at Morrill hall, in honor of the Beethoven centenary. The series will take up in chronological order the compositions of Beethoven, each program dealing with a certain period of his development. The first concert will consist of his works as a boy and a young man covering a period of ten years, from 1780 to 1792. Compositions from 1792 to 1797, the period of Beethoven's maturing genius will constitute the program for the second concert to be given under the direction of Henry G. Cox, professor of instrumental ensemble of the University of Nebraska. The university orchestra and guest musicians of Omaha will furnish the music.

Nebraska leads the west in preparations for the celebration of "Beethoven Week" March 20-26, to commemorate the 100th Anniversary of the death of Beethoven.

Benefit Musical By Mortar Board an Attractive Affair

One of the very attractive social events of the Lenten season was the benefit musicale given Saturday afternoon at the Alpha Chi Omega house, by the Mortar Board alumnae. Spring flowers were used throughout the rooms, and the tea table was centered with deep pink peas in a silver bowl, on either side of which were pink tapers in silver holders.

Mrs. F. D. Coleman had charge of the dining room, and pouring the first hour were Miss Alice Howell and Mrs. R. N. Westover. Their places at the table were taken the second hour by Miss Amanda Heppner and Mrs Earl Coryell. The guests were greeted at the door by Mrs. Herman Jobst and Miss Josephine Frisbie. Mrs. Channing Collins presided in the living room.

The following program was given by the members of the organization assisted by a group of active members:

Mrs. Robbins Finds Lincoln Much Changed

An interesting guest from New York City who is a former Lincoln resident, is Mrs. H. E. Robbins, who arrived last week to spend a short time at the home of Mr. and Mrs Ross P. Curtice. Mrs. Robbins is returning to the city after an absence of thirty-five years, and marvels at the changes she has found. The pavement, according to Mrs. Robbins, only extended over a short distance when she resided in Lincoln, and the beautiful homes and the fine business buildings were things yet to be realized

Mrs. Robbins was formerly Miss Tillie Franklin, daughter of Major and Mrs. Nelson G. Franklin, who were among the early settlers in Lincoln. For a number of years Mrs. Franklin taught in the public schools in Lincoln, and then moved to Chicago where she was prominent in juvenile welfare work.

Another change that Mrs Robbins notices is in the climate, and she says that she misses the old Nebraska wind that used to whistle around the corners. She thinks that it isn't quite naturaland homelike without it.

Since Mr. Robbins death during the late war, Mrs. Robbins has been working with her son, who is an architect and sculptor in New York City.

Dr. Stevenson Tells of New Problems of Changing World

Scrapping the worship of the constitution of the United States or else broadening it to meet the demands of the present time was the theme of the principal talk given by Dr. Marietta Stevenson at the luncheon meeting of the A. O. U. W. which was held Saturday at Hotel Lindell.

Dr. Stevenson is from the department of economics at the University of Nebraska. She stated in her lecture Saturday afternoon that in all discussions of politics one had to keep in mind the question, "is democracy a failure?" She showed that many apparent failures in the democratic form of government in the United States today are only failures of the government to keep up with the changing world

"The worship of the constitution of the United States should be scrapped," Dr. Stevenson stated, "if our government is to keep up with the growing demands Today it is called upon to perform many duties undreamed of by the fathers of 150 years ago." She also stated that in her opinion government was dynamic not static, and that the constitution should be broad enough to allow for the different interpretations as needed. Some of the things which the constitution fails to cover, according to Dr. Stevenson are the urban movement, the shift in the population to the Pacific coast, the change in the position of women, and the change in the limits of suffrage.

Dr Stevenson said that within the last twelve years the expenditures for government had increased from over three billion to eleven billion and that whereas the federal government formerly spent sixty per cent of this amount in functioning, there had to be a reversal in the order of things, and that the larger percentage is now spent by local and state government.

"Any attempt to achieve a more efficient form of government," said Dr. Stevenson," must be based on the study of politics as a science"

Preceding Dr. Stevenson's talk, Dr. Laura B. Pfeiffer of the history department of the University of Nebraska gave a report of the meeting of the committee on standards for the A. A. U W. which was held during the holidays in Washington, D. C. Dr. Pfeiffer told the members that the committee was organized in 1921 because of the difficulty experienced by the committee on recognition of colleges She also stated that there were 175 applications for membership pending, and that each application entailed much investigation as to curriculum, faculty, supervision of women students, physical training, and housing conditions. She added that the object of the standards committee was not only to keep up the standards of member institutions but to advance them.

The standards committee includes Miss Emily H. Dutton, Ph. D., chairman, Sweet Briar college, Virginia; Miss Alice Waite, M A., Wellesley; Miss Laura B. Pfeiffer, Ph. D., University of Nebraska; Miss Anna A. Cutter, Ph D., Smith college; Miss Margaret S. Morris, Ph. D., Brown university; Miss Lucy W. Stebbins, B. A., University of California; Miss Juliet J. Poynter, B. A., Kentucky.

Miss Lulu Runge, president of the Lincoln branch of A. A. U W presided. Miss E Ruth Pyrtle brought greetings from the Tulsa branch, having attended a meeting there recently. She stated that the members of the Tulsa A. A. U. W. were working hard for the next biennial convention.

Mrs. A. E. Sheldon, state secretary of the Nebraska A. A. U. W. announced the forming of new branches at Wayne, Kearney and North Platte, and a proposed new branch at Chadron.

More than seventy women attended the luncheon, including besides the members of the Lincoln branch, several guests from Crete and other surrounding towns.

Minerva's Mail

Take Your Troubles to Minerva

Such a cynicism as this nineteen year old feels sprouting in her heart—she believes it may blossom into one of these terrible exposing books—The "Unruly Sex" Causes Heartaches—One man tells why he avoids matrimony.

She Feels Dangerous.

"Jo" is going to be a dangerous man-hater, she is, and write a book about the unfaithfulness of men, who are all alike. At least, that is her conclusion, having found one who is tired of her. In her bitterness; she asks "What's the matter with the boys and men of nowadays?" If you know, for the love of Cupid, tell her, gentlemen. If you don't want to see a great, big terrible book in print about yourselves. She deals with her pet aversion thus:

Dear Minerva: Maybe you can figure out something for me. I simply have to get this burden off my chest, so I am bothering you. What ails these boys or young men of today? I am thoroughly disgusted with all of them. They're all devotion for a few weeks or a month and then the girl is all blah.

I'm nineteen, not Venus de Milo, but passable, dress according to my means and dance well. What I can't understand is why a fellow wants to be a good friend or a pal and turns around and deliberately forgets to phone for the third time. Are they all all like that? I'm losing fath in all of the opposite sex today. They tell so many fibs and hand out so many lines that they can't tell the truth at all.

Now "Arnie" (that's his nickname) was different from the other fellows and was very reasonable, and oh, liked me immensely, and would never want to forget me (more applesauce.) Well, he told me that I could not be any sweeter and all that blah, blah, and was so anxious to get really acquainted with me and be a good friend, that I fell for his line and went out with him and let him visit me. That was fine and dandy for the first few weeks. His thoughtfulness was unexcelled, and I surely hate to think that he is the bunk, too. But my thoughts are surely turning to that point, for every time he says he'll phone on a certain night, he fails to do so, and now I haven't seen or heard from him for a week.

Some of these men rave about us girls being unfaithful and all that tommy-rot, but they, the honorable masculine sex, are far worse, for one can't believe anything they say. I guess they are all alike and from now on I'm going to be a dangerous man hater. I still like "Arnie" and hate to think of becoming a man hater, because I'd like to have him come back to me, but it will be too late in another week, for then I'll change my mind and I won't lose my appetite and grieve. No, no all ye faithful readers of Minerva's Mail, my formerly peaceful soul will turn to black hate for all men, and I will become an old maiden stenographer and write a book about the unfaithfulness of men.

If anyone knows any man or boy who is different from my version of them I will surely give them a lot of credit: in fact, they deserve a medal. This surely sounds terrible, but it's the naked truth.

Please don't banish me from your thoughts as a dumb dora, but I feel so blue and had to do something, so I hope that you will give this foolish letter some consideration.

With love from, Jo.

A. I sympathize with you and truly understand what bitterness you are going through. The smile up my sleeve is only becase I know you are not going to be a man-hater for long, and that another hero will come along soon, a faithful one, and then the world will be rose-hued again, and you will find men a pretty good sort after all.

So far as I can judge from the facts you have given, Arnie is merely tired of you. That is blunt, I know, but don't feel badly. You are not the first of us ladies who has ever let a man we wanted slip away because he sought new fields to conquer.

What's at the bottom of it all? What is the matter with them, or if you will, with us? I think you hit a mightly important nail right on the head without knowing it in the second paragraph of your letter. You listed your qualifications. All physical. Any man or woman either is going to tire sooner or later of a friendship based entirely upon the way you look and dress and trip the light fantastic. To make a relationship of any kind lasting, you must build it on deeper foundations than those.

So buck up, dear, and save your tears. If "Arnie" is absolutely the only man in the world for you, I've not a doubt that you will get him back. But not by weeping and wailing and gnashing your pretty teeth, nor hating him. The attitude of mind one carries with one has more to do with love than this World dreams of.

The Unruly Sex.

Another little girl all worried over the unruly sex. What shall she do? Read her letter and help me tell her.

Dear Minerva: My reason for writing to you is to get some much-needed advice. As I have read your Mail daily, I think you and your readers are the ones to write to. I a ma girl of seventeen and have been in Lincoln less than a year, and attend high school. Ever since I have been here I've cared a great deal for a certain boy.

What shall I do? Sometimes he smiles and acts as though he cared a lot and other times he is very indifferent. How can I get around him to see if he really likes me or if he is just stringing me along?

Please tell me for I've been in suspense a long time. Marta.

A. Take a tip from my advice to Jo: it may save you lots of heartaches. And please stop worrying about the boys. Of course, it is all right to like them. I do too. But I promise you that you can save your self many a bowl full of tears by not allowing your thoughts to center on one of them to the exclusion of other things. Fretting and worrying and wondering whether he likes you or not isn't going to make him like you. He probably does. And like doesn't mean love. Try centering your thoughts on your studies and your other interests. Try enjoying all your friends, both boys and girls. Try being just your own sweet, natural interesting self —and be content to wait for love. Folks waste a lot of time in chasing it. Some times even get so excited and anxious racing after a fancy that they pass right by the real thing, never seeing it. Anyway, there is time enough yet. Don't you think so?

The Mechanic's Viewpoint.

Dear Minerva: "Roy's" letter in The Star interested me as I am also a mechanic and the "girl" problem is an ever increasing problem. I am old enough so that I have voted for president and have had several chances to marry fine Christian girls but because of home ties and the fact that I have been trained that one should have enough to start married life properly I have refrained from stepping over into the state of matrimony.

My advice to "Roy" would be to go back to his pal and have a good time with the boys till such a time as he is able to support another "half." If she does not find it to her liking to wait let her go—and you step out with the young folks closer at home. Don't devote too much time to one girl until you are sure she is also willing to devote the same amount to you. This long distance courtship has been a fizzle in my case and another young man on the ground floor took the hand of the only girl I have ever considered seriously. It was not because she did not care for me at first either, just that you can't expect any girl with any pep to hold onto a hope in the distance when she has a certainty at her doorstep.

"Roy" will never appreciate his boy chum's generosity unless at some time later he is without any congenial friends and wants some. Circumstances and my disposition perhaps, has caused me to be without close boy friends ever since I got out of school, so I can appreciate them. Ever since I was forced to quit school to go to work it has been a question of how many hours for work and how many to improve myself mentally and physically so that my trade would not make me a slave. I have given a great many hours to church and young people's work and it has never cause a regret. As long as one is busy they do not miss the companionship of other young folks.

The prospects are looking better all the time. I am a trusted citizen of the community, the business is developing to a place where it will support more than its own growing expenses and I have a girl. Even though I have had many girl friends I have never found my ideal in a girl who would also be willing to live in this size town and be a mechanic's wife. Note I did not say that I have never seen the girl that would suit me but always fate or my slowness has thrust some other young man in before me just as I thought I might grasp the prize.

My sentiments are with you on the petting question, Minerva. It never elevated anyone and it does cause a lot of heartache for many girls. The girls, I think, are just as prone to help it along as the boys but seldom realize that their real sentiments expressed in their petting are not felt by the boys who are simply after the thrill. My first kiss given to a girl was given, to a girl who by actions and words dared me to. As soon as it was done and I realized that she had wanted me to kiss her and had succeeded my respect for her dropped.

My only lament is that some of the finest girls are not pretty and that a great many of the pretty girls are that and that, alone. I have vowed that my wife shall be both pretty and intelligent and a Christian and so far, see no reason why my ideal may not be realized. I know a great many men who do have that kind of wife.

Many thanks for your department which I read regularly. Ardent is a fine scholar and usually expresses my sentiments. I agree with you that she seems to be able to take care of herself.

If "Roy" cares to correspond with a brother-mechanic you have my address and I will take time to make my letter interesting and perhaps be able to help him make his time bring in more money. I have started three young men out all older than myself and now they are on their own. If you are valuable to someone else then you can be more valuable to yourself. Don't figure on staying a "Hired Man" all the rest of your life, Roy, if you want to support a wife.

With best regards to all the "Mail" family, I write as

ARCHIBALD.

Questions in Brief.

Fred: An ordinance enacted by the board of adermen in New York city and which was adopted recently prohibits the use of wooden shingle roofs in that city. Complete replacement of existing wooden shingle roofs before 1942 is comprehended by this ordinance as well as prohibiting wooden shingles on new constructions.

I am told that adog has two sets of teeth, that between the age of four and six months a dog's first teeth come out and his new second teeth commence to come in.

Martha: You can clean papermache and lacquered goods by rubbing thoroughly with a paste made of wheat flour and olive oil. Apply with a bit of soft flannel or old linen, rubbing hard. Wipe off and polish by rubbing with an old silk handkerchief.

Student: Mary Roberts Rinehart gives her address as 2419 Massachusetts Ave. New York city.

Geraldine: You quote "Any system which calls for the repeated reduction of weight is a mistake for it so weakens the individual, so impairs her vitality and lowers her resistance that she renders herself susceptible to consumption and other diseases. They cut down in the amount of food they are in the habit of eating to one-half or one-third of the original amount. This is a grave mistake."

Many articles have been printed recently criticising women who reduce. Personally I believe it is a grave mistake if over-fat women do not cut down their diet, and that reducing the idet one-half will harm no one. The danger is in taking thyroid extract for reduction of fat. The elimination of starches and sweets and the substitution of fruits and vegetables will injure no one.

Matchless Tonal Quality That Will Endure Forever!

—that is what one really buys when purchasing the incomparable Steinway piano. The value of tone was certainly impressed upon me the other day as the truly important thing every piano buyer should know! It was then that I heard a comparison of tonal value in the parlors of the Schmoller & Mueller Piano Co. The Steinway piano was placed side by side with another highly advertised and high priced make. On these two pianos, the same musical nocturne was played by a disinterested artist, and then I knew why almost any great artist of modern times owns a Steinway. If you purchase a piano, hear the comparison first. The result will be, you will own a Steinway! The Steinway, and eighteen other leading makes of pianos, are distributed by Schmoller & Mueller Piano Co., 1220 O Street, Lincoln.

What Style Permanent

—wave do you want? Gone are the days when a woman needs must accept what she was handed in the way of permanent curly headedness. Now, the profession of permanent waving has become such an exact science that women are able to demand just the type of wave they want (that is, from a reliable shop that knows all the ins and outs of the business). Such a shop is the Giffen Beaute Shoppe, where discriminating femininity goes for those large, soft, natural looking waves which only a flat wrap can give, or for any other successful sort of permanent.

And the clamorous demand for a Giffen Circuline knows no age limit. There are voices of maids and young women, little girls not yet in their teens, and white haired matrons—all eager to possess the added charm of a perfect permanent wave. Any of the Giffen Shoppe operators will explain the exact process in detail to you—so that you may realize yourself that a permanent is as beneficial to your hair health as it is to your appearance!

"Ask the Man

—who owns one"—if you're interested in Packards; "ask the gal who had one"if you'd like to get the interesting facts on a Harper Method shampoo! It is only when the Harper suds are playing about your locks, and skillful Harper fingers are massaging YOUR scalp, neck and shoulders into red-blooded activity, that one appreciates to the fullest extent, the unusual excellence of a Harper shampoo.

There's a thorough washing and rinsing in softened water; a complete massage of the neck and shoulders; a treatment, rather than a shampoo—this, given with the main idea of promoting hair health. After a shampoo, and a talk with Mrs. Webster at the Harper Shop, I am convinced that there is no better way to prepare for a successful permanent than by a series of Harper Shampoos. For you know, healthy hair takes the most successful wave. It may be a hot oil Harper combination if you wish, for only $1.50!

Gay Garments—to Greet the Spring!

You'll meet the first glad day with a spirit as blithe as the season, if you're ready with just the right clothes for every smart affair. And shopping is a happy adventure in Lincoln stores when you can be sure of finding chic, youthful models of such distinction at prices so moderate.

—to choose a spring coat at Gold's that will thoroughly delight you: it's so easy on your pocketbook too, for there are many extremely smart models offered for your selection at only $27.50! Sport coats in large plaids and checks are often smartly collared in fur; the plainer tweeds are offered in strictly tailored styles. Distinctive in every line are coats of fine plain twills — often times banded in the furs of the hour. Last but not least in the collection of coats at Gold & Co. are striking models of kasha and satin in the popular black and white combinations. With Easter only four weeks away foresighted women will choose their coats from this assortment while the variety of clever styles is greatest. They may enter, then the Easter style parade with greatest confidence!

The Hat You'll Want

—for Easter, is waiting for you at Gold's! Name your own smart fabric or straw—it's here from ballibuntal to crocheted visca and back again! Flowers detly trim some of the late models; wide brims make a fashionable bow; pastels and vivid colorings are evident, as well as the ever-smart black. Get under YOUR hat—tomorrow! At Gold's!

The Password is "Evans"

—to those housewives who would achieve the semi-annual housecleaning with greatest ease: Have you ever tried the Evans for washing your blankets? They'll come home—not only immaculately clean—but also fluffy as when new—due to the carding machine which is used in the O. J. Fee system of blanket washing. Moreover, each blanket will be tucked into a moth proof bag—ready to put away until next season if you wish.

Just as satisfactory are Evans-cleaned comforters. Light and fluffy they'll be—with no lumps! And, as you burst into your new spring wardrobe, do not forget your winter one entirely. Have the presence of mind to dispatch it to the Evans for a thorough cleaning. Thus and thus only, will you prevent the moth family from establishing summer headquarters in your cherished garments. Each piece of apparel will be returned to you in a moth proof bag, so putting the winter clothes away, becomes as simple as a trip to the attic!

Nebraska Delegate to Colonists Session Traces Ancient Lineage

Mrs. Albert Thierolf of Utica, who will be one of two delegates from Nebraska to the national convention of The Old Colonists society in Washington, D. C., April 18, and for ten days following, is of a most unusual and outstanding lineal descent. During the past week, Mrs. Thierolf was a delegate to the state convention of the D. A. R., in Kearney.

Edith Erdine Atwood Thierolf was born at Wareham, Mass., a small but wealthy suburb of Boston, the elder of two daughters of Thornton and Lois Sherman Westgate Atwood. Mrs. Thierolf's mother was a daughter of Priscilla Sherman, a niece of William Tecumseh Sherman, prominent in the war annals of the United States, and especially distinguished in the Civil war.

The family traces its genealogical record back to Sir John Shurtleff, born in 1684 in Ecclesfield, England, near the famous town of Scrooby. Scrooby was the early gathering place of the Puritans before they left England for Holland, where the family of the late President Roosevelt became a branch of the geneological tree of the Shurtleffs, the Atwoods, and the Roosevelts.

On the same family tree appear the names of Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Bullock Roosevelt, their son, Theodore Roosevelt, and the latter's sons, Kermit and Quentin. Among the records are the names of Miles Standish, Priscilla Mullins, who became John Alden's wife because Miles Standish did not have the courage to speak for himself, Edith Kermit Carow, the second wife of the late President Roosevelt and Alice Hathaway Lee, who was a daughter of Sir Cabot Lee.

Figuring in the same family records are the names of General Warren, distinguished as an American Indian fighter during the Revolution and Nathaniel Bradstreet Shurtleff, at one time president of Harvard, and three terms mayor of Boston, from 1868 to 1870.

Francis Shurtleff was a graduate of Yale, served in the war of 1812, and for several years was judge of the Supreme court of Vermont. William Steele Shurtleff, who lived at Springfield, Mass., from 1830 to 1896, was noted as a poet, having written "Minnetonka," an ode to Springfield at the time of its 250th anniversary. He also wrote "The Way," from which these lines are taken:

"First find thou Truth, and then,
Although she strays
From beaten paths of men
To untrod ways—
Her leading follow straight.
And bide thy fate.

And whether smiles or scorn
Thy passing greet,
Or findst thou flower or thorn
Beneath thy feet—
Fare on! nor fear thy fate
At heaven's gate."

Rev. William Shurtleff III was a graduate of Harvard. After his death his remains were deposited in the church of which he was pastor directly under the communion table. Roswell Morse Shurtleff was another well known member of the family, the painter of "The Silent Words," which occupies a prominent position in the Metropolitan museum. This famous work elicited congratulations from the Alpine club of Paris, and was the subject of much comment among European artists over an American painting scenery of his own country.

Mrs. Edith Atwood Thierolf of Utica, who has a long and distinguished ancestry, is prominent in Nebraska genealogical societies. More than one hundred persons who have become prominent in the literary, artistic, and professional world appear in Mrs. Thierolf's ancestral record.

Two hundred and seventy-two members of the Atwood family in its different branches, of which Mrs. Thierolf is one, appears in this genealogical record, the more prominent numbering above one hundred. The hundred include persons who have gained fame as authors, professional men, preachers and statesmen.

The coat of arms dates back to William Shurtleff in 1437, the earliest known person of the name. It embodies three parts, arms, crest and motto. The first component is a fess between three greyhounds with sable collars and ring gules, second, a torce or sable on a falchion erect, and enfiled with a leopard's face, and the motto, "Sola Nobilitas Virtus," meaning "Virtue is the only Nobility." The colors are gold, sable and red.

There are two volumes of seven and thirty-eight pages each in this genealogy, and a third volume of about the same size is now being prepared. It will be devoted very largely to the Atwood family of which Mrs. Thierolf is a member.

Among Mrs. Thierolf's classmates in a private school at Wareham where she was born were Alice Hathaway and Mame Holmes, pupils of Oliver Wendell Holmes. Another ancestral distinction the Utica woman enjoys as much as any other, perhaps, is that the father of one of her grandmothers was with General Washington when he crossed the Delaware.

231 Disabled Nebraskans Rehabilitated in 6 Years

"Disability does not create new energy or give a man another sense, as is the popular opinion among the majority of persons," says J. R. Jewel, supervisor of the civilian vocational rehabilitation program in Nebraska. "And it either makes or breaks a man. That is the reason that this department wants to get in touch wih disability cases as soon after the injury as is possible. Then we can establish a contact for them and help to rebuild their lives."

Nebraska's department of vocational education has made possible complete rehabilitation of 231 men and women in the past six years.

"That many men and women have been returned to self-supporting citizenship," Mr. Jewel declared. "At the present there are 172 cases in the state which are being trained toward self-support by the department here."

Cases which are appealed to the vocational department vary in degree from the loss of both eyes to the loss of legs, hands, arms, hearing and injury to various other parts of the body. Investigations are made and if the case is worthy the department starts at once to help the injured person adjust himself so that he can earn a living and be independent.

"That the blind see and the lame walk is figurdtively true in rehabilitation work," Mr. Jewel continued. "We try to adjust the injured to the community in which they lived at the time of the accident. Blind are taught to do work with heir hands such as rug weaving and he like. Deaf are taught lip reading so that they may continue as useful citizens, and persons whose lose arms or legs are trained to readjust themselves to work which can be done without the use of these members."

Mr. Jewel cited the case of a violinist who lost three fingers of the left hand and was considered unable to continue his work. By training him to use his right hand for playing he was restored to his former usefulness. The average time required for rehabilitation is about a year and five months, according to Mr. Jewel.

The majority of disabled persons who are injured while working have less than a high school education, while the larger number injured in public accidents are those with a professional education. It is interesting to note that agriculture produced almost as many disabled as either common labor or all combined trades and manufacturing industries. There are now 631 cases registered with the department of vocational education.

The total cost of 72 rehabilitation cases handled by the department was $18,846 and these persons now have a combined annual earning of $65,946.

"Rehabilitation does pay," Mr. Jewel concluded.

W. C. T. U. Quizzes Nebraska Newspaper Men on Effects of Prohibition Laws Here

For more than a year, the Nebraska W. C. T. U. has been collecting opinions relating to the result of the prohibitory law and the efficiency of its enforcement in different parts of the state.

One of the first groups, to which the appeal was directed was the newspaper men and women. It is interesting in connection with the Nebraska opinion to note the expression of the National Editorial association while in session in Los Angeles last summer.

The following excerpt is from the address of the national president:

"It is a high privilege for any man or woman to have a part in preparing or directing the utterance of a newspaper. The rural newspaper, weekly or daily, truthfully and proudly boasts that it is exclusively the family newspaper, the newspaper of the home. Every member of the family reads it and it is kept on the family reading table for days and weeks for ready reference as to coming events and an authoritative statement of past events.

"Therefore it is of particular importance that our newspapers forming a part of the rural press and our organization being the only voice of the rural press, should at all times support definitely and boldly every constitutional and statutory enactment and give our utterances weight by private and public observance of the same principle, obedience to law and respect for constitutional authority."

The questions asked Nebraska editors by Nebraska women were: first, What do you consider has been the effect of the prohibition law in your community? Second, Where do you think the greatest responsibility rests in the enforcement of law, with the federal, state or county authorities? Third, What would you suggest to aid in enforcement? Fourth, What effort is being made in your county to secure enforcement?

Frank O. Edgecombe of the Geneva Signal says (1) "All to the good". (2) "I consider the responsibility equal." (3) "Alert public opinion. No law is well enforced unless the people of a community aid the officials in their duty and elect officals who will do their duty. The law is good enough for a community like ours." (4) Nothing special. The sheriff and other officials are giving careful attention to the enforcement of the law."

"Effect Good" Says Van Densen

Don C. Van Deusen of the Blair Pioiot:

"The effect in our community is good. With the federal there should be local effort for enforcement, arrests in our community mostly made by federal officers."

The Sherman County Times through C. F. Beushausen says:

"With the exceptions of a few disgruntled ones prohibition is a success in this county. This is due to the fact that we have a sheriff and a county attorney who stand for law enforcement. I feel the responsibility varies there are communities where the sentiment is against law enforcement and in that case the federal officers ought to take the lead, but in dry communities where the sentiment is right the federal government should not be put to that expense. In many cases I believe the state government is to blame for non-enforcement. A man who takes the oath to support the constitution and sees violations such as have occurred at great conventions in this state can not expect the people to have any respect for laws, and I have found from what information I have at hand that enforcement is not being undertaken by the state in wet communities and I would therefore suggest that to have enforcement of the dry law, or any other law, that they must all be enforced alike. We have some violations in our county but under the present county administration they are limited.'

The Newman Grove Reporter by F. H. Price says:

"Prohibition in this county has greatly decreased the amount of liquor consumed. It has made it a public disgrace for a man to be seen drunk. It has confined the use of liquor to a limited class of people whose standing in the community is low. I think the responsibility of enforcement should be bourne by the federal, state and county authorities working together under one management. This would avoid duplication of authority. I believe the local authorities should also be held responsible for enforcement of the liquor laws. The greatest aid to enforcement lies in the creation of a public sentiment for enforcement. If some way can be found to make every one feel a responsibility in rndering assistance the task will be easy. Madison county has not been very active in law enforcement although the county judge has applied the penalty without fear or favor whenever bootleggers are brought before him."

Sees Mixed Results.

A. T. Buechler of the Grand Island Independent, while he declares the effect of prohibition has been good, says: "It has been mixed. The greatest responsibility rests with public opinion. I believe the greatest aid in enforcement of the law would be a modification of the amendment along lines that would continue prohibition against all possible private traffic in liquor and retain the good prohibition has done while, at the same time, drawing to it more general public support. Replying to the fourth question, County Attorney Suhr, Sheriff Palmer and the Grand Island police force have, to all appearances, been making the best possible effort, and it has been a continued effort.'

Congressman Edgar Howard speaking for the Columbus Telegram says: "(1) The sobering effect of taking whiskey away from the public, and making traffickers in intoxicant law breakers has served to swell the volume of savings in all our banks and loan associations, and has transformed many renters into home owners. (2) In a state like Nebraska, where we have prohibition of the liquor traffic in our state constitution, the responsibility for faithful enforcement rests equally upon state and federal officials. (3) Constant teaching and preaching of the good gospel, which proclaims that none may be good American citizens save those who are loyal to the law of the land. (4) I have been from home so much in recent years that I have not had the best opportunity for observation, but I quite generally regard all our local and county officials as in an earnest effort toward enforcement."

The Tecumseh Chieftain: "My opinion is that prohibition, slow in coming, is here for all time and will be a greater blessing to our people each year as time wears on. Skeptics may try to tell me that prohibition has done nothing for Tecumseh, yet I have seen the situation ar up here from a four saloon town, with every attendant evil, to comparative little drinking, even on the part of the elder men, and cially with the youth. Thirty-five years ago the open saloon invited the boys in, many went and if they had money they could buy liquor. Many became confirmed drunkards. The youth of today do not know what a saloon is like, and liquor is hard to get and mighty high priced, discouraging to youth. The greatest force in enforcement is the state and federal officials, but most can be accomplished through local officers, because they are familiar with local conditions, the probable violators, locations of stills, etc. I would suggest everlasting official service with the local officers aided by unknown outsiders, when necessary, and the imposition of heavy fines and imprisonement on violators, especially old offenders. I favor the bread and water diet. I am strong for law enforcement to the letter, whether the prohibitory law or any other."

Results "Largely Beneficial"

J. G. Alden of the York Republican:

"The effect of prohibition in this county has been good although this was never a wet county. I think the responsibility lies with the local officers. You can not enforce a federal statute unless the people locally are for it. When local sentiment arms local officers the job of enforcement will be easily done. I would suggest that everything should be done to arouse local sentiment and put more acute consciences in the minds of the people. If they get aroused to the evil of bootlegging and their own responsibility they will bring about the enforcement of the law. I think your county officials have been quite effective in running down bootleggers.'

The Albion News, Glenn Cramer editor, says: "The effect of prohibition in this community has been largely for good. The only noticeable ill-effect is the occasional case where certain of the younger element, seeking a thrill, break the law, but I can not say that this is worse than in the pre-prohibition days. The greatest responsibility rests upon local officers who are in close touch with the situation. They have no right to 'pass the buck". But they do often need the help of outside officers in handling difficult cases, but the responsibility is their. I think organizations such as yours, and all good citizens should endeavor to keep in touch with the situation and report apparent infractions of the law. This may not always get results, but officers who wish to do their duty will appreciate such information, but such effort should always be conducted diplomatically. So far as I know the only effort being made in this county is by the local authorities. They are very good."

Lightning Arrester as Safety Valve.

When constructing an outdoor aerial of any type, it is necessary to use some form of approved lightning arrester. This device is screwed to the building at a point convenient to the inlet to the set. The lead-in is taken directly to the set, an extra wire being soldered to the lead-in and taken to the terminal marked aerial on the arrester. The other terminal of the arrester is grounded outside the building.

Various Kinds of Tubes on the Market.

The great variety of tubes on the market today makes a confusing problem for the uninitiated. There are amplifier, detector, ballast and rectifying tubes, and in each of these classes there are many subdivisions. As a general rule, any tube except an amplifier, rectifier, or ballast tube may be used most anywhere in the set. A tube such as the 201-A or the 301-A will operate as a radio-amplifier about as well as when it is used as a detector or audio-amplifier. The peculiarities of individual tubes may cause one to operate a little better in one position than in another, but by switching them around it will be soon discovered where they are most efficient.

Attention to Vacuum Tube Sockets

Vacuum tube sockets should be given every possible attention. Tube sockets may make or break a receiving set. Leakage between terminals or contact springs may easily occur and this may be reduced by employing the best of insulating materials. With the present method of attaching the leads from the tube seal to the prongs, a contact on the side of the prong is superior to contact on the end. The leads from the seal are drawn through the hollow prong, cut off, and solder at the end of the prong. This leaves a small amount of solder which, of course, is in the circuit when contact is made to the end of the prong. The small amount of resistance introduced by this solder is ordinarily quite negligible. The contact to solder, however, is not permanent since oxidation takes place rapidly. Contact on the side, making connection to the brass prong, is decidedly better than contact on the end of the prong. The double spring, wiping on two sides of the prong, as employed in some sockets is undoubtedly the best solution.

Wave Trap in the Receiver.

A properly connected and operated wave trap will eliminate the signals of an unusually strong and nearby station that causes interference, but it cannot compensate for broadness of tuning inherent in the receiver itself. If the dial setting for all stations are rather broad, do not look forward to a wave trap as a cure-all for the trouble. Overhaul the set and make arrangements for a more selective circuit.

For the Notebook.

Never operate a vibrating type of charger at night.

Poorly designed transformers are a common cause of distortion.

A storage battery if properly cared for should last from three to five years.

If the detector tube squeals when the hand is placed near it inspect the grid wiring.

The first place to look for trouble in a receiving set when it stops working is the batteries.

The average receiver operates most efficiently with about 100 feet of antenna, including the lead-in.

To prevent the dial from slipping, place behind it a piece of paper which nearly covers the entire circumference of the dial.

A home-made aerial insulator can be arranged by placing a milk bottle on top of a wood stick. The wire is attached to the neck of the bottle.

It is a good plan to inspect an antenna often. Sometimes wires become entwined with the lead-in of a neighbor's set and the result is distorted and broken up programs.

ITALIAN TENOR INVADES RADIO FIELD SUNDAY

The radio concert of Giovanni Martinelli marks another invasion of the Metropolitan opera by radio. The famous Italian tenor will make his radio debut as an Atwater Kent artist, Sunday night, March 20, when he broadcasts from WEAF and eighteen other stations.

Martinelli had only to sing and his career followed as the result of a series of "discoveries." First, while a clarinet player in an Italian regimental band, he was discovered by the bandmaster while singing in the barracks the familiar notes of the "Recondita harmonia" from La Tosca. The bandmaster insisted on taking him to Milan, where he was offered a concert engagement following his military service.

Instead, Martinelli at the end of his services went to Prof. Mandolina and took lessons in both singing and acting, continuing his study for more than two years. He made his debut at the Dal Verme theater in Milan, singing "Ernani," and followed this with another Verdi-Victor Hugo role, that of "Ruy Blas." Both were enormously successful.

Singing the next year at Ancona he was heard by Puccini who saw in Martinelli the perfect tenor for the role of Dick Johnson in "The Girl of the Golden West," then being put on in Rome. Martinelli was put into the opera in Rome and later that year sang it in Genoa, Milan, Naples, and Monte Carlo.

His singing at Monte Carlo resulted in his engagement there for three years at the opera house, and for the corresponding summers at Covent Garden, London. He was heard in Rome by a representative of the Metropolitan Opera, by whom he was engaged and made his New York debut in "La Boheme" in December, 1915.

Martinelli has twice been decorated by the King of Italy, and his native city of Montagna has named their opera house for him. He is now in his forty-second year. The romantic looking tenor is six feet tall with a tremendous shock of hair. He and his wife and two children live in an apartment overlooking Central Park, New York. His radio program, beginning at 9:15 eastern time, follows:

Aria: "O Paradiso" from "L'Africaine" ..... Meyerbeer

RADIO DIGEST

Radiograms.

Sir Oliver Lodge held a telepathy test over the radio.

More than 2000 pupils are learning Spanish by radio over Station WGN, Chicago.

Broadcasting stations in England consumed 65,870 hours of program time last year. With 21 stations on the air, the average for each station was 59 hours per week.

The use of radio waves 10 miles long as a solution of the present problem of radio interference has been predicted by Professor B Smith Hopkins, of the University of Illinois.

When the radio act went into effect recently in the United States, there were 733 broadcasting stations, 14,768 amateur stations, 22 trans-oceanic stations, 63 general public service (coastal) stations, 74 point-to-point limited public service stations, 207 limited commercial stations, 179 experimental stations, 38 technical and training stations, and 2035 ships equipped with radio. All were licensed to operate under the radio communication laws administered by the Bureau of Navigation of the Department of Commerce. All their licenses lapsed the moment the new radio law was signed.

Be extremely sparing with the amount of flux used and use just enough solder to run in the joint and make a firm connection. Large gobs of solder are entirely unnecessary and are almost certain to lead into trouble.

Come and Hear Kolster Radio

We could tell you that Kolster Radio sets are extra selective and super-sensitive.. But we prefer to make no claims.

We say, "Come and hear a Kolster Radio, or let us give you a demonstration at home if you prefer."

Kolster Radio appeals to the eye but its main appeal is to the ear.

Musical experts, while they seek beautiful cabinets and advanced engineering, choose their radios chiefly by comparison.. Their critical ears demand the utmost in reproduction.

That is why Kolster Radio has become known as the "musician's radio.". It is preferred by famous orchestral conductors, singers, composers and musicians.

Accept our offer

Without obligating you, without costing you one cent, let us give you a demonstration. We abide by your decision.

"TODAY'S Greatest value"

KOLSTER 6-D

"Worth twice the price of $98.50"—all agree!

While we make no claims — Kolster owners do. We say "Hear a Kolster." They say "No other set is so marvelous."

Every Kolster owner is enthusiastic. Countless letters prove it. "Tone, easy control, selectivity, sensitivity is vastly superior in a Kolster," all agree.

Kolster owners constantly state that they marvel at such low prices for the different Kolster models. "Kolster prices could be doubled" they say, "and Kolster sets would still be bargains."

"Everyone who hears my Kolster," one owner says, "is amazed." For Kolster performance prove Kolster superiority. Comparison proves Kolster value —"the greatest today."

Before you buy any radio set, ask for a Kolster demonstration — listen, compare. "It has no equal" owners say. We will be glad to arrange a Kolster demonstration for you, in your own home if you wish, and without obligation to you.

An Authentic Showing of The Spring Mode

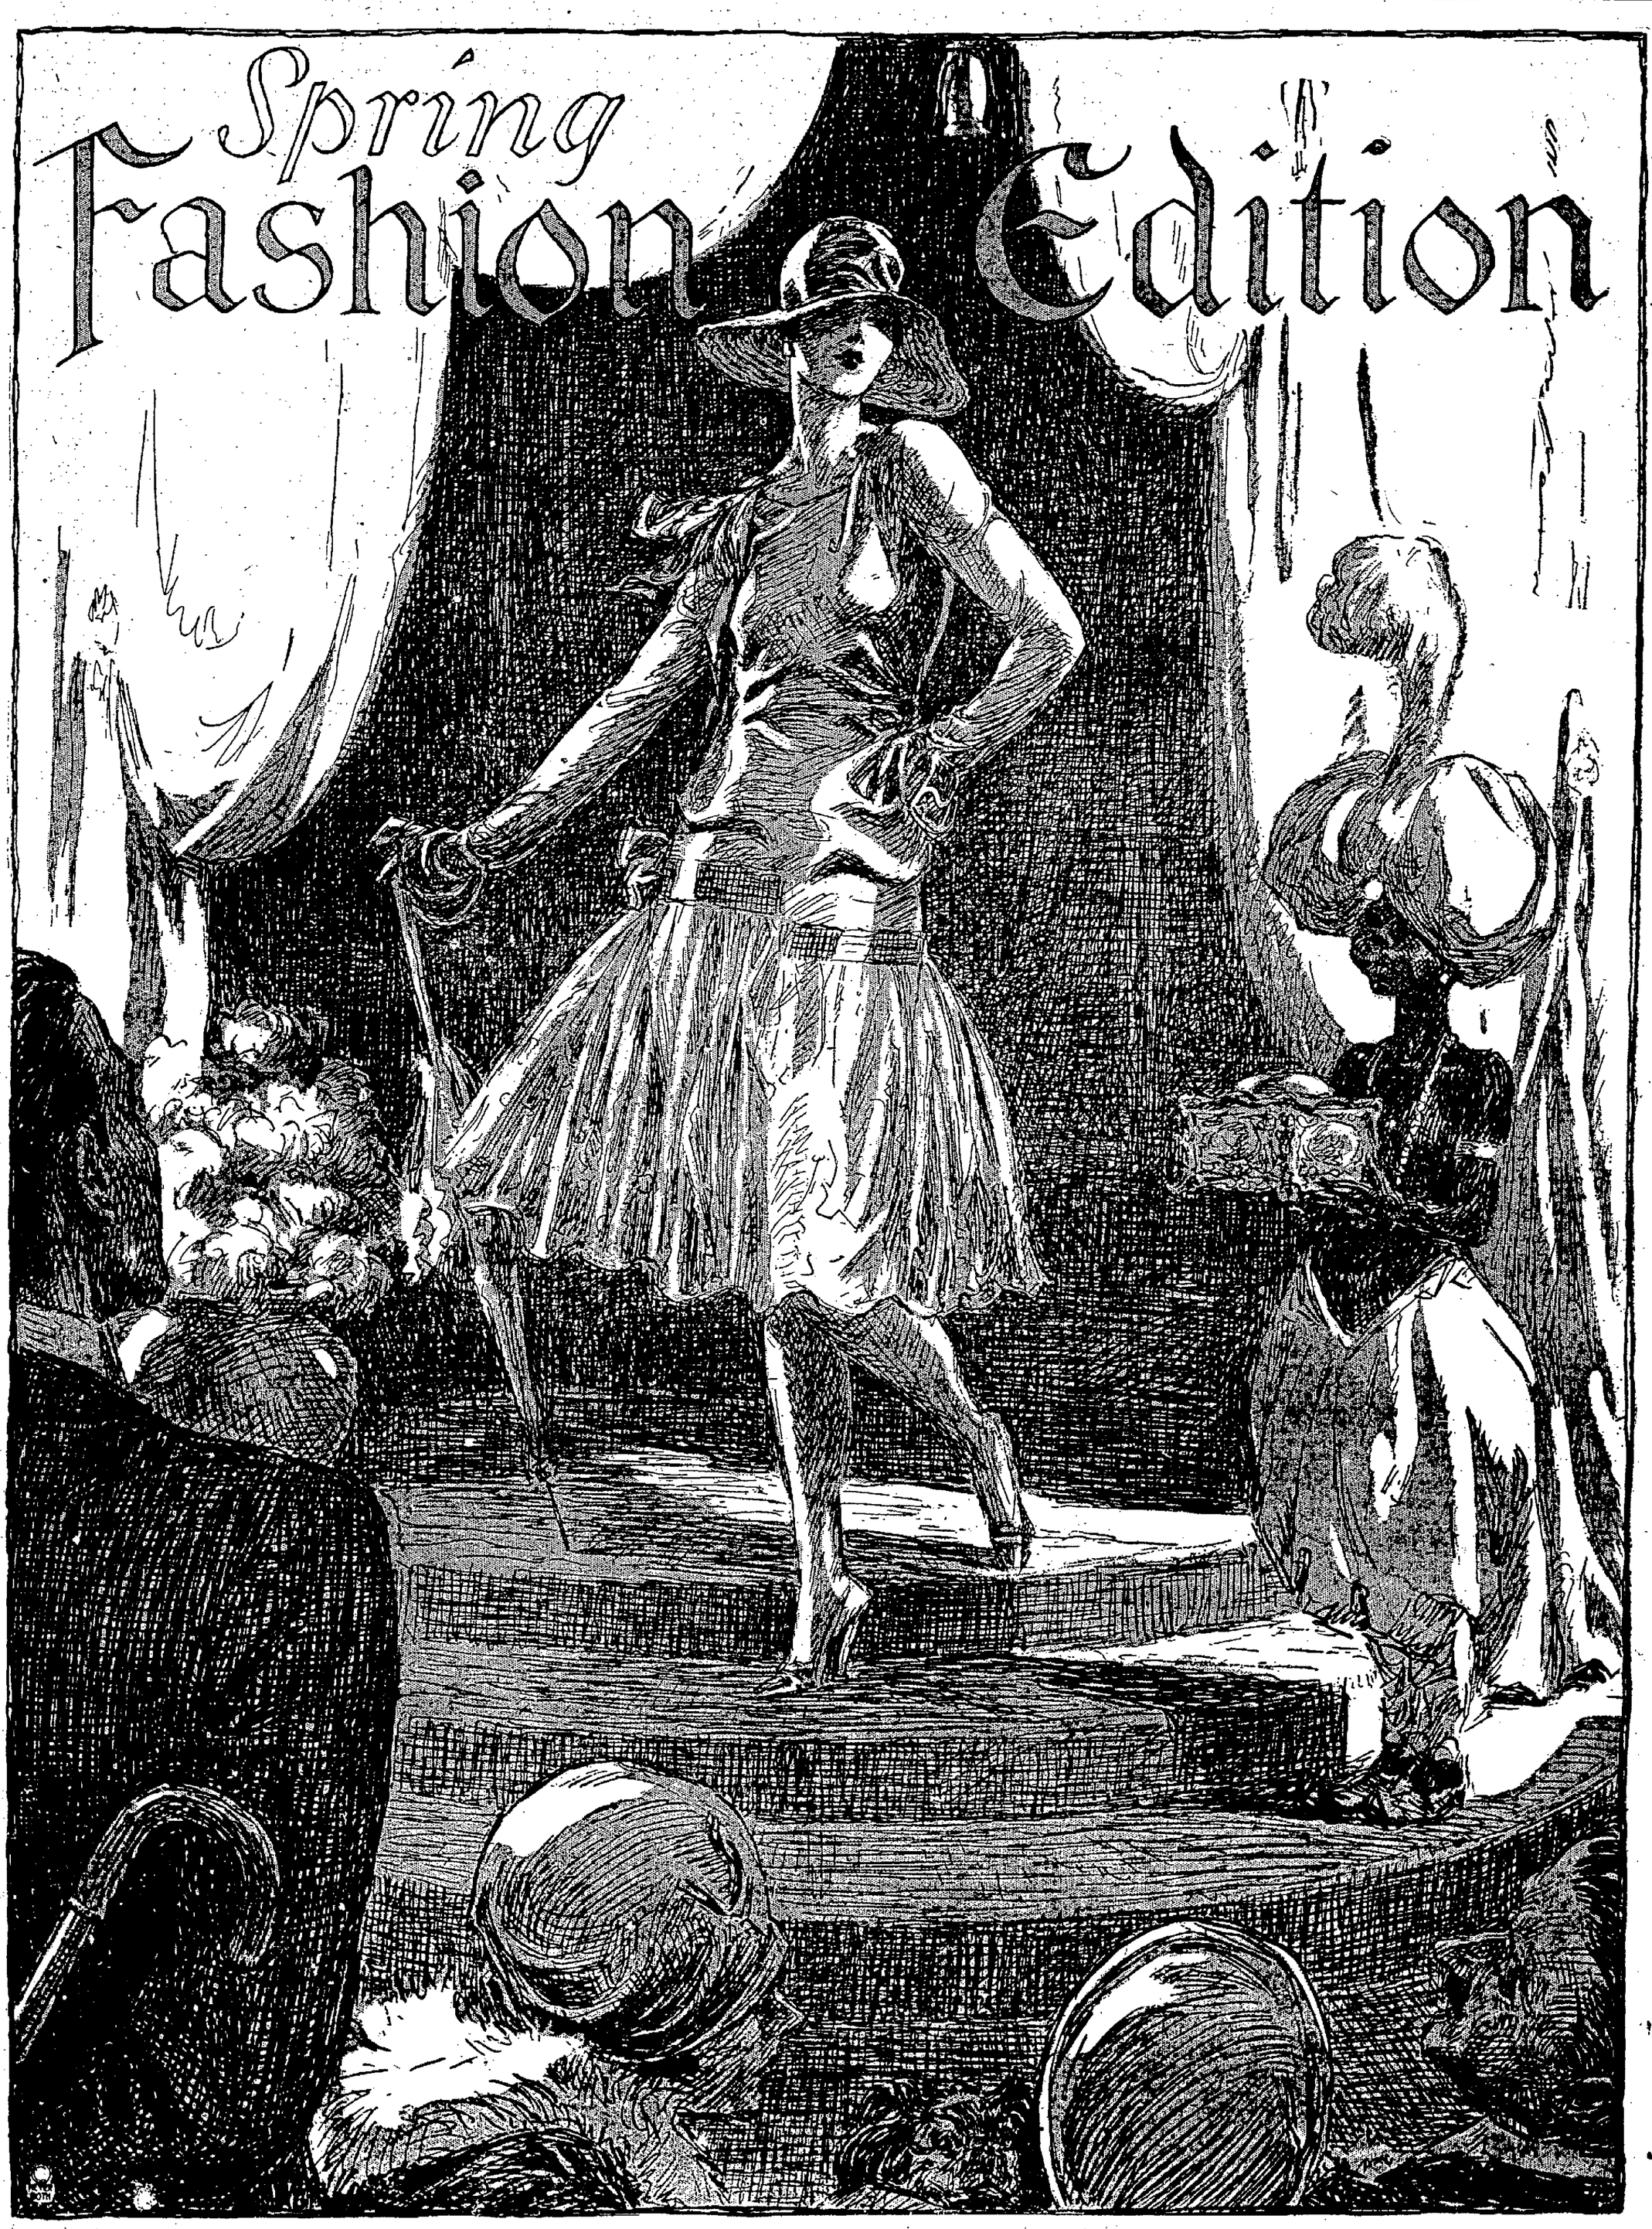
Spring Fashion Edition



NEWSPAPERARCHIVE®

BY ROSE ANN BOLGER.

Fashions for youth and youthful fashions! This we note in the new modes for spring. Skirts remain short, the most popular silhouette is slim—there's an absence of elaboration and simplicity that is youth's!

There's a new animation in the clothes "they are showing" this spring and it's very evident that the new modes know no age. For all of them have that elusive charm that is youth!

Two Distinct Silhouettes.

One of these silhouettes shows broad shoulders with loose lines in the upper half of the figure and straight and slim in the lower. The other shows princess lines in slim fitted effects that curve to the figure. The fullness above the waist—(the former silhouette is much the more popular) — is achieved in bloused treatments and the bloused movement is very definitely expressed.

The bloused idea is evident, too, in the bolero effects, in which there seems no abatement in popularity. The bolero in the newest frocks stands away from the blouse and contrasts with the slender straightness of the skirt.

The Normal Waistline.

Much has been said, heard and written about the tendency toward a return to the normal waistline and in the models for spring wear there are many examples of the normal placement or a suggestion thereof.

Many dresses give evidence of this mounting line by the use of two belts, one at the normal waistline—the other a trifle lower. Seams and pin tucks are also used to show the raised waistline. Hips are slender and draped snugly.

Freedom of Motion.

The newest spring modes offer plenty of comfort in the way of fullness in the skirt as most of the skirts are either pleated in a novel way or gathered gracefully into the belt. In most instances, the skirt movement is from the side and also from the sides across the front.

We've seen the influence of the Directoire noted in many of the newest offerings for spring. It's not the strict Directoire, however, as it is modified by jabots, revers and short capes.

The Rumanian, Russian and African influences are also worthy of mention as they are really quite prominent in every type of spring costumes. In our sauntering in the shops and stores we came across many sleeveless dresses and there is evidently a tendency to return to this mode as we noted it in both evening and sports wear.

Cardigan Is New.

It has been many seasons indeed since the cardigan (short sleeveless jacket) has enjoyed such a vogue as it is experiencing this spring.

Virtually every sports costume has its accompanying cardigan in contrasting or compose theme and most of them are such gay little things that we wonder why they have been more or less forgotten for so many seasons. Especially too, when they are such comfortable things to throw about one's shoulders after an active game of tennis or so smart to wear while strutting blithely over the links.

Sports Wear Stunning.

Sportswear has taken such a firm hold on every phase of the mode that the designers this spring have laid much stress upon it. The most important sports ensemble is the four piece—coat, skirt, overblouse and sleeveless bolero or cardigan.

One of the outstanding style factors we noted in the newest sportswear was the use of two and three kinds of materials, all the same color but varying in pattern.

Three-Quarter Length Top Coat.

One we saw that was very beautiful and practical as well had a three-quarter length topcoat with bolero sides in fawn colored tweed, with a turn back collar of checked woolen in fawn and brown tones. Deep pockets of the checked woolen are big and roomy and there was a plain skirt of the tweed with an overskirt of the checked fabric.

The one-piece sleeveless dress is smart. The skirts are pleated and square and V necks are prominent. Many of the stores are showing clever little frocks for sports wear in printed silks that launder beautifully and which every woman will include in her spring wardrobe—if she would be in the mode.

The Ensemble Vogue.

The vogue of the ensemble is here to stay. That we found out very conclusively and definitely when we made a journey through the stores seeking the styles for spring.

In the ensembles for formal wear we see a marked tendency to emphasize the coat as a separate and distinct style feature. Because prints are so "good" again and because they lend themselves so beautifully in the making of the ensemble, they are used much and are a welcome relief after the sombre winter shadings.

There seems to be no end to the combinations that are used in the ensembles this spring. Truly there seems to be no limit to the possibilities of the successful ensemble. There is the matching coat and dress in which the color and fabric are similar.

Fabrics Match; Colors Differ.

On the other hand if colors match, fabrics differ. For instance, a black bengaline coat and a black georgette dress. Another we saw where the fabrics match and colors differ was in a black satin coat and a French blue satin frock.

Prints are used in entire dresses and often line the coat. Again prints are used only for a blouse. Beige seems to be the popular ensemble shade for spring, perhaps because it combines with so many colors so well and at the same time—although it is an old stand-by—is always smart. The printed dress with the plain colored coat takes precedence in the ensemble mode for spring. On the frocks for spring one sees lace used more frequently than last season. All sorts of lace are in favor both on afternoon and tailored frocks.

Suits Are Jaunty.

The feminine world is all agog over the success of the suit mode for spring. Really one's wardrobe is not complete without two suits—one, the trig little tailored type sometimes possessing no more than two skirts and the other—an ensemble for both street and afternoon wear.

The tailored suit is most popular when it has a tuxedo jacket with velvet collar and has braid bound edges. Another suit model that is really very new and seems much in demand has a hip length, straight sack coat, shawl collar, one button closing and a cut-away front.

The skirts on these tailored suits are either plain or pleated and on several of the newest suits we saw two skirts, one of striped material and the other plain to match the coat. There is much contrast in color and fabric between the coat and skirt and important details of the suit mode are pleatings, tuckings, cordings, ties, bolero backs, yokes and belts.

Blouses Stage a Comeback.

Because of the skirt and jacket vogue that is being accepted so universally and gladly this spring, the separate blouse is coming into its own again.

Black and black with white is an important spring combination; white alone, gray, blues, greens, brown and tan mixtures and reds in the brighter tones.

All in all, the mode for spring is a very fascinating one with its new silhouettes, new fabrics and new fashion whims!

Back to the Knicker Days in Clothes for Boys

Fashions in boy's apparel have undergone a complete right-about-face this year Temporarily, at least, boys' clothing has ceased to mirror dad's and no longer will the young fellow of the house look like a junior edition of his father.

The young boy this year goes back into the knickers of several years ago —the knickers being cut full and roomy, with a decided bloused effect Long trousers for the young lads are taboo. Apparently the parents this year will allow their children to appear as children

Knickers for Younger Boys.

Two-trouser suits will be very popular, naturally, as from a standpoint of economy they make a big appeal to parents' purses Both pairs of trousers, however, will be knickers, or in some cases, one pair of knickers and one pair of long trousers The larger boys, of high school age, will wear long trouser suits, of course.

The coats to this year's suits are very much like the men's — the most popular being high-cut, three-button models, in single-breasted styles In blue serge suits there will as always, be some double-breasted coats shown —although not as many as heretofore

Just as men's clothes are employing lighter colors, so will the boy's apparel use lighter shades than last year

Plenty of Grays to Be Worn.

Grays will be worn a whole lot, while tans, light browns and the light mixtures will enjoy an unprecedented vogue

The usual fabrics, cheviots, tweeds, worsteds, herringbones, homespuns and serges will be staple favorites, with fancy mixtures following closely behind

White flannel trousers with blue coats will be in evidence to a certain extent—although they will not be strongly featured This style is usually suitable for Florida, California, etc., and is not so popular inland.

The smaller chaps, appearel follows practically the same style idea as the clothing for the older boys; chief among this year's changes is the final dismissal of the long trouser idea, and the almost complete elimination of the "cunning little vest" so favored last season

Boy's accessories—shoes, furnishings, hats, etc, have undergone very slight changes—nothing particularly new being shown, with the exception of shirts having extremely long peaks on the collars, and pajamas being shown in a dazzling variety of unusually light colors and fancy patterns These are the only innovations for you thus far recorded.

Many and Varied are the Fabrics for Spring

She who would clothe herself in the real om fashionable fabrics will not find much difficulty in selecting what would be correct for spring because the field from which she may choose is wide and varied indeed.

For early Spring wear, cashmeres homespuns, tweeds, wool crepes, broadcloths and wool jersey are most prominent among the wool fabrics

Basket Weaves Liked

There is a very general demand among women everywhere for all the loose basket weaves In these mixed colors hold a strong position For coats for afternoon and sports wear, velveteens in sft colors are in demand Poplin in silk and wool mixtures is also registered among the popular materials for Spring

Prints take first place in silks In this group, one may choose from crepe de chine chiffon georgette, marocain, satin and Shantung and feel certain that whichever or how many of these she chooses she will choose correctly

Designs in Prints

The prints are shown in small closely spaced all-over floral or geometric patterns, in pin check designs in spot patterns and in striped and plaid effects

According to all reports, taffetas are enjoying an enviable place among the new spring fabrics and are already assured of success Plaids and pin check designs in light colors and supple qualities are in favor

Voiles To Be Used.

Linens in both sheer and heavy weaves are good and voiles are very prominent in printed patterns simulating silk fabrics

The most outstanding colors for spring are black and white combined blue in all the bright shades, yellow for sports and evening wear and red in all the brighter shades of geranium

It has a great deal of sensuous appeal, and it seems remarkably sincere — an unusual thing inhigh school poetry;—but the chief thing we value it for is the mood of vastness it creates. You are to be complimented on the excellence of your pupil's style."

COLOR COMBINATIONS. USE FINE TUCKS.

Fine tucks are being employed on quite heavy wool coats as well as on frocks. Tucks at the shoulder, usually taken up on the under side of the frock are used to soften the body and require no comment.

JACKET FROCK POPULAR.

Attention is called to the continued popularity of the jacket frock and to the newer expressions of this mode for summer in terms of a chiffon frock and sleeveless lace jacket, bound in the silk. For sports wear bright colors are contrasted in flat crepe, such as scarlet and white, and the sleeveless jacket is again underscored.

JABOTS INTRODUCED.

Jabots frequently are introduced on the softer models in pleated or two-tone effects, one of the latter combining peach and green. Skirt fulness is sometimes massed in front, but more often it is concentrated at one side, especially on the flowered chiffon frocks which are further enlivened by bows of the fabric or of velvet ribbon.

Smartly Sophisticated

In the smartest frocks of spring one notes an air of sophisticated simplicity—that deft touch in fashioning and trimming which we express as "just enough."

Women of good taste, who prefer such styles, avoiding always the extreme and bizarre, will find much to their liking in richness and restraint of our spring shoes

Head foremost in Every Fashionable Spring Wardrobe

It's Spring; And time for a new hat!

After the manner of their French sister, American women throughout the land are selecting their hats first and then blending their costumes around them.

We've found it quite, the logical way and the most satisfactory, too, since we women know the trials and tribulations that beset us once we hie ourselves off on a hunt for a chapeau to match a certain frock. Especially now that we know how much more simple it is to find a frock that matches a hat!

Crowns Are Draped.

The first and most important millinery news we have to report is that the extremely high crown is slowly but surely coming down and is collapsing to head fitting sizes—or the more rounded proportions of a year ago. The crowns of the French imports, landing on our shoes daily, show very definitely this preference.

In the highways of millinery fashions, one sees no lessening in the draped effect. The truth is that in most of the new hats we see more of it but it is less haughty, more subtle. Tucks are used in the most unbelievable places and ways but always the result is to bring the crown closer the head.

Brims Are Important.

Brims, brims, brims! How important they are this spring! And what a simple matter it will be for most women to select a hat that will be becoming to them this season—something we must admit it was difficult to do for the last two seasons at least.

Brims of the cloche type have been so good for such a long time and many women discovered that they weren't the most flattering to their particular types of beauty. But this spring we have all sorts of brims—thank Paris!

Considerable recognition is given the off-the-face brim in many of the newest French imports and, of course, they have already had a decided influence over the hats that are being shown all over the country today.

One we saw of this off-the-face type that is so youthful and becoming to many faces, was a clever little model of straw simulating linen with a crown of rose sisal and a brim of the same straw in beige. The crown was crushed and fit the head snugly

Another new brim we noted in a little felt hat was narrow in back and wider in front and turned down all the way 'round. Brims, as yet, however, are small.

Crochet Is Pleasing.

There seems to be no especially new straw and none which pleases more than crochet. Bangkok, supple coarse straws are used with much success. Narrow straw braids in sombre effects are seen in some of the smartest little hats.

Satin and grosgrain ribbon are used for the entire shapes of many of spring's most successful models. Satin and straw combinations are one of the highlights of the spring hat mode. Felts—always it seems there will be felts. We just can't seem to be able to get away from them entirely.

The crowns of the felt hats are dented and they are trimmed with very wide band of grosgrain ribbon, contrasting in color and used as a basis for a jeweled pin.

Trimmings Are Stubtle.

There seems to be no more trimming than heretofore, rather more care in making and ingenuity on the part of the designer. Metal plaques and buckles are mostly bright colored and a bit modernistic. Feather trims are either pompoms of crosse or tiny pastel tinted flowers. Flowers are likewise mostly large bunches at either side.

Milan and leghorn is used in the big hat which promises to be very good for late spring wear. No woman will consider herself well "hat-fitted" this season unless she has at least one type of straw body hat. And always she will prefer the small hat!

HASTINGS NOTES

"Sweethearts," a light opera in two acts, wirtten by Victor Herbert, will be presented by the Troubadours in twelve Nebraska towns besides Hastings during the two weeks trip, March 28 to April 9. The tour will be made in two large motor buses and a two and one-half ton truck will carry the special scenery and equipment. A special ten piece orchestra will accompany the chorus of 39 voice. The itinerary for the tour includes:

Broken Bow, March 28.
Ravenna, March 29.
Lexington, March 30.
Gothenburg, March 31.
McCook, April 1.
Holdrege, April 2.
Central City, April 4.
Norfolk, April 5.
Fremont, April 6.
Beatrice April 7.
Fairbury, April 8.
Superior, April 9.
Hastings, April 11.

The college Y. M. C. A. gospel team conducted the services in the First Methodist church of Cowles Sunday night. The men who composed the team are: Herbert Wood, North Platte; Thomas Mercer, Pleaston, O.; Herman Lenser, Hildreth; Franklin LeBar, Bennet; and Lyle Ashby, Herschel Jones, Merwin Foote, of Hastings. The main theme of the evening was "Self."

Dr. George E. White, a member of the first faculty of Hastings college and who has been teaching at Anatolia college in Asia Minor, was the speaker at the senior recognition day program, Saturday. Sterling Harris, president of the senior class, presented the key, symbolic of authority, to Otis Millen, president of the junior class.

The final round of the girls' basketball tournament was played Monday morning. The freshmen girls defeated the combined junior-senior team, 33 to 14. This makes the freshmen the champions as they defeated the sophomores last week.

A special debate team defeated the Hebron college team Tuesday night at Hebron, 3 to 0. The Hastings team was composed of Roland Propst, Geneva; Dorothy Daul, Elm Creek; and Louis French, Hastings. The question for debate was, "Resolved. That the McNary-Haugen bill should be made a federal law."

Roland Propst of Geneva won the extemporaneous speaking contest held at the college Wednesday night. The general topic was "Modern Intolerance," and the speakers were given an hour to prepare a speech on one of the phases of this subject. The winner will represented Hastings college at the provincial subject. The winner will represent Hastings at the provincial Pi Kappa Delta convention to be held at Hastings, March 24, 25, and 26. Those taking part and the subjects assigned to them were:

Roland Propst, Geneva—Racial Prejudice.
Louis French, Hastings—Political Preiudice.
Paul Travis, Loup City— Anti Foreign Prejudice.
Edger Leafdale, Hastings—Sectional Prejudice.

"Mrs. Temple's Telegram," a farce in three acts, is to be given by the Chi Psi and Tri Gam literary societies, at their open house on April 25. The play will be directed by John Grassey, professor at the college. Members of the cast are: Laurel Lewis, Osceola; Philip Mergler, Osborne, Kas.; Otis Millen, Hastings, Roland Propst, Geneva; Bruce Snyder, North Platte; Lavauwn Lewis, Gothenburg; Joyce Hanks, Hastings; Wilma Rutherford, Hastings; Katherine Fisher, Broken Bow.

JUMPERS FOR AFTERNOON.

The two-piece jumper frock becomes a dainty afternoon dress when developed in chiffon and simply trimmed with borders of pintucking. One model comprises a jumper of alternate tan-and-blue bands, closely tucked, and a pleated two-tier skirt of plain blue.

Color Combinations.

Compose and shaded colors. The combination of several colors or the whole gamut of shades of one color is the most important color note of the year. Shades of pink, or orange, or violet, or green or blue are used with deep fringe for evening. Two shades of faded rose with dark red, of sea blue with pastel pink, of lemon, chartreuse and green blue are combined for evening. The red shades have quite a new look when these two are used together in sherry or Madeira tones and in subdued grape shades of Tokayd or Malaga. Three blues, from a midnight to a slightly gray sky blue, make an excellent combination in street clothes and pale rose with a pinkish red of Malaga grape is new for evening. Compose hats with contrasting crowns and brims are new.

"Heel-Toe—and away we go—" IN THE FASHION PARADE OF MEN'S FOOTWEAR

This article is being written right after the close of the National Shoe Retailers' convention in Chicago. And out of the tremendous number of styles that bombarded one's vision, there were three innovations fired at constantly, both in the exhibits and on the runway. This is the Big Three in men's shoes for Spring—narrower toes, higher heels and brighter colors.

The reason for the narrowed toe follows somewhat the trend in mens trouser bottoms. The balloons, that reached their peak in the Oxford bags, have attained the heights of popularity and are descending, or rather decreasing in width. And harmony, thefir sta xiom in smart dress, decrees that toes conform to these movements.

Narrower Toes the Vogue.

Again, the custom built shoe has always been distinguished by its narrowed toe. And with this type of shoe being a style criterion, it is easy to account for this latest trend.

But by no means, has the balloon toe become an outcast! It will still be seen, but much of its dogginess will be replaced by simpler, smarter lines.

And now for the heels! This is what you may call an upstanding movement in the trade. For heels on men's shoes will climb to new heights. Yea! Even as high as one and a half inches. Do not be alarmed, though, that all your shoes hereafter will be of such stilt-like heights. The ordinary heel will prevail—but— if you want to be ahead or rather higher, in the style scale, your heels should assume an aviator's complex and rise. Some manufacturers have created an appearance of added height by building a somewhat narrower heel.

Lighter Shades Favored

Here's the outspoken member of the Big Three—Color! Light shades of tan, rich ox-blood reds and a lot of crosses increase the color scale in men's shoes. And the zoologically inclined man will argue this is natural. For in the animal kingdom, the male is the brightest of the sex.

But even with this tremendous import of new shades, black shoes are gaining more prononunced popularity. After six o'clock of course, you will want to wear nothing but black shoes. And during businesss hours, the more conservative man will adhere to the same color.

And so you have here, the most important movement in men's shoes for dress and business wear. In the sporting division, brightness of color and contrasting trims become more pronounced. Combinations of tan and white and of black and white have paced over many a golf course in the past seasons. This summer will see many more of them. Soles will be of rubber, crepe or leather and some will have spikes attached to them.

Proper Weights for Seasons.

Another movement that is getting wide spread publicity, and which is to be commended, is that of wearing shoes to conform to the season. Summer-weights for the summer season and heavier or winter-weights for the cold weather.

For formal dress wear, the light weight plain toe oxford with medium and brogue lasts of patent leather will be the thing. Heels are of leather and are closely trimmed.

As usual at such shows, many novelties were desplayed. Brass eyelets, punchings, stitchings and embossings were exhibited by many manufacturers. And the fancy braid shoelace was seen quite frequently.

From this maze of style information some confusion may be caused in your mind, but take this little hint. Rely on your shoe merchant. Nearly every one was present at the last big convention and with the accurate style program presented them they have a definite idea of what you will need to keep stepping along in the style parade.

SWEATERS THE RAGE.

Sweaters are apparently the rage, Never have so many houses offered them. Horizontal stripes and bandings, show no signs of diminishing in popularity, but are dangerous to any but a perpendicular figure. Good color combinations based on dark blue, are blue and biege, blue and gray, blue and white, blue and red, blue and citron yello, or blue and lighter blue.

DISTINCTIVE FOOTWEAR FOR WOMEN

For Her Who Would A Sporting Go

Whether you "go in for sports" or not, it matters little so far as sport clothes are concerned. For the world of sports clothes is a wide and varied one and no one nowadays would think of not including a few sports dresses and sports outfits in her wardrobe any time of the year.

So important has been the influence of sports on the mode that we see its reaction even in clothes for evening.

Compose Themes Stressed.

In all the new sports things for spring we see a decided use of compose themes—which are nothing else but the use of two and three shades of one color in a frock or a costume.

Black and white is a great favorite and shades of rose and beige are much in prominence as "the" colors for spring. Often one sees a blouse or a jacket of one shade and the skirt of a darker tone or vice versa. But always the compose theme is evident.

Materials Important.

Jersey—the old reliable—is again seen in many of the smartest sports modes. Other materials include knitted construction, wool crepe, crepe de chine, silk faille and many others.

Despite all sorts of predictions—pro and con—the two-piece frock still holds first place in all sportswear outfits. There is no denying the freedom of the two-piece frock and often this spring we see three-piece ensembles, consisting of a two-piece dress and a short jacket for the more active sports or the more formal full legth coat for the woman who would rather be numbered among the spectators than the participants.

All the stores and shops are showing lovely things in fabric combinations such as kasha with flat crepe or knitted fabric, sometimes made more fascinating by the use of clever woven metal thread.

Coat Still Important.

Women everywhere are happy to know that in that matter of sports ensembles, the coat retains all of is former importance. On all the smart links and country club verandas this spring we'll see clever verandas this spring we'll see clever variations of the four-piece mode—skirt, blouse, sleeveless bolero and full length cat.

Everywhere the importance of the cardigan (meaning a jacket of knitted fabric with or without sleeves) is noted. The cardigan is often of cashmere and the skirt of homespun. There is something very stunning as you well know, about black and white together and this combination is seen in all sorts of ways on many of the smartest spring sports encembles and frock.

Silk Weaves Shown.

Silk weaves in lovely colors often "make" a frock especially where the compose theme is used. In our "Spring Fashion Hunt," we saw one lovely little two-piece frock of queen blue flat crepe with a double decorative effect on the skirt in sunburst pleats of darker tone.

Some of the smartest conceptions of the sports mode are the little-one piece sleeveless affairs with saucy pleated skirts and becoming square or V neck. Mostly these are in attractive printed tub silk in checked or floral designs or in plain white or colors.

Sleeves are also prominently minus in most of the little jackets either bolero or otherwise that are one of the newest notes for spring. We might even call them vests. They are stunning in bright shades of velveteen for wear with crepe or jersey sports dresses.

Sportwear More Gay.

We notice, too that clothes for wear at sport or otherwise are more frivolous, more gay—often we see draping in the way of novelty scarf, draped girdle and tie sash. Handkerchief trimming for the neck is much in vogue again.

Day by day in every way pleating is gaining in favor for dresses of every type—but never do we see it used to more charming advantage than in the newest spring sports frocks.

Both fine and wide pleating—but always there must be pleating in the skirt; sleeves are set-in, yoged or saddle shoulder treatments. Deep yoke effects, bolero and bloused bodices, sailor collars and bow tying yokes, collars and belts are noteworthy details of the sports dresses.

VIOLETS ARE WORN.

Many women are wearing hats trimmed with a bunch of violets at the side, together with violets at the shoulder.

"THEY ARE WEARING"

Many sweaters.

White slip-on gloves and novelty shoes involving white and color.

Much crystal embroidery for evening.

Laces also, but still a sea of spangles.

A black chiffon flower as the only touch of contrast in several evening gowns.

Spangled and beaded dresses in tonal effects.

Extremely lowback decolletage, with either a jeweled strap or a knotted arrangement of the material, with long ends.

A great deal of white.

A heavy gold dress over a slip made of wide horizontal pastel bands.

The robe de style in taffeta and lace.

WHITE CREPE SKIRTS.

Palm Beach — A new note was struck in spring fashions here recently when several smart women appeared wearing finely pleated white crepe skirts with jumper tops of gay-printed crepes in bright colors, gree and black, blue and green, red and blue and orange and blue among the combinations seen. Hats in tones matching one of the colors were worn, the omni-present milan with grosgrain band being the accepted type.

TROPICAL SNAKE SKINS.

A San Francisco import house now is negotiating with various interests for the distribution of tropical snake skins to be used in the manufacture of shoes, bags and other articles. Large quantities of these skins are coming through the Pacific coast port and it is believed that a ready market will be found.

PERMANENT

A marcel won't last a minute when the wild winds blow. Then you'll appreciate having "natural" curly hair. Comb it, it falls back into place. Take it to a party in the rain? It only looks the better for damp weather—that is if you get your permanent wave at Mrs. Tripp's Wave Shoppe just south of O on 14th street. Mrs. Tripp uses Nestle's Circuline method and the result is a flat natural wave. Nor is the right kind of a permanent harmful. COLOR Sets the Pace in Spring Footwear

The glint of the robin—the glint of spring sunshine—is reflected in the fascinating new footwear for the spring of 1927.

The modes for new costumes are brilliant with color and shoes carry out their duty religiously as fitting complements to the mode of color Never have we seen such a lovely array of flattering colors in footwear as the shops are showing this spring.

From Nature's own palette come dainty youthful shades with such charming and alluring names as pastelle parchment, stone, rose blush, shell gray, stroller tan and hampstead brown These and many more you'll find—all subtle, beautiful . . . exquisite.

It really wasn't so very long ago, as you probably remember, when shoes were built to be practical—"to stand the gaff." Today we find them practical, of course, but always they must be and are, beautiful—and youthful.

And thanks to the designers who are constantly and forever seeking new effects, new materials, new designs . . . beautiful shoes are now within the reach of every woman in America. Truly we have never seen such lovely footwear—priced so interestingly, too, when they are so beautiful—as the stores are now showing.

Materials and Combinations.

It is quite apparent that the most popular materials are patent leather and kid. Reptile skin is shown plentifully in sports shoes and of course, satin is always good for dressier occasions. The patent and kids are trimmed with novelty leathers and reptilian effects and are stunning and flattering to any foot

One combination that particularly caught our eye and seemed a very smart bit of originality on the part of the designer was of pastel parchment with cherry patent kid trim, high of heel and with a single strap.

Shell Grey Kid Used.

Another was shell grey kid with the new gingham kid, another gunmetal patent trimmed with black patent with a high spike heel, one strap and cut down at the sides. We saw many more, too—all equally interesting from a standpoint of unusual leather and color combinations and many more we expect to see for this is the day of originality of design, glorious materials and clever craftsmanship!

She walks in beauty and steps in Fashion in this spring's various styles offered for her approval—strap effects, open tie effects, oxford effects and a few gore and step-in effects. A wide range to be sure.

One-Strap Still Good.

It appears that the tie has arrived as a dominant spring factor, but it is doubtful if the popular one-strap will ever have to give up its place for this newer mode Plain strap pumps will always hold a place in the heart of the woman whose foot is larger than she would wish it as there is grace and beauty and a tendency to make the foot appear smaller in a plain pump

—all in red Monograms on bags are still very good On shopping bags, they are very large in gold, silver or enamel and again we see combinations of crystal and black enamel

For more formal wear, bags are of brocade in pouch shape, hung from gorgeous jeweled frames. Jeweled envelope purses are also smart for evening.

Accessories "They Are Wearing" This Spring

A trip through the stores these days will convince you that never have the accessories for the feminine wardrobe been so beautiful, so exotic, so exquisite.

All those little "doo-dads" so dear to the heart of every woman and so important to her costume if she would be faultlessly correct and well dressed, you'll find in endless array.

Little Things Count.

"It's the little things that count" is the rule of the well dressed woman this spring and an entire frock may be "made" by such a small thing as a belt

And speaking of belts, be it known that this little acessory—for so many years regarded as simple something to outline the hips—has become so important that we're going to begin our little story with jus what is correct in the "belt line" this spring.

Here are some "belt details", Suede belts in combinations with gold or silver kid, applied in patterns and pulled through or pleated are god Favored colors are almond green, ashes of roses, henna, Spanish raisin, French blue and gray Small leather belts are fashionable in lizarddine, snake or sharkskin simulations

Gold jewelry is still very much in vogue We see it in bangles, slave bracelets, in earrings, buttons and belt fastenings Pearls are still the most popular jewelry for the neck, both for daytime and evening wear

Showing Dainty Cuffs.

Be it the blove novelty cuff or slipon, decoration is very important. The stores are showing dainty cuffs of tiny rose-buds and another smart glove has leaves of red and green kid appliqued Reminiscent of the quaint old-fashioned sampler is the embroidery on the cuff of a silk glove

Polka dots of varied colors are effectively used on a biege capeskin model. On a certain slip-on glove there is an insert of petit point. Materials are suede and anatelope, kid, and leather, Champagne tones are most in demand nd beige, white, tan and black are good.

"Around Her Neck."

She'll wear dainty collars of lace, ruffled net, georgette and organdie Collarf and cuff sets are very important and most of them are tailored. Sailor collars and cravats are used in all widths and in all fabrics Jabots and yokes are stressed

Last, but not least, are the bags for spring For all the talk about "frivolous wonmankind," she knows that for shopping her bag must be practical and so we see the simple leather bag holding the very highest position in the bag mode. These are shown in ample pouch shapes or in envelope style with a back strap

Others are of shirred leather in large boat shapes and flat square bags are much in evidence One and two-tone combinations of pigskin, alligator and brilliant colored morocco leathers are used Two leather combinations are favored, too, such as kid with suede

These Colors Are Desired.

Fashionable colors are green, blue and tan Red is used more as a trimming on black or navy, although we've seen some clever bags

Tendencies and Taste in the Interior

By Marjorie Howe Dixon

You might not believe it possible that this question was asked in all seriousness, "What is the newest thing in antiques?"

It is sad, and a bit disconcerting, just when you've learned to identify a Currier and Ives print, and have absorbed some of the enthusiasm of the collector to find that some one has gone to the trouble of writing a lengthy magazine article to the effect that a Currier and Ives print is in atrocious taste, and closely akin to former bulbous chromes issued with calendars by the local grocer.

For fads and fancies come and go with the collector of antiques as with the fashion of your home and its decoration.

An Old English Room.

It is a far cry between the austere simplicity of a Colonial room in the New England style—pioneer days, and the muchly be-ruffled Victorian interior, with its abundance of ribbons and sashes, and tidies and cushions. A new arrangement struck a happy medium and called itself just "an old English room." It omitted many of the Victorian flouncings and yet was cozy looking. Its cushioned seats were much more restful to tired bones than are the prim Colonial chairs and settees.

The fireplace was quite properly the center of interest on one wall, and was treated with utmost simplicity. An old portrait in a black frame hung above it with a pair of old rose Chinese jars with lids, on the mantle shelf. At its foot lay a hooked rug. Either side the walls were covered with bookshelves.

Tapestry of Books.

Book shelves can be as dull as dull—or they can be utterly fascinating. An unconventional arrangement made these quite joyful to behold. The colors of the books were delightfully mixed, and then there were gaps. How terrible to the precise person! Yes—an empty place here and there, sometimes filled with a Buddha—sometimes holding a trailing ivy plant. Did you ever think of a tapestry of books? These shelves presented such a colorful fabric with ivy for the grace of folds.

Divans, with their fat cushions down filled and covered with glazed chintz invited one to rest before the hearth. And then to make one's book more enjoyable, there were small tables with lamps conveniently placed, shedding their soft light.

Old Fashioned Desk.

Across the room, an important looking old-fashioned desk reigned serenely. It had its groupings of large chairs deeply cushioned and its lamp too. The last was made of a green glass bottle vase shaped—filled with water. Why water? Well, why not? It deepened the tone of the green and with its faint movement, now and then, added a tiny stir of charm to the room.

Green glazed chintz curtains completed this room with cream net close to the glass. An air of hospitality, of comfort, of easy informality, those qualities so hard to obtain, made this a room of distinction.

Rose Colored Drapes.

Twin beds in one wild flower room made two youngsters happy. It is not related whether they fought over the chaise longue with its quilted rose coverlet or not (for sisters sometimes have slight disagreements) and with a delightful painted secretary, they might both feel inspired to write letters at the same time. That would be tragic. Rose colored drapes filled the windows over net glass curtains. And on the walls were adorable old color prints of wild flowers, below them stilted lettering, laboring with their unwieldy Latin names.

Sometimes an artist has a try at designing children's furniture—and the results are usually charming. Imagine round chairs—really round, all made of rattan and a round cradle. Imagine a covered bed with its French hanging. And do contemplate a toy cabinet with open shelves above, coming to a peak—and a cupboard for the "hurry-up" times below.

Early American Room.

An early American room felt the shelving influence and broke out with the most original ideas. One shelf all across the window top wore a pongee ruffle edged with red. Another shelf covered with an old fashioned pattern in oil cloth held pots of geraniums, in a sunny window. And inside the curtains were more shelves. Of necessity these were narrow and each held a pretty bit of pottery or pewter. Maple furniture, ladder backed chairs, a drop-leaf table, a settee—these were all in keeping with one's ancestors' early days.

French Room Attractive.

Not so simple or severe, but equally attractive is a little French room. A figured carpet, and a flowered pattern in net for curtains harmonize pleasantly. Screens are used so often for decorative backgrounds and this room had a smart one, original in treatment. It was covered with stiff looking prints of buildings cream tinted and covered with shellac. In front of the screen stood an inviting arm chair with a lamp at hand and a tiny tea table. The tea table had a glass top on which stood a set of old French china.

To fit in modern schemes of decorations are many beautiful rugs. Copies of old Spanish rugs have been made to fit in the vogue for Spanish interiors. Gayly patterned modern rugs are pretty for sun porches and breakfast rooms. Hooked rugs are of great interest—whether antique ones to fit in with early American interiors, or modern ones made by the housewife herself, in a renewal of old time craft.

Chinese rugs fit in admirably almost anywhere. Their patterns indicate reserve both in color and design, and their quality is of the finest. A room need not be at all Oriental in character to use a Chinese rug most appropriately.

Spring Haberdashery sponsors Flash in Color is going to run riot in men's haberdashery this spring. If a man is so disposed he can be a bird of gay plumage, for the opportunity certainly presents itself as never before.

Almost everything will run to high colors. Shirts will be of gay hues; neckwear promises to be dazzling; intricate motifs will be shown in hosiery; handkerchiefs will flaunt their colors—and so on down the list.

With the great vogue for light and bright colored suits and topcoats, the furnishing business should be accelerated. It requires taste and judgment and a plurality of furnishings to make a harmonious ensemble.

Now we will particularize and touch only a high spot in an article of such length.

White shirts and colored shirts will be about equal favorites. Collar attached and shirts with separate matching collars will start out about evenly, but collar-attached shirts will come stronger as the season advances.

The colored shirts will be light or white of background, neatly striped or figured. The extremely long pointed collars are not so good. The medium type seems slated to rule. Neckband shirts will not be worn as extensively as in past seasons.

Ties will show a tendency toward smaller designs and figures, all-over patterned English effects. There also will be considerable demand (and this is expected to increase as the season advances) for plain colored neckwear, including vivid shades. Foulards, judging by their vogue at southern and California resorts, will be quite popular.

Golf Hose are going to swing back from the "wild" designs of yore and assume less bolsterous lines. Small geometrical motifs and more conservative color combinations and plain pastel shades are expected to be very good.

In sweaters round and V-neck styles will prevail in popular favor. Crew necks and perhaps high necks will be the preference among the younger men of perfect grooming. The lighter shaker weaves will be liked. White sweaters will be smart for sports wear.

Straight Style in Knickers.

Knickers seem to be coming in straighter and not so extreme in dimensions. There will be a notable demand for "Shetlands." There also will be plenty of homespuns, tweeds and cashmeres, and linen knickers will prevail for hot weather play.

Flannel trousers in stripe effects will continue to rule. Black stripes the new "sun-burn" effects will be preferred. Plain whites will be selected by men who desire a change from varying color.

FURNITURE FASHION FESTIVAL

Here you will find Furniture of such sound workmanship that the purchase can be considered more of an investment than an expense. Flowers that Come In the Springtime Drapes

By Marjorie Howe Dixon

"Flowers that bloom in the spring," sings a popular opera, "have nothing to do with the case."

It doesn't say about the casements, does it? Our windows and some pieces of our furniture blossom annually. A period of cultivation is necessary, of course, and the most careful planting of ruffles, and setting out in order of neat rows of pleats, with borders of fringes, with pins for stakes, to fasten the wayward rows, and one's trusty (not rusty) needle for a hoe, and a spade and a rake.

How To Select Curtains.

As to cultivation, one finds that here as in gardening, lies the initial step. There are original ideas to cultivate, and practical ones, too, and oh, so many decisions to make. Sunlight and rain in a garden are vital factors—while light, colored, plain or sunny is the chiefest thing in curtaining. The first decision to make is this.

Do you want to see out and enjoy the view, or do you want to shut out the view? A fairly opaque casement cloth will shut out the view as will pongee and some of the other materials. In many cases, where ugly walls are too close, one's desire is to let in the light but shut out offending buildings

Nets, Gauzes and Scrims.

When one lives in the country or in the suburbs, it seems a great shame to shut out the view entirely. Net curtains and gauzes and scrims will secure privacy, and yet enable one to see out. At the same time the light flowing in is tempered according to the material used.

Net curtains are arranged so that an appropriate pattern may be selected to go with the room and its period. There are simple designs for Colonial rooms and elaborate ones for the French periods, and heavily meshed nets for Spanish and Italian interiors

Introducing Warm Tones.

The color of the glass curtains has much to do with the light If you wish cool tones use gray net. Warm tones can be introduced by using cream, yellow or rose net. Herein lie great possibilities for study and careful choice.

Window drapes offer many, many opportunities for thought and for the display of one's taste. Just as muslin and small patterned chintzes do not belong in a formal room, so heavy damasks and velvets would not properly decorate a cottage bedroom What a wide range of materials there is to choose from!

Then there are the walls to consider. A large pattern in the wallpaper would demand a smaller one in the curtains or a plain or striped material. Where the wallpaper has a small or vague pattern the hangings can be as definite and vigorous as they like.

Decorating Formal Rooms.

For formal rooms, damasks and velvet and patterned taffetas are used. The services of a decorator may be necessary to decide about valances and just how and where the drapes are to be tied back. Here, as nowhere else, the colors chosen must be exactly right and the treatment of the windows in harmony with the period of the room.

Hand blocked linens and glazed chintzes are useful in the more informal living and dining rooms. Besides these there are many new fabrics, all sunfast, with silky qualities and lovely colors and patterns.

Cretonnes and small patterned chintzes are lovely in bedrooms. Then there are ruffled curtains in almost endless variety. Scrims, muslins, grenadines come made up, with tie-backs, and valances, and they are ready to hang.

Glazed Chintz Favored.

Slip covers are made in many of the materials that have been mentioned. Glazed chintz is a great favorite. It comes in plain and patterned fabrics Cretonne slip covers can be washed and kept fresh. Oil-cloth is used for porch furniture and covers the seats of some of the iron pieces. Cushions of oilcloth have many uses, for the porch, the sun parlor or the car.

The blossoming of the living room in its new and fresh curtains and the appearance of large pieces blooming with fresh slip covers is an annual event we all look forward to each year.

COOLIE COATS KIMONAS.

A group of imported Japanese coolie coats are offered as kimonos which are said to be proving popular with camp directresses. These coats are fashioned of cotton crepe gaily colored and printed in discreet designs and have the practical virtue of being fast colored.

Two-toned leatherette coats are emphasized by this outfitter both for rain wear and as an all-rounr sports coat. It is said that marine blue and soft green have been most in demand for these coats so far . The plain rather than the trench model is sponsored. One attractive coat has the second shade introduced in corduroy collar as well as in the pipings. These coats are flannel lined.

RIB-STITCH BABTHING SUITS

The rib-stitch bathing suit is fast usurping the field with the most progressive camps, who are abandoning the flat-stitch types. The two-piece suit is not regarded favorably because separate shirt and shorts mean "just one more article to get lost." Stripes have not invaded the field of camp sportswear. Pure gum rubber caps are preferred.

SOFT SHADES IN CAMP.

The new camps adopt soft rather than vivid shades for camp colors, and introduce the brighter tones in accessories. This interest in vivid colorings in ties, and the like, is also noticeable in long-established camps which introduce variation by changing the shades of the camp colors used for accessories from season to season.

LEATHERETTE RAINCOATS.

It is reported that the most exacting camps are adopting the new leatherette raincoat in place of the slicker types that have been sponsored in the past, because leatherette coats can perform the double function of general sports coat and rainy day coat. In addition, the "sticking" of the slicker is mentioned as an additional objection in damp climates.

Prunes and Prisms In a Garden

By Marjorie Howe Dixon

For a little bit of imaginative exercise, there is great grandmother's portrait to be painted in one's mind. Picture her as a girl. She would sit primly at her embroidery frame, long curls about her bent head, and murmur very softly, "Prunes and prisms"

This was to train her lips into a perfect cupid's bow, or something of the sort. At any rate, this wee maid would presently finish her stint and with a childish glad cry, would dash away from the tedious sampler, and run for the garden, to romp and play.

As she grew into gracious ladyhood, the garden would become her delight. After a bit one would see the imprint of the "prunes and prisms" there. One would glimpse that delicate precision of taste, that would know how to place a tiny stone figure in exactly the right place.

Kneels Among the Flowers.

If it were an impish stone figure, she would want it to stand in her perennial border, where it could grin at her as she knelt in her painstaking work among her lovely flowers.

Fragrance of mignonette and lavender with tiny forget-me-knots help bring this picture to mind, with winding walk and a tinkling fountain somewhere, and a handsome old urn overflowing with petunias and "love-in-a-mist"

One thinks of those days as full of a sweet leisure, in which gardens and good taste grew side by side, so that one unconsciously absorbed those gentle principles, that some have tried in vain to learn. It is not so easy to capture an old time atmosphere in, a garden, when "realism," "efficiency" and "speed" are modern shibboleths.

Sun-Dial Useful Then

Many of grandmother's favorites may still appear in our gardens, in our old fashioned flowers, and in our choice of stone pieces A sundial was really useful in her day, and is still a joy for us. Benches of stone and marble, she knew, and wisely used, where a good position would afford opportunity for rest and meditation. A bench properly placed may silently remind you of a lovely view. Sit there a while and enjoy it.

We use well-heads now purely for their decorative value, while grandmother needed hers. Yet she planted rose vines, too, and doubtless enjoyed her clear cold water, so much the more for finding a rose petal floating in it.

There is something about a garden pool that always appeals. And if one can have stone things to go with it, there one can show one's taste. A shell makes a pretty bowl for a fountain, a stone frog belongs at the edge of the pool, and in the tall shrubbery at one end, hermae may stand. You know what they are. A head, sometimes that of a satyr, tops off a tall shaft of stone. They have been called this ever since—well—long before Columbus arrived and discovered us.

Terrace Should Be Secluded.

An outdoor room brings one closer to a garden—not a glassed-in room, a real room, with the sky for a ceiling. Whether the terrace be flagged or of turf, it should supply the quiet seclusion of one's living room, with some of its comfort too.

Iron table and chairs are so fine in design and workmanship that they have grown in popularity, not only for the terrace but for the porch and sun parlor, and often stray into the front hall, as wel.

For indoor use, there are upholstered seats of damask and velvet, in the iron seats. And one may always take a mass of cushions outdoors, too.

Interesting Tops for Tables.

Small tables have fascinating tile tops, reversible tiles, laid in the rim. It would be difficult to set the tea things thereon. One's guests would be sure to want to take the tiles out and rearrange them, like a game of blocks.

Flower boxes and large urns belong on a terrace, to bring the color of flowers nearer. Boxes have always found homes on window ledges, or just below them, and they also can stand alone on stone supports. Urns always seem to go nicely with steps, standing as sentinels, and holding their contributions in bouquet form.

An oil jar is a stately joy in a garden. It wears a dignified mien, and does not invite you to trifle with it. If you should peep in and find a family of elves keeping house therein, why—you may be sure the oil jar would disclaim all responsibility. You couldn't expect it to get upset about an elf more or less. You might as well expect a chandelier to feel concerned about a cobweb.

Any well-equipped garden has its troop of elves. If you are in doubt about it, well, that is the very reason you never see them. They are very sensitive and always disappear when doubting people come around.

Troop of Elves.

No one but a band of elves would ever take the trouble to sprinkle all the spider webs with pearls of dew in the morning Now, would they? Of course, if you are going to explain that away, too why you—you just don't belong in a garden, that's all

ORCHID FELT INSETS.

A number of interesting designs are shown from the smaller makers in Paris. One of these is an orchid felt with the conventional design set in narrow strips of darker felt set around the crown and sides. The insets of contrasting felt in narrow strips are used to a large extent this season; this seems, in many cases, to be the way of introducing trimming, in the actual making of the hat itself.

WHITE SNEAKER SHOES.

In shoes, the white sneakers with crepe soles and toe-to-toe lacing is mentioned with favor. Gray trims on the white body are also proving popular. Lisle stockings are still preferred for general use and the combination of lisle stocking and wool sock is favored for hiking.

CORDUROY KNICKERS.

The sleeveless jacket which has been used in corduroy knicker suits during past seasons is rejected by several camps as being impractical. This jacket has been favored for dressier wear in the evenings, which are cool in camp districts, so that insufficient protection is offered by this type of garment. The corduroy knickers are retained but the jersey slipover is substituted for the jacket.

Here's WHAT Mr. MAN will wear this Spring

BY HARRY M. MORRISON.

Color, as in no season in the history of the Clothing industry, promises to be the greatest magnetic force in the sale of Suits and Topcoats for Spring.

When the buxom Cadillac—the conservative, staid Cadillac—blossomed forth with "500 color combinations" and registered new peaks of success, the day of color had arrived.

When conservative, tradition-tied London tailors present "lustrous cedar wood or mixtures of old plum and gold," the days of dull blacks and dead shades are gone!

Color In Everything.

When color runs riot in furniture, home furnishings and motor cars, in footwear, pajamas, underclothing and suspenders and countless other commodities, the day of color is definitely here—and color can be harnessed as a selling proposition

The lifeless blacks, drab and dull grays are not potent in their appeal Man lives not by utility alone, but is motivated by beauty, by color.

For spring the light, bright "sunburned" colors are predicted to rule

New Blends are Offered.

Tans and sand shades, browns and grays in entirely new blends, enriched with sheenful threads are prominent.

All of which promises to make this spring one of the most colorful seasons in scores of years

While color will take the spotlight, style, of course, hasn't been overlooked. The tendency in suits is toward three-button models—the looser effect. The double-breasted suits have seen their vogue. They will sell only sparely in spring—and then confined mainly to blues. This is according to salesmen's reports for the larger clothiers.

Of course, the two-button Suits the old stand-by of many years, will continue in favor with a certain class, particularly the business man.

Short Coat for Collegian.

The college type of suit, with its short, straight, boxy coat, six-button vest and wide straight trousers will continue to intrigue the younger man—and if predictions mean anything there should be an unusual sale of such Clothes For this style oxfords and blues will share favor with the "loud" strange designs.

Among the patterns herringbones are expected to prove extremely popular, especially in the wider effects. Glen Urquarharts and plaids will be in considerable demand. Stripes, while they promise to interest a great many, probably will not be as popular this season as heretofore.

"Twists" are going to enjoy a considerable headway, as are also cheviots and worsteds.

Notch Lapels Favored.

Notch lapels (square and rounded notches) will be almost unanimous favorites. "Peaks" are gradually passing out of the sartorial picture.

In top coats it is expected that the regulation button-through model will be the prime favorite, but there are indications that the fly front will be demanded in limited numbers by the younger dressers.

Another style—the raglan—is coming and coming with greater force. There seems to be a feeling in well informed quarters that Raglans will register their real success in the higher priced ranges.

Straight Tubular Models.

Most of the coats will be a trifle shorter than heretofore, with lengths from 46 to 47½ inches, with most models straight and tubular.

Tweeds, herringbones, overplaids and homespuns will hold the center of the stage and there will be a marked tendency to the brown and tan shades.

As they say in financial advertisements, these forecasts are not guaranteed, but were taken from sources that are deemed dependable.

NEW HAT STYLES.

Every now and then a sort of type hat is created and becomes the forerunner of a long line of flourishing ancestors, folded, high crowns, low brimless chapeau and many others have had their sway. Now comes the thought that the high crowns make one look old. The fine felts of spring are really rounded exactly to the shape of the head itself. Suddenly the nape of the neck has become THE important spot for trimming Funny little tabs in felt crowns coming down like a swallow tail over the shingled coiffure are very smart.

About Little Sister's Spring Wardrobe

Influenced no doubt, by the simple tailored mode of her older sister, we find the fashions for Miss Ceven to Fourteen Years characterized by tailored styling and absence of ornamentation.

Trimmings are almost entirely of fabric and the use of two and three-tone treatments are noticed on all the smart little dresses. Wool crepe and crepe de chine are the favored materials.

In wool crepe we see a decided preference in the use of blues, greens and bieges Flannel is noted, too, trimmed with linen collar and cuffs and tailored flat pari buttons.

Silk Models Tailored.

In the clever little silk models we see the influence of the tailored mode adhered to again very conspicuously. Also on most of the little dresses the use of two and three-tone color combinations is most prominent trimming.

Fabric flowers, fabric cord belts and pleatings in different arrangements carry out the fabric trimming idea that is so much in vogue for spring.

Infants' adorable little frocks for spring are shown in a wide variety of styles, from basque effects with quaint ruffled skirts to demure prints with simple smocking as their only trimming. Small patterns of soft colorings in prints are highly favored. Quaint florals, vivid dotted and futuristic designs in cotton fabrics are also used in gay little dresses.

Ruffles are seen often on dainty colored organdie which seems to be regaining favor with the smart youngest set Organdie is seen on collar and cuffs, pockets as well as belts that tie in saucy bows at the back.

New Color Creations in SPRING HATS

The most interesting news in men's hat styles this year is the striking "come-back" of the Derby! The college boys, who really are the ones who make or break styles, are enthusiastically adopting the Derby, and it therefore bids well to become popular throughout the country.

From a standpoint of appearance the Derby always held its own, to a certain extent, looking well, and apparently being a necessary adjunct for dress occasions. But not until this season has the Derby begun to be worn in such large numbers. The "brown Derby" of comic paper fame also will demand attention, although not nearly as great as its darker brother.

Snap and Curved Brims.

The felt hat of other years continues to be the leader, while sharing popularity with the Derby. Felt hats in Fedora shape, and single crease styles will be worn this year. The crowns are a trifle lower and noticeably smaller; while brims are either the snap variety or curved. Both bound and raw edges will be seen.

In regard to colors, grays, tans and browns will predominate, with a sprinkling of the ever popular blue, as well. The variety of shades or "tones" of these colors will be amazingly great, featuring the pastel shades.

Hat bands seem to have settled down into conservative ways, as there will not be enough colorful bands to be seen to amount to anything.

This Year's Straw Hats.

This year the Straw hat will make itself "felt" more strongly than ever, so great is the variety from which the particular man may make a selection. Light-weight straw hats will, of course, hold first place, the conventional sailor easily leading the field. Straw sailors will be decorated with gayly colored bands, while the straw itself will favor white, light brown and tan shades.

The "oatmeal straw" hats will be the big novelty this year. This is a rough weave hat having an "oatmeal" appearance, and coming in a variety of shapes, and several shades.

The variety of brims on straw hats will not be great, as the size seems to be pretty much standardized, being just about the same as last year, possibly a trifle narrower.

Panamas and Leghorns.

A certain percentage of men will favor the "old reliable" Panama and Leghorn hats, as most suitable to their taste. Panamas will be in the customary styles, fedora, optimo and semi-telescope, in the conventional Panama tones. Leghorn straws will be in several color effects, ranging from white to light brown.

The time honored cap will continue to hold its popularity, although there is nothing startlingly new in cap styles. The one and eight-piece models are still good, and visors are trifle wider. Rather loud patterns may be expected this season—all being especially suitable for sports and out-door wear rather than for daily use.

Silhouette of 1927.

The Silhouette of 1927 is heavy at the shoulder, narrow at the hip, straight in the skirt and bloused at the waistline. The slender hip is defined by belts or drapery and the narrow skirt is made interesting by pleats, tires, jabots and cascades. The vogue of the blouse is firmly established. The straight line from shoulder to hem is the predominating silhouette. The flare is with us in various circular movement, but the newest outline is that drawn by the deep armhole, the blouse and the narrow skirt. Simplicity has become priceless and has proved itself in the most costly of dress motifs. It is merely the foundation stone upon which milady erects, with the hat, gloves, shoes, stockings, bag, flowers and jewels a small but costly altar to the chic. It is the cardinal principle of dress.

NOVEL STRIPED CHAPEAU.

An interesting brown felt has the entire crown covered in horizontal rows about a 1-4 inch wide or rust, beige, and brown, each row outlined in a burned line to give the hat a closely striped effect. The crown is rather high and dimpled, and the brim is cut out at the front in an unusual way showing one side higher than the other. A tan-and-wood novelty straw braid is made into a turban and folds of the straw are crossed high at the front — brown exposed on one side and beige on the opposite side.

TUCKS ADD ATTRACTIVENESS.

Tucking is diversely manipulated on twill and cashmere models, suggesting bolero outlines in a few instances. Curved tucking across the back conform with a curved yoke effect, and contrasting applications of vertical and horizontal tuckings indicate a low waist.

STRAW BRAIDS IN HATS.

Many of the hats show the use of narrow straw braids sewed together for entire shapes and one of these a light blue novelty braid, has a soft brim turned up at the back, and crown applique in ribbon motifs. These motifs make us of navy, light blue, and turquoise ribbon laid in geometric pattern cleverly folded.

Anything Can Be Made To Sell For Less—But Quality Must Be Sacrificed When a Point In Price Is Gained...

YOU Lincoln people have placed your confidence in the bakeries of this city. Out of these industries comes the food which forms the greatest part of your daily diets. For years these firms have faithfully kept the trust of you patrons and it is their concern to see that you know the truth about the different qualities of bread.

Bread of high quality—bread that you would serve at each meal as a health food, to your family, must be made from the very highest quality ingredients. Lincoln bakeries have set a standard of quality for their bread which is as near perfection as modern science can come. They have priced their product, according to the cost of production, at an economical figure.

This price has been standardized and nowhere can bread of equal quality be made for less money. If you are offered a loaf of bread for a cheaper price you may feel assured that you are getting a cheaper loaf of bread, and a cheaper bread will not contain the nourishing food value that is necessary to proper growth and good health.

Live up to your reputation of demanding the best! Let no one mislead you into buying an inferior loaf of bread. Give your family the utmost in nourishment and quality. When you buy bread from one of the firms listed below you are assured of getting bread of high quality. These firms are using the finest ingredients in the production of their bread and never will they sacrifice the quality to gain a point in price.
